First three English books on America; chiefly translations, compilations, &c. by Richard Eden from the writings, maps, &c. of Pietro Martire of Anghiera, Sebastian Münster and Sebastian Cabot, with extracts from the works of other Spanish, Italian and German writers of the time. 1895 ..... qr970 A66

Contents: Of the newe landes and of ye people founde by the messengers of the kynge of Portyngale, named Emanuel; Of the x dyuers nacyons crystened; Of Pope Iohn and his landes and of the costely keyes and wonders molodyes that in that lande is; Life and labours of Richard Eden.—A treatyse of the newe India, with other new founde landes and ilandes, as well eastwarde as westwarde, as they are knowen and found in these oure dayes, by Sebastian Münster.—The decades of the Newe Worlde, or West India, conteynyng the nauigations and conquestes of the Spanyardes, with the description of the moste ryche and large landes and ilandes lately founde in the west ocean perteynyng to the inheritaunce of the kinges of Spayne, by P. M. d'Anghiera.

BURKE, Edmund.

Account of the European settlements in America. 2v. 1757. ..... r970 B91

"A very noteworthy account, not indeed written throughout by, but receiving its final revision from, one of the most eminent English men of letters. It describes the American colonies of six European nations from 1492 to about 1750; and was evidently undertaken in consequence of the Seven Years' War...Shows wide knowledge, unusual judgment, a somewhat too slight tolerance for other nations than the English, and, here and there, Edmund Burke's resplendent English style...Was issued anonymously, and is not usually included in Burke's collected works." Larned's Literature of American history.

DE ROO, P.

History of America before Columbus, according to documents and approved authors. 2v. 1900 ..... 970 D44 v.1. American aborigines.

v.2. European immigrants.
Bibliography, v.1, p.9–23.

While this is primarily a religious history of America during that early period, the author has also in his researches noted the important circumstances, events and institutions of the social and political life of the American tribes before 1492.

"No previous work has disclosed to the general reader so many disquisitions on the possible Christianization of the Western world before Columbus, nor made so full a compilation of the many opinions on this vexed question." Dial, 1901.

PAYNE, Edward John.

History of the New World called America. v.1–2. 1892–99. ..... 970 P33

No more published. The author died in Dec. 1904, leaving the work unfinished.

"In the first part [of v.1] the author traces the development of geographical knowledge and the rise of the spirit of discovery, and gives an account of the principal voyages down to Verrazano, 1524. His point of view is suggestive and stimulating. His narrative, however, is in many places behind the present state of knowledge, and cannot be relied upon in its statements of fact. The second part [of v.1] is an investigation into the physical basis of primitive American culture, and accounts for its inferiority to and divergence from European culture by the nature of its food supply and the lack of useful domestic animals. The second volume...continues this discussion and is mainly devoted to the primitive culture and history of Mexico." Larned's Literature of American history.

UNITED STATES—Commission to the Columbian historical exposition, Madrid, 1892–93.

Report, with special papers. 1895.....r970 U25

Special papers: Catalogue and description of the collection of pictures representing various places identified with the life of Columbus.—Catalogue of the Hemenway collection, by J. W. Fewkes.—Ancient Mexican feather work, by Zelia Nuttall.—Ancient Central and South American pottery, by Walter Hough.—Chipped stone implements, by H. C. Mercer.

Narrative and critical history of America. 8v. 1884–89..qr970 W79

v.1. Aboriginal America.
v.2. Spanish explorations and settlements in America from the 15th to the 17th century.
v.3. English explorations and settlements in North America, 1497–1689.
v.4. French explorations and settlements in North America, and those of the Portuguese, Dutch and Swedes, 1500–1700.
v.5. English and French in North America, 1689–1763.
v.6–7. United States of North America.
v.8. Later history of British, Spanish and Portuguese America.

"Composed of critical essays by different writers covering American history in detail to the adoption of the Constitution and briefly to about 1850. The most valuable parts of the work are the critical essays on the sources and Mr. Winsor's notes, which together form an exhaustive and generally critical account of the printed and manuscript sources and of the secondary authorities on American history. The volumes are rich in facsimiles of maps, historical illustrations, and portraits. For the student it is the most useful and valuable work on American history that he can possess." Larned's Literature of American history.

WRIGHT, Henrietta Christian.

Children's stories in American history. 1895.....j970 W93

913.7 Antiquities

AMERICAN ANTIQUARIAN SOCIETY.

Archæologia Americana; transactions and collections. v.1, 3–4. 1820–60.....r913.7 A51 v.1. Origin of the American antiquarian society.—Archæologia Americana.

v.3. Records of the Company of the Massachusetts Bay, to the embarkation of Winthrop and his associates for New England.—The diaries of John Hull, mint-master and treasurer of the colony of Massachusetts Bay.—Memoir of Hon. Thomas Lindall Winthrop, second president of the American antiquarian society.—Memoir of Hon. John Davis, fourth president of the society.—Officers and members of the society.
v.4. Original documents from the State-paper office, London, and the British museum; illustrating the history of Sir Walter Raleigh's first American colony, and the colony at Jamestown.—"A discourse of Virginia," by Edward Maria Wingfield, the first president of the colony; now first printed from the original ms. in the Lambeth library.—New England's rarities discovered, by John Josselyn, gent.—Narative of a voyage to Spitzbergen in the year 1613, at the charge of the fellowship of English merchants for the discovery of new trades, commonly called the Muscovy company, with a description of the country and the operations of the whale-fishery; now first printed from the original ms.—APPENDIX: Life of Sir Ralph Lane.—Notice of Samuel Jennison, esq., late treasurer of the American antiquarian society.

BALDWIN, John Denison.
Ancient America, in notes on American archæology.
1872. .....913.7 B19
"In its day this volume, prepared by a journalist with an arm-chair interest in the subject, was practically the only treatise on American archæology that ventured to cover the entire field. In the light of modern scientific research, there is almost nothing to commend it to the student." Larned's Literature of American history.

BRINTON, Daniel Garrison.
Essays of an Americanist. 1890.....913.7 B75
Contents: Ethnologic and archæologic.—Mythology and folk lore.—Graphic systems and literature.—Linguistic.
On American origins.
"Dr. Brinton's activity has proved very useful in raising new Americanistic problems or presenting the old in a novel light, whatever the real value of his own articles, theories and publications may be." Nation, 1890.

CHARNAY, Désiré.
Ancient cities of the New World; being voyages and explorations in Mexico and Central America, 1857–1882; tr. fr. the French by J. Gonino and H. S. Conant. 1888.....q913.7 C38
"Written somewhat in the form of a journal. The descriptions of modern Mexicans and Indians make it entertaining reading and do not detract from the value of the scientific part. The author has much to say about ancient Mexico and quotes frequently from the early Spanish writers. The important part of the book is the account of explorations among the famous ruins, as a result of which the theory of a Toltec civilization is strongly advocated." Larned's Literature of American history.

JONES, George, called Count Johannes.
History of ancient America anterior to the time of Columbus, proving the identity of the aborigines with the Tyrians and Israelites, and the introduction of Christianity by St. Thomas. v.1. 1843.....qr913.7 J39 v.1. Tyrian æra.
No more published.

MOOREHEAD, Warren King, and others.
Prehistoric implements; a description of the ornaments, utensils and implements of pre-Columbian man in America. 1900.....qr913.7 M87 Contains several bibliographies.
"Reference-book for collectors, not a hand-book for the professional archæologist...A well-digested, connected and symmetrical presentation of the same material by one person would have been far more satisfactory." Dial, 1901.
Illustrations of about 3,000 specimens are given.

NADAILLAC, Jean François Albert du Pouget, marquis de.
Pre-historic America; tr. by N. d'Anvers. 1895.....913.7 N11
"Embodies the results of the latest researches." C. K. Adams.
"There is no question that the compiler amassed a great deal of valuable material from many excellent sources, but a considerable body of unauthoritative matter is also included. It should therefore be read with discriminating care." Larned's Literature of American history.

PEET, Stephen Denison.
Prehistoric America. v.1–5. 1892–1905. (Antiquarian library.) r913.7 P36 v.1. Mound builders.
v.2. Emblematic mounds and animal effigies.
v.3. Cliff dwellers and Pueblos.
v.4. Ancient monuments and ruined cities; or, Beginnings of architecture.

v.5. Myths and symbols; or, Aboriginal religions in America.
"Made up largely of matter reprinted from The American antiquarian, of which magazine the author is editor. The results of limited personal field work, conducted at such times as the author's ministerial duties permitted, are included, but in the main the contents embrace the results of the researches of others (some of them of questionable authority), poorly digested and presented in unattractive style...Not highly regarded by scientific men." Larned's Literature of American history.

RAFN, Karl Christian.
Supplement to the Antiquitates Americanæ. 1841.....r973.1 R14
Bound with his "Mémoire sur la découverte de l'Amérique au dixième siècle."

THOMAS, Cyrus.
Introduction to the study of North American archaeology. 1898.....913.7 T37
"By an authority of wide experience in active field investigation. As an 'Introduction' it is the best treatise on North American archæology thus far presented [1902]." Larned's Literature of American history.

SHALER, Nathaniel Southgate.
Story of our continent. 1894 ..... j917 S52
A plain and simple treatment of the physiography and the geological history of North America. Elementary and descriptive in style. Its object is to show how the present and past physical features of the continent have been successively developed. It shows the connection between the geology and the geography of the United States, and the causes which have helped to determine regional and national development. Adapted to the beginner. May serve as introduction to the author's "Nature and man in America," (573.4 S52).

UNITED STATES—American republics bureau.
Commercial directory of the American republics. 2v. 1897–98. (55th cong. 2d sess. Senate. Doc. no.178.) .. qr917 A512

BANCROFT, Hubert Howe.

Native races. 5v. 1882.....q970.1 B22

v.1. Wild tribes.
v.2. Civilized nations.
v.3. Myths and languages.
v.4. Antiquities.
v.5. Primitive history.

"Authorities quoted," v.1, p.17–49.

"The author had access to a vast number of early Spanish works relating to the condition of the early inhabitants of Mexico and the Pacific slopes; and he has not only used these with indefatigable industry, but he has also availed himself of such results as could come from recent observation of the native races. The production shows learning and good judgment, as well as unwearied research." C. K. Adams.

BEACH, William Wallace, ed.

Indian miscellany; containing papers on the history, antiquities, arts, languages, religions, traditions and superstitions of the American aborigines, with descriptions of their domestic life, incidents of border warfare, missionary relations. 1877.....r970.1 B34

Reprinted mainly from magazines, pamphlets and newspapers.

BEATTY, Charles.

Journal of a two months tour with a view of promoting religion among the frontier inhabitants of Pennsylvania and of introducing Christianity among the Indians to the westward of the Alegh-geny mountains. 1768....r970.1 B345

With newspaper clippings and annotations by Isaac Craig.

The original edition, very rare. Contains many notes relating to the manners and customs of the Delaware Indians, whom from certain similar customs and some traditions among them, the author conjectures to be the descendants of the ten lost tribes of Israel.

BRINE, Lindesay.

Travels amongst American Indians, their ancient earthworks and temples, including a journey in Guatemala, Mexico and Yucatan, and a visit to the ruins of Patinamit, Utatlan, Palenque and Uxmal. 1894.....r970.1 B75

"Contains much that is trivial, and but little concerning the 'American Indians, their ancient earthworks and temples,' that is not found in... works of greater authority. As a narrative of adventures it is interesting; it is not without literary merit, and in the main it is instructive to the general reader." Larned's Literature of American history.

BROOKS, Elbridge Streeter.

Story of the American Indian. 1887.....970.1 B77

"Best 100 books on the American Indian," p.301–308.

The same. 1887.....j970.1 B77

"His opening chapter on 'The ancient American' contains so many errors of fact as to make it misleading to the layman; but, while the remainder of the book is not free from blemish, it covers the scope for which it was designed in a manner calculated to warrant commendation." Larned's Literature of American history.

BROWNELL, Charles De Wolf.

Indian races of North and South America. 1857.....r970.1 B81

History, customs, mythology and religion of the leading tribes.

CATLIN, George.

Catlin's notes of eight years' travels and residence in Europe with his North American Indian collection. 2v. 1848. .....r970.1 C28c

In 1839 Catlin went abroad to exhibit the large collection of Indian costumes, weapons and pictures of Indians and their life which he had spent years in making in the far West. He describes his many interesting and amusing experiences, especially in connection with parties of Indians whom he piloted about, acting as guide and showman.

Last rambles amongst the Indians of the Rocky mountains and the Andes. 1867.....r970.1 C28l

"Practically the second volume of Life amongst the Indians. It is a good book of adventure entertainingly written from the author's own experiences. It gives the story of his wanderings in South America and western North America. Information about the peoples of the countries visited is given incidentally." Larned's Literature of American history.

Letters and notes on the manners, customs and condition of the North American Indians. 2v. 1841.....qr970.1 C28

"Mr. Catlin visited forty-eight tribes in the Mississippi and Missouri valleys and on the eastern slope of the Rocky Mountains during eight years' travels. His object was to paint portraits of men and women in every tribe, together with views of villages, games, etc. The two volumes...form an unusually entertaining narrative of travels in an almost unknown region, and at the same time are of great value in their descriptions of Indian life. Over three hundred illustrations from Catlin's original paintings accompany the text." Larned's Literature of American history.

DELLENBAUGH, Frederick Samuel.

North-Americans of yesterday; a comparative study of North-American Indian life, customs and products on the theory of the ethnic unity of the race. 1901.....970.1 D41

DOMENECH, Emmanuel Henri Dieudonné, abbé.

Seven years' residence in the great deserts of North America. 2v. 1860.....r970.1 D71

v.1. Ancient emigrations.—American origins.—Descriptions.—Antiquities.

v.2. Origin of the Americans.—Character of the Indians.—Indian languages.—Festivals and industry.—Customs of the Indians.—Indian religions.

"The Abbé Domenech (1825–1886), of questionable reputation for veracity, was private chaplain to Maximilian during the latter's residence in Mexico...The greater part of the two volumes is in reality a compilation from other works. The plates are...far from accurate." Larned's Literature of American history.

DRAKE, Francis Samuel.

Indian history for young folks. 1884.....j970.1 D78

DRAKE, Samuel Gardner.

Biography and history of the Indians of North America. 1837. .....r970.1 D78b

Contents: Origin, antiquities, manners and customs, etc.—Northern or New England Indians.—Southern Indians.—Iroquois or Five nations, and other neighboring tribes of the west.

"Very excellent and carefully compiled...The result of a lifetime of labor, by one who spared no pains to be...faithful to the completeness and truthfulness of history." Field's Indian bibliography.

ELLIS, George Edward.

Red man and white man in North America. 1882.....970.1 E53

Contents: General survey.—Spanish discoverers and invaders.—The Indian; his origin, numbers, person and character.—The Indian in his condition, resources and surroundings.—Indian tenure of land as viewed by European invaders and colonists.—The French and the Indians.—Colonial relations with the Indians.—Missionary efforts among the Indians.—Relations of Great Britain with the Indians.—The United States government and the Indians.—Military and peace policy with the Indians.—The Indians under civilization.

FLINT, Timothy.

Indian wars of the west; containing biographical sketches of pioneers, with a view of the character, manners, monuments and antiquities of the western Indians. 1833.....r970.1 F64

Not what we now call the West. Accounts of the settlement of western Pennsylvania, Ohio, Kentucky and other states of the Mississippi valley.

FORCE, Gen. Manning Ferguson.

Some early notices of the Indians of Ohio; [and] To what race did the Mound builders belong? 1879.....r551.79 C55

Bound with Claypole's "Lake age in Ohio."

First part of this memoir gives valuable information on the early aborigines of Ohio, derived from the best of the narratives of its early explorers. The second part is still in consonance with modern scientific conclusions regarding the archæology of the Mississippi region. Adapted from Larned's Literature of American history.

FROST, John.

Border wars of the west; the frontier wars of Pennsylvania, Virginia, Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Tennessee and Wisconsin, and individual adventures among the Indians. 1856.....r970.1 F96

"The author has had free recourse to the local histories of the able writers, among them, Hildreth, Perkins, McClung, Drake and others, who have written on the subject. The host of engravings that illustrate the book, seem to have been executed by the aboriginals themselves. This is one of a numerous class of fictitious works of little merit, which aimed to attract attention, by assuming a title giving an air of veracity to the narratives." Thomson's Bibliography of Ohio.

Reprint of the edition of 1659.

Title of reprint reads "Further manifestation of the progress of the gospel among the Indians in New England."

GOODRICH, Samuel Griswold, (pseud. Peter Parley).

The same. 1900.....qr970.1 G92i

The same. 1900.....qj970.1 G92i

"The Indians of To-day—what are their numbers? where do they live? how do they exist? are they becoming civilized, educated, learning the white man's ways? These are some of the questions which intelligent people are asking, and to which, so far as may be, the answer is given in the pages that follow." Preface.

Illustrated by many large reproductions of excellent photographs of Indian chiefs.

Story of the Indian. 1902. (Story of the West series.)....970.1 G92

The same. 1902. (Story of the West series.).....j970.1 G92

Popular account of daily life, customs, religion, first contact with white men, etc., with chapter on races. Written from personal acquaintance and investigations.

HALKETT, John.

Historical notes respecting the Indians of North America, with remarks on the attempts made to convert and civilize them. 1825.....r970.1 H16

HARBISON, Mrs Massy (White).

Narrative of the sufferings of Massy Harbison from Indian barbarity, with some account of the Indians in this western country; communicated by herself, ed. by John Winter. 1836.....r970.1 H24

HECKEWELDER, John.

History, manners and customs of the Indian nations who once inhabitated Pennsylvania and the neighboring states, with introduction and notes by W. C. Reichel. 1876. (In Pennsylvania historical society. Memoirs, v.12.).....r974.8 P39 v.12

HUMFREVILLE, James Lee.

Twenty years among our hostile Indians. 1899.....970.1 H92

Author, a captain of United States cavalry, had unusual opportunities for studying the life and character of our wild Indians. He shows them in an unfavorable light.

HUNTER, John Dunn.

Memoirs of a captivity among the Indians of North America. 1823.....r970.1 H94

Another edition has the title "Manners and customs of several Indian tribes located west of the Mississippi."

Hunter (1798?–1827), according to his own narrative, was, when an infant, taken captive by the Kickapoo Indians and adopted into the family of one of the principal warriors. His published account of his captivity was at first received with much favor, but afterward denounced as an imposture. Adapted from Appletons' cyclopædia of American biography.

IRVING, John Treat.

Indian sketches taken during an expedition to the Pawnee and other tribes of American Indians. 2v. in 1. 1835....r970.1 I28

"This object of this expedition was of a higher humanitarian order than those which the government has usually organized for Indian affairs ...Mr. Irving accompanied the expedition, and his work affords us many interesting incidents of savage life. The work abounds in such fragments of the traditions, history and peculiarities of the Indian tribes as the opportunity offered the author." Field's Indian bibliography.

JOHNSTON, Charles, b. 1768.

Narrative of the incidents attending the capture, detention and ransom of Charles Johnston of Virginia, made prisoner by the Indians, 1790, [with] sketches of Indian character and manners. 1827.....r970.1 J36

JONES, David.

Journal of two visits made to some nations of Indians on the west side of the Ohio, 1772 and 1773, with a biographical notice of the author by H. G. Jones. 1865. (Sabin's reprints.) r970.1 J39

"Form an interesting account of the manners, customs, language and religious belief of a people now almost extinct." Preface.

LONG, John.

Voyages and travels of an Indian interpreter and trader; describing the manners and customs of the North American Indians, with an account of the posts on the St. Laurence, Lake Ontario, &c., to which is added a vocabulary of the Chippeway language. 1791 ..... qr970.1 L82

The same; [reprinted]. 1904. (In Thwaites's Early western travels, 1748–1846, v.2.) r917.8 T43 v.2

"Author engaged in the service of the Hudson's Bay Company in 1768, and journeyed as a fur trader among the Indians of Canada for nineteen years. His knowledge of the character, customs, and domestic life of Indians was therefore the most thorough and intimate. His relations are characterized by candor and intelligence, tinged a little with the disappointments, which most of the servants of the Company who have written accounts of their experiences, seem to have suffered." Field's Indian bibliography.

LOVE, William DeLoss.

Samson Occom and the Christian Indians of New England. 1899. ..... 970.1 L93

"Important not only as a biography of Occom, who, if not 'the greatest of his race,' was probably the 'first in peace' of his people, but also as containing an excellent account of probably the greatest attempt at colonization and self-government by the Indians themselves on the model of their white neighbors...the movement to found a settlement of Christian Indians of New England in the Oneida country." Nation, 1900.

McKENNEY, Thomas Lorraine.

Memoirs, official and personal, with sketches of travels among the northern and southern Indians. 2v. in 1. 1846. ..... r970.1 M17m

Title-page of v.2 reads "On the origin, history, character and the wrongs and rights of the Indians."

"McKenney was appointed, in 1816, superintendent of United States trade with the Indian tribes, and, in 1824, head of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, where he served until forced to retire by Jackson. He had great faith in the fundamental worth of the Indian, and has much to say in regard to the 'abominable abuse of power' of the government with the Indians...The author's observations and anecdotes are entertaining, although the volume is fragmentary. Stories are told in regard to political life at Washington...which strikingly illustrate the corruption in governmental contracts and the workings of the spoils system under Jackson." Larned's Literature of American history.

History of the Indian tribes of North America, with biographical sketches of the principal chiefs. 3v. 1844–50. ..... qr970.1 M17

"The principal value of this work...lies in the colored lithographic reproductions of many Indian portraits collected between 1825 and 1849 by the War Department, of which the Indian Office then formed a part...The various biographies...are derived from authentic sources or from personal association with the living subjects. The 'History of the North American Indians' occupying part of the third volume, is unscientific and untrustworthy, although it contains many extracts from worthier publications." Larned's Literature of American history.

Life and times of Sa-go-ye-wat-ha, or Red Jacket. 1866. .....qr970.2 S88

Memoir of the author, p.9–101.

"Col. Stone has connected, in a very happy manner, with the life of Red-Jacket, a number of anecdotes and sketches, particularly of our war of 1812...which add greatly to the interest and value of his work. His narration of many facts and movements on the northern frontier, during that war...of the principles and conduct of the Indians in our contest with Great Britain; of several Indian treaties, and sales of their land; and of a number of interviews of Red-Jacket with distinguished men...render his volume as entertaining as a novel." Princeton review, 1842.

This report forms part of the Report of the secretary of the interior.

For Indian affairs before 1825 see American state papers, Indian affairs, v.1. The supervision of Indian affairs was originally committed to the secretary of war. Under him was appointed first a superintendent of Indian tribes, who subsequently became superintendent of Indian affairs. By act of Congress approved July 9, 1832, provision was made for the appointment of a commissioner of Indian affairs, to be an officer of the War department. On the organization of the Department of the interior in 1849, his office was made one of the bureaus of said department, with which it has since been connected.

"Under the efficient direction of the Dominion Archivist, Douglas Brymner, a large number of documents relating to Canada have been copied at the Record Office in London, and in other European collections. Great care has been taken to secure verbal accuracy, and the copies now accumulated at Ottawa can be used with the same confidence as their originals. The Archivist's Reports...remained till 1884 of a preliminary character. Since the latter date they have possessed decided value for historians, both American and Canadian. As an instance of their bearing upon the United States the case of the Haldimand Papers may be cited. In 1884 a calendar of these important sources began to appear in Mr. Brymner's reports, and for the Revolutionary War they are indispensable. Nowhere else can the attempt to disconnect Vermont from the colonial cause be so clearly traced." Larned's Literature of American history.

CHARLEVOIX, Pierre François Xavier de.

History and general description of New France; tr. by J. G. Shea. 6v. 1866–72.....qr971 C37

"The author, a Jesuit, reached Canada in 1720 with a special charge to inspect the missions of the country, and was the first who wrote a general history of consequence. His standpoint is naturally that of a churchman and a Jesuit, but Parkman (though often finding him careless) advises students who would regard the Old Régime from the French side to consult his work. He had command of invaluable sources and shows undoubted cleverness. Among his limitations is a prejudice against Montreal which is revealed, among other ways, by his silence concerning Dollard's magnificent exploit at the Long Sault." Larned's Literature of American history.

"The extent and value of Dr. Shea's work in annotating his translation of this history can only be appreciated by careful study. Through this means the translation is more valuable for many purposes of research than the original work." Winsor's Narrative and critical history of America.

The last forty years; Canada since the union of 1841. 2v. 1881. .....971 D43

"Almost wholly an abstract of political occurrences. The second volume contains a concluding chapter on Literature and journalism, but the social and economic development of the country is quite neglected. One noticeable feature of the book is the biographical element which pervades it. Numerous character sketches of public men are interspersed through the text, and the attempt to make each chapter an entertaining essay is very apparent. The illustrations which accompany it are poorly executed." Larned's Literature of American history.

History of Canada, to 1841. 2v. 1862.....r971 G18

"A work of much force and spirit, besides being well grounded in knowledge. The French Canadians consider it their most distinctively 'national' history, and though readers of scientific temper may find it at times too 'patriotic,' it contains the best general sketch of New France which has appeared from a Canadian pen during the present century." Larned's Literature of American history.

HART, Gerald E.

Fall of New France, 1755–1760. 1888.....r971 H31

"This is the work of a man who, though greatly interested in his subject, was unable to devote the time necessary for original research or even for a careful examination of printed authorities—and in consequence it is unreliable. The prints are excellent and many of them rare." Larned's Literature of American history.

Canada; an encyclopædia of the country. 7v. 1898–1900..qr971 H78

v.7 is an index volume.

"Not an orderly arranged encyclopædia; but a collection of articles of unequal merit upon Canadian history, commerce, education, and other important topics. There is much padding, and what is of value is obscured by the mere bulk of the work...Many of the articles are by writers of recognized authority in their chosen subjects. There are many inaccuracies." Larned's Literature of American history.

KENNEDY, Howard Angus.

Story of Canada. [1897.] (Story of the empire series.)..971 K18

"The author, though not a dweller, has seen service in Canada. This is a readable short narrative based upon secondary sources. It is accurate, and, while enthusiastic about Canada, is on the whole discriminating. The style is good." Larned's Literature of American history.

v.10. 1836–1841.

"Based upon original documents and carefully sifted testimony; a trustworthy and thoroughly interesting work. The Canadian reader or student who has time for more than a one volume history of his country should certainly be familiar with this work. The American reader will find it contains informing sidelights on the relations of Louisiana and Canada, the causes of the Revolution, and much else of importance to him." Leypoldt & Iles's Books for girls and women.

LE CLERCQ, Chrétien.

First establishment of the faith in New France; tr. by J. G. Shea. 2v. 1881.....qr971 L49

Sketch of Le Clercq, v.1, p.5–36.

The first English translation of an exceedingly rare work. Soon after its publication the original was suppressed by the French govenment and very few copies were circulated. It is peculiarly valuable as containing the first original account of La Salle's discoveries, by two missionaries who accompanied him. From this book also Hennepin drew the account of his pretended discovery of the Mississippi river.

LESCARBOT, Marc.

Histoire de la Nouvelle-France, avec Les muses de la Nouvelle-France. 3v. 1866.....r971 L63

A reprint of the edition of 1612.

"This man, who represents in France the position occupied by Hakluyt in the history of English geography, was Marc Lescarbot of Vervins ...The work is divided into three books. In the first are described the voyages of Verrazano, Villegagnon, Ribaut, Laudonnière and Gourgues. The accounts of the expeditions of Cartier, Roberval, de la Roche and de Monts occupy the second book, while in the third...he gives a description of the manners and customs of the savages of the New World...In contrast with the aridity of the Jesuit Relations and with the prolific geographical details given by Champlain, Lescarbot's bright and pleasant manner of recounting his adventures in the New World give even the reader of the present day a keen pleasure." American historical review, 1901.

Champlain edition.

"The present volume will show how valiantly, and for a time how successfully, New France battled against a fate which her own organic fault made inevitable." Preface.

"Count Frontenac himself, who died in 1698 in his seventy-eighth year, after being governor for eighteen years, [the author] declares 'The most remarkable man who ever represented the Crown of France in the New World,' and adds that it was he alone who made possible 'the grand scheme of military occupation by which France strove to envelop and hold in check the industrial populations of the English colonies.'" Nation, 1877.

The same. 2v. 1897.....r971 P24

"Mr. Parkman has been himself inspired by his theme...he treats his subject as one who knows it in a personal as well as in a literary way, and is evidently no less at home among the Northern woods and lakes than among the archives of the French Marine...His Jesuits and trappers are excellent, but his Indians are even better, and he has plainly ventured to look at the squalid savage de près and for himself." Nation, 1874.

"A much truer impression of the hardships of the Canadian settler than will be found in most descriptions of Canada. The grim reality of farming in Manitoba—the sinking of every available dollar of capital and the hailstorm that wipes out crops and cattle—is put before the reader in a few short chapters. The story is then transferred to the British Columbia coast, and the various shifts to which the wandering friends are put are typical cases for the intending emigrant to ponder over." Spectator, 1900.

"Everywhere the writing approves itself as realistic and reliable as the notorious annals of Pepys, naked and not ashamed...No page is valueless in this work, which was elaborated not so much to be read as to be referred to." Nation, 1897.
"Dr. Coues...has not printed [the journals] in full, but has used his judgment in abridgment and selection. While much of the action lies on our side of the northwestern boundary, the work is perhaps most valuable for the light that it throws on exploration and adventure north of that line and beyond the head of the Great Lakes." Larned's Literature of American history.

"Interesting series of sketches by one whom business relations brought into close contact with the French Canadians. The element of 'folklore' is slight, amounting only to a chapter on the habitant 'contes;' but many characteristics of the rural population in Quebec are truthfully delineated. The author's style, though somewhat colloquial, bears a just relation to his manner of treatment. It is by anecdote and from personal observation that he illustrates the topics which he has selected. HARVEY, Moses.

Newfoundland in 1897. 1897.....971.8 H33

"The Rev. M. Harvey in this small volume attempts two difficult things: to whitewash Sebastian Cabot, and to show that Britain's oldest colony is one of the most virtuous communities under the British flag. He writes for those who know little or nothing of the Cabots, or of the history of English colonization, or of the peculiar practices of Newfoundland in the last few years. For such his book will be of great interest, notwithstanding certain redundancies and certain shortcomings from the literary standpoint. For the student it is of the smallest value possible...Mr. Harvey is at his best in dealing with the earliest efforts to colonize Newfoundland... [His] description of the times of the Fishing Admirals...is capital." Spectator, 1897.

Clavigero was employed about 30 years as a Jesuit missionary among the Indians of Mexico. In consequence of the suppression of the Jesuit order about 1767, he left Mexico and in 1780 published his history. It is a very complete account of the history, religion, customs, arts and natural history of ancient Mexico.

PRESCOTT, William Hickling.

History of the conquest of Mexico, with a preliminary view of the ancient Mexican civilization and the life of the conqueror, Hernando Cortez. 3v. 1861.....r972 P92

The same; ed. by J. F. Kirk. 3v. 1873.....972 P92h1

"A masterpiece of clear, well-arranged historical narration, based upon careful and diligent study of all available sources of information. The chapters which relate the history of Mexico previous to the Spanish conquest contain little more than a skilful adaptation of Clavigero. For a safe appreciation of the account of the conquest, the reader must bear constantly in mind...that Prescott, perhaps unwittingly, was a devoted hero-worshipper. He desired, most sincerely, to describe events and characters as they really were, but he found it impossible to believe statements which contradicted those of Cortés, or to credit opinions disparaging to the heroic figure whose great achievement had fascinated him. The unfairness of many of Prescott's critical comments, and the frequent injustice of his attitude towards the natives who were opposed to Cortés, are alike directly traceable to this concentration of his imagination on the figure of the conqueror." Larned's Literature of American history.

Awakening of a nation; Mexico of to-day. 1898.....917.2 L97
To most Americans this book will be a revelation of what the Mexico of to-day really is, and of the part she is beginning to play in the world. Mr Lummis writes very interestingly and with full knowledge of the development of the natural resources of the country, of the great enterprises undertaken, of the present condition of the ancient cities, but perhaps the best chapters are those on President Diaz, the man to whom is chiefly due all this marvellous change from the Mexico of 20 years ago. "Is not, and indeed was not in its own day, of any substantive value as a book of reference on its nominal subject; but it exercised considerable influence: it was exceedingly characteristic of the period and society which produced it, and passages of it are still worth reading... Raynal himself wrote but a small part of it...He borrowed from books and he begged from his own friends all manner of diatribes against superstition and tyranny, often illustrated by lively anecdotes and eloquent tirades. Grimm assigns a full third of the book to Diderot, which is probably an exaggeration, but that Diderot had a great hand in it no judge of style can doubt." Encyclopædia Britannica.

NEWTON, Margaret.

Glimpses of life in Bermuda and the tropics. 1897.....917.29 N29

"This describes the salient features of the different islands, giving on the whole the palm to Jamaica, though Trinidad runs Jamaica very hard. Her descriptions may, at all events, have the further result she desires of inducing others to go and see for themselves." Athenæum, 1897.

OBER, Frederick Albion.

In the wake of Columbus; adventures of the special commissioner sent by the World's Columbian exposition to the West Indies. 1893.....917.29 O12i

"Seems to be a farrago of personal experiences in visiting the various places connected with the career of Columbus, combined with a certain amount of historical misinformation, the whole written in a slipshod style, and illustrated with a large number of woodcuts of very various degrees of intelligibility." Nation, 1893.

MUSGRAVE, George Clarke.

Under three flags in Cuba; a personal account of the Cuban insurrection and Spanish-American war. 1899. .....972.91 M98

"Mr. Musgrave was an Englishman holding Spain in high favor when he went to the island as a correspondent for a British journal, and the knowledge gained on the ground saw him within a few months fighting in the insurgent ranks. He bears the testimony of an eye-witness to the disinterested valor of the Cuban patriots, but he makes little prophecy for the future." Dial, 1900.

NOA, Frederic M.

The pearl of the Antilles [Cuba]; a view of the past and a glance at the future. 1898.....972.91 N38

CHAMBERLAIN, Mellen.

John Adams, the statesman of the American revolution, with other essays and addresses, historical and literary. 1898. .....973 C34

Other essays: The authentication of the Declaration of independence.—The constitutional relations of the American colonies to the English government at the commencement of the American revolution.—Remarks on the new historical school.—The genesis of the Massachusetts town.—Political maxims.—Remarks before the Sons of the American revolution, Concord, April 19, 1894.—Palfrey's People of New England.—McMaster's History of the people of the United States.—Josiah Quincy, the great mayor.—Daniel Webster as an orator.—Remarks at the dedication of a statue of Daniel Webster, Concord, N. H., June 17, 1886.—A glance at Daniel Webster.—Landscape in life and in poetry.—The scope of a college library; address at the dedication of Wilson hall, Dartmouth college library, June 24, 1885.—The old and the new order in New England life and letters; address at Brattleborough, Vermont, Jan. 25, 1887.—Imaginative literature in public libraries; address at Barre, Mass., Dec. 30, 1887.

"The essential characteristic of Judge Chamberlain's historical method is his reliance upon primary sources of information. His conclusions are invariably the result of exhaustive study of original and contemporary material...Add to this power of intelligent and patient labor, the mental equipment of a trained lawyer and experienced judge, and a clear and forcible style and we have a scholar whose work...combines with singular success industrious search for facts, skill and fairness in weighing evidence, and attractiveness of literary form." Nation, 1899.

CHANNING, Edward, & Hart, A. B.

Guide to the study of American history. 1896.....r973 C36

"A most useful manual for readers, students, and teachers of American history; compiled as the result of years of experience in college and university instruction. It contains hints on the reading and teaching of history, a selected bibliography of American history, and a long and well-arranged series of topics on colonial and United States history. The book is also elaborately indexed. It will be especially helpful for those engaged in private reading or who are without the guidance of a teacher." Larned's Literature of American history.

DOYLE, John Andrew.

History of the United States, [to 1867]. 1876.....973 D77

Contains maps illustrative of the acquisition of territory and of the increase of population, by F. A. Walker.

"Of the small books on the history of the United States, this is one of the best. It forms a part of the historical course for schools edited by E. A. Freeman. Its characteristics are that it is carefully prepared, is very accurate, and is free from those factitious allurements which sometimes constitute the chief merit of a school history." C. K. Adams.

GREG, Percy.

History of the United States, from the foundation of Virginia to the reconstruction of the Union. 2v. 1887.....r973 G86 v.1 contains the Articles of confederation, 1779–81, and the constitution of 1787.

"A singularly one-sided history written by an English author who achieved considerable note as a journalist and essayist...Large and comprehensive...scholarly in its proportions and style...The Revolution, Constitution, and Civil War are considered the three central events of American history...Down to 1783, the author declares that his history follows in the main Bancroft and Palfrey. In the treatment of the Civil War...the author, however, writes in full accord with the southern States Rights philosophy...So biased that it is absolutely unsafe for the elementary student." Larned's Literature of American history.

GRIFFIS, William Elliot.

Romance of conquest; the story of American expansion through arms and diplomacy. 1899.....973 G89

RIDPATH, John Clark.

Popular history of the United States. 1891.....q973 R44

"A fair specimen of a book made to be sold by solicited subscription. Aims to give leading facts in a simple manner and to 'discuss the philosophy of history' as fully as space will allow. Divides the narrative into five periods: The aborigines, discovery, colonies, Revolution, and the later events by administrations of Presidents. The resulting perspective is bad. The real making of the Union is condensed, and social factors almost wholly omitted." Larned's Literature of American history.

United States; an outline of political history, 1492–1871. 1893. .....973 S64

"A brilliantly written sketch, well proportioned and marvellously condensed. The author's standpoint, while critical, is distinctly sympathetic. The work is too compact to admit of novelty in the treatment of details; but the recognition of slavery, as almost from the beginning a moulding force, is to be specially noted as giving emphasis and continuity to the exposition." Larned's Literature of American history.

Making of the nation, 1783–1817. 1895. (American history series.) 973 W16
Bibliography, p.293–298.
"A careful, at times thrilling, story of this important period of national growth...In pure English, he freshly relates the circumstances which led to the constitutional convention, the story of its formation and adoption, the practical difficulties in statesmanship which beset the path of the first President, the early settlement of vexed constitutional questions, and incidents relative to the admission of new States, the Louisiana Purchase and the diplomatic quarrels with England and France, the whole closing with an admirable summary of the War of 1812–15." Leypoldt & Iles's Books for girls and women.

WILSON, Rufus Rockwell.
Washington, the capital city, and its part in the history of the nation. 2v. 1901.....973 W772
A history, not of Washington itself, but of the political growth and development of the United States as centering in its capital city.

WILSON, Woodrow.
Division and reunion, 1829–1889. 1894. (Epochs of American history.) 973 W77
With list of references before each chapter.
"As a southerner of the generation since the war who has lived most of his adult life in the North, Prof. Wilson is in an especially favorable position for understanding the temper of the North and the South, and for writing the history of this momentous period with an exceptional degree of fairness and sympathy. As a text-book, it is well supplied with maps and bibliographies, but its literary quality raises it above the ordinary text-book, and makes it at once the best and most readable general history of these sixty years." Larned's Literature of American history.

COOPER, James Fenimore.
History of the navy of the United States. 2v. 1839....r973 C78
"In some respects, relating to the War of 1812, Cooper's views have been called in question; but his story of the Revolutionary navy is the result of investigations that have not, on the whole, been improved upon. Cooper gives a list of the Continental cruisers, with the fate of each." Winsor's Narrative and critical history of America.

MACLAY, Edgar Stanton.
History of the United States navy, 1775–1901. 3v. 1894–1901. .....973 M19
v.3 is chiefly on the war with Spain, and contains an account of the Schley court of inquiry.
"Taken as a whole, this history of the navy...is the best in print, but the perspective needs correction." Nation, 1898.

Reminiscences of the old navy; from the journals and private papers of Captain Edward Trenchard and Rear-admiral Stephen Decatur Trenchard. 1898.....973 M19r
"The records of the Trenchards...cover eighty years of service in our navy...the journal and notes of a cruise for the suppression of the slave-trade on the African coast...the copious journals kept when on service in the China sea and...throughout the Civil War are well strewn with stirring episodes heretofore unrecorded...The chief value of the book lies...in the fact that it is part and parcel of the inside history of our navy during the period covered." Dial, 1898.

SPEARS, John Randolph.
History of our navy, 1775–1898. 5v. 1897–99.....973 S74
Very readable story of the navy. Deals at length with the part played by our navy, not only in the Revolution, the War of 1812, the Mexican war and the Civil war, but also with the encounters with pirates in the West Indies and the Mediterranean, with the hard life of naval men in times of nominal peace, with Perry's expedition to Japan, and finally with the "new navy." The last volume treats of the Spanish-American war and the events which led to it; this volume is also published separately under the title "Our navy in the war with Spain."

ANDERSON, Rasmus Björn.
America not discovered by Columbus; an historical sketch of the discovery of America by the Norsemen, with an appendix on the historical, linguistic, literary and scientific value of the Scandinavian languages. 1891..973.1 A54
"Annotated bibliography of the pre-Columbian discovery of America," by P. B. Watson, p.121–164.
"A small book containing much information not to be conveniently found elsewhere. It gives fully the account of the discovery of Vinland. The author puts great confidence in the account, as well as in the tower at Newport, the Dighton Rock, and the skeleton in armor." Watson's Annotated bibliography of the pre-Columbian discovery of America.

BEAMISH, North Ludlow.

Discovery of America by the Northmen in the tenth century, with notices of the early settlements of the Irish in the western hemisphere. 1841.....r973.1 B34
"An adaptation of Rafn's Antiquitates Americanæ for English readers. The translations of the sagas and other Icelandic texts are from Rafn's Danish version. Rafn's discussion of the evidence and his account of the monuments and inscriptions of the Northmen are epitomized. The author also supplies a sketch of Icelandic literature ...Beamish accepted all Rafn's views, and his book may be resorted to as a clear and faithful presentation in English of Rafn's epoch-making book in this field." Larned's Literature of American history.

CRAFTS, William Augustus.

Pioneers in the settlement of America, 1510–1849. 2v. 1876–77. .....qr973.1 C85
"It is not the purpose of this work to give a connected and complete history of the settlements of Europeans in America, and of subsequent emigration to the west, but rather to delineate some of the events and incidents which illustrate the characteristics of the pioneers, their manner of life, the hardships they endured, and the perils they encountered." Preface.

DAWSON, Samuel Edward.

Voyages of the Cabots; latest phases of the controversy.

1897. .....q973.1 D33

Reprinted from the Transactions of the Royal society of Canada for 1897.

"Dr. Dawson believes that Cape Breton can lay claim to the honor of Cabot's landfall with no less justice than Watling's Island can lay claim to that of Columbus. He has certainly entered the best plea yet made on its behalf, and many professed historians will profit by following his use of evidence." Nation, 1898.

DE COSTA, Benjamin Franklin.

Pre-Columbian discovery of America by the Northmen, with translations from the Icelandic sagas. 1890.....r973.1 D36

"The design of this volume is to present in an English dress to the historical student every portion of the Icelandic Sagas relating to the Pre-Columbian discovery of America by the Northmen. These Sagas...are translated, with the needful explanations added in regard to persons and places." Nation, 1869.

DE VERE, Maximilian Schele.

FISKE, John.

Discovery of America, with account of ancient America and the Spanish conquest. 2v. 1895.....973.1 F54

The same. 2v. 1898.....r973.1 F54

"Fiske performs the useful and honorable office of marshalling the facts deduced by the best and latest monographists, and presenting them to the reading public in a coherent form. He has a keen sense of historical perspective and proportion, takes a large, philosophic view of his subject, and has a charming literary style. The study of American history has been popularized by his books; thousands, heretofore indifferent to it, have first been led by the works of Fiske to see that we have a national history which is highly picturesque and deserves our closest attention. This work is one of the best from his hand, and is important as laying a solid foundation for the study of American history. The introductory chapter is the most satisfactory popular presentation of the characteristics, customs and antecedents of the Indians, which we have in print." Leypoldt & Iles's Books for girls and women.

FORCE, Gen. Manning Ferguson.

Some observations on the letters of Amerigo Vespucci. 1885. .....r973.1 F75

Aims to show that the letters to the duke of Lorraine could not have been written by Vespucci as a narrative of his voyages. A short paper read before the Congrès international des Américanistes at Brussels.

v.2. Gilbert's voyage.—Amadas and Barlow's voyage.—Cavendish's first voyage.—Cavendish's last voyage.—Raleigh's discovery of Guiana.—Cavendish's last letter.

Voyages of the English nation to America before the year 1600; ed. by Edmund Goldsmid. 4v. 1889–90..r973.1 H15

"Hakluyt was an enthusiast with regard to western discoveries, and he spared neither time nor labor to obtain trustworthy information with regard to the voyages...His narratives of the early voyages, so far as we have the means of verifying them, follow with almost entire accuracy the original documents, though in a few instances he has abbreviated his originals...In these instances, however, the republication of the narratives...with the learned annotations of ...thoroughly competent editors, places before the reader an exact copy of the originals." Justin Winsor.

HARRISSE, Henry.

Diplomatic history of America; its first chapter, 1452–1494. 1897. .....973.1 H31

An account of the negotiations between Spain, Portugal and the pope regarding the division of territory already discovered or yet to be discovered.

Discovery of North America; a critical, documentary and historic investigation, with an essay on the early cartography of the New World, a chronology of voyages westward, 1431–1504, biographical accounts of pilots who first crossed the Atlantic, and a list of the original names of American regions. 2v. 1892..qr973.1 H31

"The first part of this monumental work, the greatest contribution to the history of American geography since Humboldt's Examen, is a concise, critically sifted presentation of the ascertained facts of the discovery and exploration of the coast of North America, down to 1525. The notes give the reader a clue to all the original sources and to the best modern discussions. The second and third parts on the early maps of the New World surpass in range and completeness all other treatises on the subject. In the fourth and fifth parts,—the chronological lists of voyages and the biographies of pilots,—each notice is supplied with notes indicating the sources ...An indispensable guide to the student and investigator." Larned's Literature of American history.

Contents: Legends of the Northmen.—Columbus and his companions.—Cabot and Verazzano.—Cabeza De Vaca.—The French in Canada.—De Soto.—The French in Florida.—Sir Humphrey Gilbert.—Lost colonies of Virginia.—Unsuccessful New England settlements.—Capt. John Smith.—Champlain on the warpath.—Hudson and the New Netherlands.—Pilgrims at Plymouth.—Massachusetts Bay colony.

LESTER, Charles Edwards, & Foster, Andrew.

Life and voyages of Americus Vespucius, and the discovery of the New World. 1853.....r973.1 L65

"The author...lacked the critical training to produce a work abreast of the scholarship of his day. To-day the work is entirely out of date and would mislead and waste the time of anyone beginning a study of the subject. It may still be serviceable, however, in a measure, from the translations which it contains of Vespucius's letters to one who cannot consult the work of Varnhagen, Markham, or Quaritch's First four voyages. To the more advanced student it is of some value as a compendium of the materials and views in the works of Bandini, Bartolozzi, and Canovai, who championed the cause of Vespucius in the last century." Larned's Literature of American history.

LOWERY, Woodbury.

Spanish settlements within the present limits of the United States, 1513–1561. 1901 ..... 973.1 L95

"This work...is quite certain to rank as a standard authority and a principal source of popular knowledge concerning a very interesting portion of American history...Mr. Lowery has...gathered all the available information, not only about the better known explorers whose names are in the text-books, but equally about the less important ventures, meaningless each by itself, which become significant when grouped together so that the bearing of each upon the whole movement of colonial development becomes apparent. He has brought together the scattered references to a score of random voyagers; stray wanderers, who survive only in chance allusions to otherwise unheard-of happenings." American historical review, 1901.

Spanish pioneers. 1893 ..... 973.1 L97

For young readers; written to inspire them with the same enthusiasm for the Spanish pioneers as the author possesses. Believing that justice had never been rendered these heroes, he, through much labor and research, obtained the true stories of their adventures and discoveries, which he has here related, together with accounts of their first attempts to educate the Indians, and other deeds of heroism and kindness.

Voyage of Verrazzano; early history of maritime discovery in America. 1875. ..... r973.1 M97

"This monograph is an attempt to prove by the process of external and internal criticism that the narrative of Verrazano's voyage of 1524 is a forgery based on the data supplied by the discoveries of Estevan Gomez recorded on the Ribero map of 1529. Mr. Murphy made out a strong case, but the drift of critical opinion has been in recent years in favor of the reality of Verrazano's voyage. The appendix...includes Dr. Cogswell's translation of the Verrazano letter and translations of transcripts of documents about Verrazano as well as a facsimile of the Verrazano map." Larned's Literature of American history.

SMITH, Joshua Toulmin.

Discovery of America by the Northmen in the 10th century; comprising translations of all the most important original narratives of this event. 1842.....r973.1 S65

"An attempt to put the materials and discussions published by Rafn in his Antiquitates before the English readers. The author unfortunately adopted the controversial dialogue as his method of presentation, and the average student cannot but be worn out and confused to the last degree by the discussions of Mr. Norset, Dr. Dubital and Mr. Cassall. Beamish's popularization of Rafn [r973.1 B34] is every way preferable." Larned's Literature of American history.

STEPHENS, Thomas.

Madoc; an essay on the discovery of America by Madoc ap Owen Gwynedd in the 12th century; ed. by Llywarch Reynolds. 1893. .....973.1 S83

"At the Eisteddfod of 1858 a prize was offered for an essay on 'The Welsh discovery of America.' Five papers were handed in, of which the present book was one, and it was esteemed much the ablest of all in research and literary skill; but, to save the national pride, it was thrown out, because, taking the ground of a non-discovery, it was held not to be upon the assigned topic."

STEVENS, Henry.

Historical and geographical notes on the earliest discoveries in America, 1453–1530. 1869.....qr973.1 S84

"The author has collected...and published in full or in epitome all the most important memoirs of eminent orientalists on this subject, such as De Guignes, Klaproth...and others. These he has followed with the text of Ma Twin-lin's account of Fu-Sang with eight parallel translations by different scholars. The last half of the book is a commentary on this narrative and on the resemblances between Mexican and Asiatic culture." Larned's Literature of American history.

WEARE, George Edward.

Cabot's discovery of North America. 1897.....973.1 W35

"Discursive narrative, possessing little critical value. Germans in colonial times. 1901.....973.2 B49

List of works consulted, p.300–305.

Studies the social and religious conditions in Germany which led to emigration, describes the various German colonies, many of them small religious sects like the Dunkers, the Moravians, the Mennonites, etc. who settled from Maine to Georgia, but principally in Pennsylvania. Also treats of the share of the colonial Germans in the Revolution.

BODGE, George Madison.

Soldiers in King Philip's war, with a history of the Indian wars of New England, 1620–1677. 1896.....r973.2 B58

"In the preparation of the work the author has given abundant evidence of patient, persistent and painstaking research. Nearly every page exhibits these qualities, but none more so than his lists of soldiers and their biographies...which are probably as correct as it is possible to make them." New England historical and genealogical register, 1897.

BRADLEY, Arthur Granville.

Fight with France for North America, [1747–1760]. [1901.] 973.2 B68

Border wars of New England, commonly called King William's and Queen Anne's wars. 1897.....973.2 D78b

"Samuel G. Drake had collected a mass of materials for the history of these two...wars...but he did not live to arrange them for publication. These materials and others his son has used in the preparation of this volume, and that with a beauty of style and arrangement to which the father could scarcely lay claim. The book is an original contribution to the history of the intercolonial wars, and has, at the same time, the popular charm which belongs to all the writings of this author. The views expressed concerning the essential conditions and issues of the struggle are believed to be sound." Larned's Literature of American history.

Making of Virginia and the middle colonies, 1578–1701. 1893. .....973.2 D78m

Contents: The English in Virginia.—The English in Maryland.—The great Iroquois league.—The Dutch on Manhattan.—The Dutch, Swedes and English on the Delaware.

"Possesses much the same character as the author's Making of New England, though it shows a somewhat less intimate acquaintance with the subject than did his earlier volume...In general the external events connected with the founding of Virginia and the middle colonies are correctly given, and the social traits of the settlers spiritedly depicted. The treatment of Long Island and of New York during the Dutch period is especially to be commended. It is a good book for the use of young people." Larned's Literature of American history.

EGGLESTON, Edward.

Beginners of a nation; a history of the source and rise of the earliest English settlements in America, with special reference to the life and character of the people. 1897. ..... 973.2 E35

Contents: Rise of the first English colony [Virginia].—The Puritan migration.—Centrifugal forces in colony-planting: The Catholic migration.—The prophet of religious freedom [Roger Williams].—New England dispersions.

"Adds little to positive knowledge of the subject, but is distinguished... by a broad and tolerant spirit and by keen criticism. Great care has been used in ascertaining and sifting facts...Written in a brilliant, sententious style, and contains some admirable characterizations of personalities." Larned's Literature of American history.

Transit of civilization from England to America in the 17th century. 1901. ..... 973.2 E35t

Contents: Mental outfit of the early colonists.—Digression concerning medical notions at the period of settlement.—Mother English, folk-speech, folk-lore and literature.—Weights and measures of conduct.—The tradition of education.—Land and labor in the early colonies.

"Like its predecessor ['Beginners of a nation'], it is terse and vivid in style and exceedingly compact in treatment...Is in no sense a narrative of colonial beginnings...It is, rather, a series of six brief monographs designed to put vividly before the reader the point of view under which the early settlers of the United States conceived the world in which they lived, and estimated conduct and life." Nation, 1901.

FERGUSON, Henry.

Essays in American history. 1894 ..... 973.2 F38

Contents: The Quakers in New England.—The witches.—Sir Edmund Andros.—The loyalists.

"Professor Ferguson presents a severe indictment of the Puritans for their treatment of the Quakers and the witches, yet treats the subject with calmness and impartiality, as well as with learning. In his defence of Andros and the loyalists he is more argumentative and assumes the attitude of a pleader. He cannot be said in either of these instances to be strictly impartial, though in relieving Andros and the loyalists of the reproach that has hitherto been cast upon them he has served the cause of truth and justice in history." Larned's Literature of American history.

FISHER, George Park.

Colonial era. 1892. (American history series.) 973.2 F53

Bibliographical note, p.325-335.

"An excellent book intended primarily for students. It covers the colonial period to 1756, treating the colonies separately and including brief discussions on 'Manners, customs and phases of intellectual progress.'" Larned's Literature of American history.

FISKE, John.

Dutch and Quaker colonies in America. 2v. 1899 ..... 973.2 F54d

v.1. The mediæval Netherlands.—Dutch influence upon England.—Verrazano and Hudson.—The West India company.—Privileges and exemptions.—King Log and King Stork.—A soldier's paternal rule.—Some affairs of New Amsterdam-Dutch and English.—Maps.

v.2. The English autocrats.—New York in 1680.—Penn's holy experiment.—Downfall of the Stuarts.—The citadel of America.—Knickerbocker society.—The Quaker commonwealth.—The migrations of sects.—Some Leisler documents.—Charter for the province of Pennsylvania, 1681.—Maps.

Next in sequence to the author's "Beginnings of New England."

"Marked by the well-known characteristics of its author—wide reading, affluence of interesting facts and ideas, firm grasp of materials, great literary skill, fondness for episodes, keen enjoyment of the picturesque, much ingenuity in hypothesis and explanation, proneness to generalization, ardent Americanism, and greater conformity to truth in the picture than in the single stroke." Dial, 1899.

New France and New England. 1902.....973.2 F54n

Contents: From Cartier to Champlain.—The beginnings of Quebec.—The lords of Acadia; Later history of Champlain.—Wilderness and empire.—Witchcraft in Salem village.—The great awakening.—Norridgewock and Louisburg.—Beginnings of the great war.—Crown Point, Fort William Henry and Ticonderoga.—Louisburg, Fort Duquesne and the fall of Quebec.

Completes the story of the settlement and development of the colonies up to the point where Mr Fiske's "American revolution" (973.3 F54a) has already taken up the narrative. It therefore gives a final unity to the sequence of volumes which he has devoted to American history.

v.1. The sea kings.—A discourse of western planting.—The land of the Powhatans.—The starving time.—Beginnings of a commonwealth.—A seminary of sedition.—The kingdom of Virginia.—The Maryland palatinate.—Leah and Rachel.

v.2. The coming of the cavaliers.—Bacon's rebellion.—William and Mary.—Maryland's vicissitudes.—Society in the Old Dominion.—The Carolina frontier.—The golden age of pirates.—From tidewater to the mountains.

This work is next in sequence to Mr Fiske's "Discovery of America."

"Beginning with the movement which led to the colonization of Virginia, the author traces the settlement of the Southern colonies and their history until 1690. Two or three chapters in the second volume contain miscellaneous facts concerning this group of colonies in the 18th century...The author writes in an interesting and popular style, but his treatment of the subject is unsystematic, and the work is not free from errors." Larned's Literature of American history.

FROTHINGHAM, Richard.

History of the United States, [to 1776]. 2v. 1846..r973.2 G77h

New edition and continuation of his "History of the rise and progress of the United States till 1688."

"One of the very best histories of our colonial period. Since Grahame wrote, investigation has thrown new light on many questions previously obscure; but the author spared no pains in the investigation of such sources as were then at his command, and he always conducts his researches with great discrimination as well as praiseworthy candor. His work is justly quoted with great respect by all later writers on our early history. In point of style, the work is clear, correct and agreeable." C. K. Adams.

JESUIT RELATIONS.

Jesuit relations and allied documents; travels and explorations of the Jesuit missionaries in New France, 1610–1791; the original French, Latin and Italian texts, with English translations and notes; ed. by Reuben Gold Thwaites. 73v. 1896–1901.....r973.2 T43j

For contents see contents book, p.33; kept at the reference desk.

For a discussion of the historical importance of the "Jesuit relations" themselves, and of the merit of this particular edition, see reviews of the various volumes in the "Nation," v.64 and following.

"The sources of information concerning the early Jesuits of New France are very copious. During a period of forty years the Superior of the mission sent, every summer, long and detailed reports embodying or accompanied by the reports of his subordinates to the Provincial of the Order at Paris, where they were annually published...forming the remarkable series known as the Jesuit Relations. Though the productions of men of scholastic training, they are simple and often crude in style, as might be expected of narratives hastily written in Indian lodges or rude mission-houses in the forest ...In respect to the value of their contents, they are exceedingly unequal. Modest records of marvellous adventures and sacrifices, and vivid pictures of forest-life, alternate with prolix and monotonous details of the conversion of individual savages, and the praiseworthy deportment of some exemplary neophyte. With regard to the condition and character of the primitive inhabitants of North America, it is impossible to exaggerate their value as an authority...The original text—whether Latin, French or Italian—is given on the left-hand, and its translation on the right-hand page." Larned's Literature of American history.

JOHNSON, Rossiter.

History of the French war ending in the conquest of Canada, with a preliminary account of the early attempts at colonization and struggles for the possession of the continent. 1882.....973.2 J36

Binder's title reads "The old French war."

"Less than half the volume is devoted to the 'Old French War,' 1756–63, the first 200 pages containing a review of early voyages, French exploration, settlement and wars in America prior to the middle of the 18th century. The work is a compilation; with no references to sources or authorities...but it admirably fulfils the purpose for which it was written—to supply a popular narrative. Generally accurate, it well brings out the romantic features of the struggle for French dominion in America, while giving due recognition to the political forces which were operative." Larned's Literature of American history.

"The history [of the period following the conquest of Canada], crowded as it is with scenes of tragic interest, with marvels of suffering and vicissitude, of heroism and endurance, has been...buried in the archives of governments, or among the obscurer records of private adventure. To rescue it from oblivion is the object of [this] work. It aims to portray the forest life and the American Indian at the period when both received their final doom." Preface.

"Covers the dealings between the English and French colonists from 1700 to the opening of the war which led to the conquest of Canada... In some respects this volume is, almost inevitably, inferior in interest to its predecessors. There is no central figure of commanding proportions...Mr. Parkman clearly brings out...the difficulties which beset the French colonists in their dealings with the Indians and which finally contributed so largely to the downfall of New France ...The chief events described...are Sir Hovenden Walker's unsuccessful expedition against Quebec in 1711, and the capture of Louisburg...in 1745." English historical review, 1893.

Champlain edition.

"The events described...fall within the...years from 1670 to 1690, and laid the foundation of a scheme of policy pursued with much apparent chance of success until the Seven Years' War put a final stop to French hopes of deciding the future of America...Besides La Salle, Mr. Parkman has to describe several supplementary heroes, especially the amiable and pious Marquette...and the bragging, lying, courageous, and amusing friar Hennepin, who supplies the comic element of the book...Mr. Parkman tells the story with great spirit, and in an excellent style; his own experience amongst the savage descendants of La Salle's Indians enables him to add many characteristic sketches of scenery and manners." Saturday review, 1869.

"The history of the final struggle between France and England for the control of North America...Mr. Parkman has spared no pains to make himself master of his subject. He has worked minutely at documentary evidence both in Europe and in America, and at the same time has succeeded in keeping himself well above his facts; for his story, rich as it is in picturesque details, is never overweighted and never loses its continuity...Mr. Parkman's work ends with a masterly summary of the war in Europe, and a short chapter full of weighty words on the results of the conflict as a whole on the history of the world." Saturday review, 1884.

"A book which will take its place as a masterpiece in military history—the best account of the most important war in our colonial period." Nation, 1884.

Memoir upon the late war in North America between the French and English, 1755–60; observations upon the manners and customs of the Indians. 2v. 1866..qr973.2 P86

Pouchot was captain in a French battalion sent out to oppose the English in Canada, and held several important posts there. Being afterwards attacked by some political enemies he is supposed to have written these memoirs as his justification.

POWNALL, Thomas.

Administration of the colonies. 1768 ..... r973.2 P87

Pownall lived in America from 1753 to 1760, being successively lieutenant-governor of New Jersey, governor of Massachusetts, and of South Carolina. He had liberal views of the relation of England to the colonies and was a warm friend of the American provinces. In this famous book he tries to show the true relation between America and England, how far England should govern and how far the colonies might govern themselves.

Rogers was an American officer, noted in the French and Indian war as commander of the corps called Rogers' rangers.

SANDERS, Daniel Clarke.

History of the Indian wars with the first settlers of the United States to the commencement of the late war, with an appendix containing accounts of the battles fought by Gen. Andrew Jackson. 1828.....973.2 S21

"The mystery which surrounded the authorship, history, and origin of this very rare volume, has been slowly dispelled by successive fragments of information. So few copies have survived...that its very existence was unknown to the most zealous collectors of Indian and Vermont history. Published anonymously without preface, it was known to but few that the author was the Rev. Daniel Clark Sanders, President of the University of Vermont. Immediately after its appearance, some person, evidently a personal enemy of the author, published an acrimonious critique upon the book...Such was the effect of the article...that the work was suppressed...In fact, so nearly complete was the destruction of the book, that it was forgotten by...his biographers." Field's Indian bibliography.

According to Sabin, the edition of 1828 is nearly, or quite as rare as the original (1812).

BOTTA, Carlo Giuseppe Guglielmo.

History of the War of the independence of the United States of America; tr. fr. the Italian by G. A. Otis. 2v. 1834. .....973.3 B64

Biography of the author, v.2, p.465–466; List of works consulted, v.2, p.467–468.

"The most valuable of the earlier histories of the Revolution, and not yet considered antiquated. Military history predominates. The work closes with the retirement of Washington in 1783. The perspective of the history is bad in places, owing to its being based on European sources. It follows classical forms in putting imaginary speeches into the mouths of the chief actors. A lofty style adds to the heroic mold in which the forefathers of the republic are cast." Larned's Literature of American history.

BOUDINOT, Elias.

Journal; or, Historical recollections of American events during the Revolutionary war; copied from his own original manuscript. 1894.....qr973.3 B65

"Literal and exact. Valuable source for Revolutionary history by one who took a prominent part in events, but miscellaneous and not very extensive." Larned's Literature of American history.

BROOKS, Elbridge Streeter.

Century book of the American revolution; the story of the pilgrimage of a party of young people to the battlefields of the American revolution. 1897.....j973.3 B77

BUTTERFIELD, Consul Willshire.

Historical account of the expedition against Sandusky under Col. William Crawford, 1782. 1873.....r973.3 B98

Written largely from manuscript authorities.

"Crawford's campaign was one of the most notable of the distinct military enterprises of the Western Border war of the Revolution." Preface.

CARRINGTON, Henry Beebe.

Battles of the American revolution. 1888.....q973.3 C23

The same. 1876.....qr973.3 C23

"The most important of the military histories of the Revolutionary War...He lays down at the beginning the principles of military science, which he applies to his consideration of the several battles." Winsor's Narrative and critical history of America.

Washington the soldier. 1898.....973.3 C23w

Detailed account of Washington's campaigns and an estimate of his qualities as soldier and commander. Together with the account of Washington's military career is included a brief synopsis of the careers of his generals. Many valuable maps, a glossary of military terms, a chronological and biographical index and appendixes containing special statistics and facts complete the work.

CLARK, Gen. George Rogers.

Sketch of his campaign in the Illinois in 1778–9, with an introduction by Henry Pirtle and an appendix containing the public and private instructions to Col. Clark, and Major Bowman's journal of the taking of Post St. Vincents. 1869. (Ohio valley historical series.) r973.3 C52

"Colonel Clark's campaign was a very brief one, and in fighting not particularly arduous, as would appear from his own showing, but it was full of daring, and heroic endurance; it resulted immediately in the reduction of the British military posts between the Ohio and Mississippi...and it finally secured to us all that vast territory...A little of the romance which belongs to all French colonial history hangs about Colonel Clark's unconscious page...but for the most part it is a plain and summary account of the military operations, and depends for its chief interest upon the view it affords of the character of as brave and shrewd a soldier and as bad a speller as ever lived." Atlantic monthly, 1869.

CLINTON, George.

Public papers, 1777–1795, 1801–1804. v.1–8. 1899–1904..r973.3 C595

Submitted to the legislature as the report of the state historian.

Reprint of certain manuscript volumes at Albany, with notes by Mr Hugh Hastings, state historian. Clinton was the first governor of New York state.

CLINTON, Sir Henry.

Narrative of the campaign in 1781 in North America. 1805. .....qr973.3 C59

Large paper edition, reprinted from the edition of 1783.

Clinton defends himself against the charge that the British defeats of 1781 were due to his mismanagement. The appendix contains correspondence in regard to the campaign.

History of the battle of Breed's Hill, by Major-generals William Heath, Henry Lee, James Wilkinson and Henry Dearborn. 1831. (In Heath, William. Memoirs, p.359–401.).....r973.3 H387

These four officers either took part in the engagement or were particularly well qualified to describe it. Some statements of eyewitnesses are added.

COFFIN, Charles Carleton.

Bunker Hill; the story told in letters from the battle field by British officers engaged. 1875 ..... r973.3 D78b
"These 11 British narratives are preceded by Mr. Drake's brief introduction, in which Prescott is cited as the American commander, rather than Putnam...His work is...marked by wide knowledge, fair temper, critical judgment, cautious method, and a direct style, yet the book is, on the whole, for the special student, rather than the general reader." Larned's Literature of American history.

DRAKE, Samuel Adams.

Burgoyne's invasion of 1777, with a sketch of the American invasion of Canada, 1775–76. 1896. (Decisive events in American history.) 973.3 D78b
"Useful little book, compiled with intelligence and skill, on the basis of recent knowledge, and marked by judgment and fairness, and a good English style...Its most conspicuous merit lies in its lucid tracing of the military movements. Primarily for young readers, but interesting to the general reader, of any age." Larned's Literature of American history.

Campaign of Trenton, 1776–77. 1895. (Decisive events in American history.) 973.3 D78
"Intelligently compiled from trustworthy sources, and shows an effort to be accurate and fair in its statements." Larned's Literature of American history.

General Israel Putnam, the commander at Bunker Hill. 1875. ..... r973.3 D78b Bound with his "Bunker Hill."
Discusses the question as to whether Prescott or Putnam was in command at the battle of Bunker Hill.

EELKING, Max von.

German allied troops in the North American war of independence, 1776–1783; tr. and abridged fr. the German by J. G. Rosengarten. 1893 ..... r973.3 E32
"Manuscript authorities," p.11–14.
"It remains the best source of information in this field, as regards knowledge and judgment, though parts of it are thought by Mr. E. J. Lowell to require acceptance with caution. The style is straightforward (and is well translated); and, to a reader who cares for the subject, the book is full of interest." Larned's Literature of American history.

ELLET, Mrs Elizabeth Fries (Lummis).

Domestic history of the American revolution. 1879....973.3 E51
"The value of this book is chiefly due to the fact that no other writer has treated the same field with any fulness. The bases for the statements here compiled were, in part, tradition...and, in part, manuscript records. The book is not free from errors, but is marked by fairmindedness and a not unattractive style. It has neither illustrations, maps, nor index. For the general reader." Larned's Literature of American history.

FISKE, John.

The American revolution, [1761–1782]. 2v. 1894.....973.3 F54a
"To an extraordinary degree he has succeeded in his endeavor to make plain the events of the American revolution. His style is so transparent and limpid that it seems to disparage all claims to attention... There is no straining after effect,—nothing but the simplest narrative of events which are expected to be attractive in themselves and not to need the ornament of elaborate dressing-up." Dial, 1891.

Critical period of American history, 1783–1789. 1894.....973.3 F54

Bibliographical note, p.351–356.

"In a narrow compass Mr. Fiske offers us the ripe fruit of careful studies...Mr. Fiske does not overestimate the importance of the epoch of transition when he says that 'the period of five years following the Peace of 1783 was the most critical moment in the history of the American people.'" Nation, 1889.

War of independence. 1893. (Riverside library for young people.) j973.3 F54

"Collateral reading," p.195–196.

FRENEAU, Philip.

Some account of the capture of the ship "Aurora." 1899..r973.3 F92

Sketch of the author, by Jay Milles, p.7–13.

"The first publication of a manuscript left by Philip Freneau, the poet of the American Revolution, who was a passenger on the ship at the time it fell in with the British frigate Iris. The account is picturesque, though it shows no trace of the poetical talent that undoubtedly was the author's, and its value is greatly enhanced by the numerous illustrations, and by the admirable introductory memoir." Dial, 1900.

FROTHINGHAM, Richard.

History of the siege of Boston and of the battles of Lexington, Concord and Bunker Hill. 1890.....973.3 F97

"Author a Charlestown antiquary. Work based on thorough study of materials accessible at the time. Well illustrated with plans. Well written though often dry. Somewhat laudatory and not always sound from a military point of view. The standard work on the subject." Larned's Literature of American history.

GIBBES, Robert Wilson, ed.

Documentary history of the American revolution, consisting of letters and papers relating to the contest for liberty in South Carolina. v.1. 1855.....r973.3 G35

v.1. 1764–1776.

"The most valuable collection of documents in these volumes is the 'Horry papers' which relate to Marion's career. Most of the other papers are of purely local interest, and the collection is less important than its title indicates." Larned's Literature of American history.

GILMORE, James Roberts.

Rear-guard of the Revolution, [1760–1782]. 1891.....973.3 G42

History of the services of the early settlers of eastern Tennessee in acting as the rear-guard of the Revolution by holding in check the savages west of the mountains and by annihilating the left wing of Cornwallis's army in the decisive battle of King's mountain.

GREENE, George Washington.

Historical view of the American revolution. 1865....r973.3 G82

"Twelve lectures, originally delivered before the Lowell Institute in Boston, and designed to present in popular form the most important phases of the Revolution. It is a good book to read in connection with one of the standard histories of the war. Its especial merit is the fact that it presents in striking light the salient points of the Revolution, unencumbered with the details of unimportant affairs." C. K. Adams.

HADDEN, James Murray.

Journal kept in Canada and upon Burgoyne's campaign, 1776 and 1777, also Orders kept by him and issued by Sir Guy Carleton, Lieut. Gen. John Burgoyne and Maj. Gen. William Phillips, in 1776, 1777 and 1778, with explanatory chapter and notes by Horatio Rogers. 1884. (Munsell's historical series.).....r973.3 H12

Authorities, p.17–33.

"Hadden's Journal and Orderly books which are here printed together form one of the most important pieces of evidence of Burgoyne's expedition." Larned's Literature of American history.

HEART, Jonathan.
Journal on the march from Connecticut to Fort Pitt, from the 7th of September to the 12th of October, 1785, to which is added the Dickinson-Harmar correspondence. 1885. .....r973.3 H38
Heart (1748–91) served in the Revolutionary war, and in the winter of 1784–85 received a commission as captain in a regiment organized for service on the western frontier. The journal chronicles details of the journey. The correspondence between Gov. Dickinson of Pennsylvania and Lieut. Col. Harmar is chiefly in regard to the organization and march of the troops.

HEATH, William.
Memoirs; ed. by William Abbatt, to which is added, Accounts of the battle of Bunker Hill, by Generals Dearborn, Lee and Wilkinson. 1901.....r973.3 H387
Heath (1737–1814) was a major-general in the Revolutionary war. His "Memoirs," which extend through nearly the entire period of the war, were first published in 1798. This work is a reprint of the original. "Valuable for accounts of the retreat of the British from Lexington, battle of Bunker Hill, and the later engagements about New York. Also concerns the prisoners after Burgoyne's surrender and the coöperation with the French forces." Larned's Literature of American history.

Yorktown campaign and the surrender of Cornwallis, 1781. 1881. .....973.3 J36y

"Based on careful study of the original sources. Accurate and impartial but not readable. Supplied with good plans. The best single work on the Yorktown campaign." Larned's Literature of American history.

JONES, Thomas.

History of New York during the Revolutionary war, and of the leading events in the other colonies at that period; ed. by E. F. de Lancey. 2v. 1879.....qr973.3 J41

Author was one of the judges of the Supreme court of New York just before and during the war, went to England in 1781, and when peace was negotiated was prevented from returning, being one of the 59 persons included in the New York act of attainder, by which their estates were confiscated and their lives threatened. This history was written in England during the closing years of his life and is colored by all the intense feeling of the time as well as by the personal bitterness and vindictiveness of the man himself. The editor's careful notes add much to the value of the work.

LECKY, William Edward Hartpole.

The American revolution, 1763–1783; the chapters and passages relating to America from the author's History of England in the 18th century; ed. with historical and bibliographical notes by J. A. Woodburn. 1898..973.3 L48

"One of the most instructive and judicious histories of the Revolution." American historical review, 1899.

LEE, Henry, 1787–1837.

Campaign of 1781 in the Carolinas, with remarks, historical and critical, on Johnson's Life of Greene, to which is added an appendix of original documents relating to the history of the Revolution. 1824.....r973.3 L52

"The value of the volume consists (1) in the light thrown by these 'remarks' on Greene's career; (2) in the fact that the author had access to papers now lost; and (3) in an appendix of documents most of which can now be found printed in other places. Style turgid and difficult to read continuously." Larned's Literature of American history.

LODGE, Henry Cabot.

Story of the Revolution. 2v. 1898.....973.3 L76

Appeared in "Scribner's magazine," v.23–24, 1898.

"May be regarded as one of the latest contributions to the gratification of the prevailing taste in our country for military stories and pictures ...The reader will be charmed with the author's graphic and vigorous, often eloquent language. But he may be influenced by it to pass over unscanned or unquestioned statements of doubtful meaning or correctness...The illustrations are mostly works of the imagination or out of date. No references or authorities are given. Figures and dates are scarce." American historical review, 1900.

LOSSING, Benson John.

Pictorial field-book of the Revolution. 2v. 1850.....q973.3 L91

The same. 2v. 1860.....qr973.3 L91

"The result of a personal examination of the scenes described. Illustrations made from actual sketches. Replete with anecdotes derived from conversations with veterans or embodying local traditions. The principal drawback to its use is the fact that it is arranged according to the author's journeys and not according to sequence of events. A stimulating and useful book." Larned's Literature of American history.

LOWELL, Edward Jackson.

The Hessians, and the other German auxiliaries of Great Britain in the Revolutionary war. 1884.....973.3 L95

List of German authorities, p.293–296.

Author has included much that belongs rather to biography or to anecdote than to history, his object being to give an idea of what sort of people the auxiliaries were, and of what impression America and the Americans made upon them. These passages enliven the narrative without detracting from its historical value.

"He has done his best to present to the public a really trustworthy work, in creditable distinction from those who have treated the same subject in the English language." Nation, 1884.

LUDLOW, John Malcolm.

War of American independence, 1775–1783. 1895. (Epochs of modern history.) 973.3 L97

Brief summary of chief causes and events of the war.

"Author is an intelligent Englishman who has written other works on American subjects In about 250 pages this subject is very intelligently covered...A compilation, but it is skilfully made, and marked by judgment, by exceptional fair-mindedness, by a careful method, and by an attractive style." Larned's Literature of American history.

MACKENZIE, Roderick.

Strictures on Lt. Col. Tarleton's "History of the campaigns of 1780 and 1781 in the southern provinces of North America." 1788 ..... r973.3 M18

Author was an officer in the English army during the American revolution, and here criticizes Tarleton's account of men and events.

MAPS—New York (city). (1782.)

B. F. Stevens's facsimile of the unpublished British head quarters coloured manuscript map of New York & environs, (1782); reproduced from the original drawing in the War office, London. 1900 ..... qr973.3 M

Size, 10x4 feet, folded in f° cover; scale, about 6½ inches to 1 mile.

During their successive occupations of New York and its environs in the Revolutionary war, the British commanders-in-chief caused this manuscript map to be kept up. It extends from below Guanas bay to the heights of Spuyten Duyvil, about 19 miles, showing the fortifications, topography, etc. of the whole island of New York, with the harbor, islands, waterways, and river frontages on the Hudson and East rivers, the military works on Long Island, including Brooklyn, and parts of the Jersey shore.

MINUTES of a conspiracy against the liberties of America. 1865. ..... qr973.3 M73

Reprint of a very rare publication which originally appeared in 1786. Original title-page reads "Minutes of the trial and examination of certain persons in the province of New York charged with being engaged in a conspiracy against the authority of the Congress and the liberties of America."

Preface states that the Minutes were "discovered (on the late capture of New-York by the British troops) among the papers of a person who appears to have been secretary to the committee." They relate to a conspiracy against Congress, and particularly against Washington, whom the conspirators proposed to carry off.

Diary of the American revolution. 2v. 1860 ..... r973.3 M87

"In two octavo volumes of about 1100 pages in all he puts in chronological sequence his abundance of excerpts 'from the Whig and Tory newspapers, private diaries and other contemporaneous writings,' urging that 'the errors and lampoons of a period belong as much to its history as the facts and flatteries.'" Winsor's Narrative and critical history of America.

MORSE, Jedidiah.

Annals of the American revolution; or, A record of the causes which produced the independence of the Republic, and A biography of the principal military officers. 1824. .....r973.3 M92

"This was for many years the standard book on the Revolution... An appendix contains biographies of the most prominent military officers of the war. They are composed largely of anecdotes and traditions which have been set aright by later investigations. They are of little value save as curiosities." Larned's Literature of American history.

PITKIN, Timothy.

Political and civil history of the United States, 1763–1797. 2v. 1828. .....r973.3 P66

"The book is exceedingly valuable to investigators...It is a dry record of facts, unrelieved by any spirited narrative, or any attempt at delineation of character. The style is not pure, nor is the manner elevated. The author's knowledge was...extensive; and his judgment impartial; but he showed utter lack of skill in the art of putting his materials together into attractive form." C. K. Adams.

Observations on the nature of civil liberty, the principles of government, and the justice and policy of the war with America. 1776. .....r973.3 P94

"A celebrated tract by a somewhat famous philosopher and economist against the justice and policy of the British government's course toward the colonies. It is said that the encouragement it gave had an inconsiderable share in bringing about the Declaration of Independence, and it gained for its author great repute. There is an appendix on the state of the British national debt and the income and expenditures of the government since the French war." Larned's Literature of American history.

RAMSAY, David.

History of the American revolution. 2v. in 1. 1789....r973.3 R17

"One of the most substantial and worthy accounts of our Revolutionary period. In the light of more modern investigation, it is not difficult to criticise some of the details of the work...Perhaps the author dwells with too much minuteness on military affairs, and has somewhat too little to say of the great causes of the events which he describes." C. K. Adams.

History of the revolution of South-Carolina from a British province to an independent state. 2v. 1785.....r973.3 R17h

"Compilation of the names of Revolutionary officers and privates, arranged by regiments or companies; of distinguished prisoners of war; of the officers of the Society of the Cincinnati; of the officers entitled to land pay; of foreign officers; and of officers receiving land warrants. These lists are valuable for genealogical purposes. A number of letters from paymasters and other officers is added, together with legislation on military land warrants. These serve the purpose of those who are tracing Revolutionary claims." Larned's Literature of American history.

ST. CLAIR, Gen. Arthur.

St. Clair papers; life and public services of St. Clair; arranged by W. H. Smith. 2v. 1882.....r973.3 S13

"A well-digested edition of the St. Clair papers, classified chronologically, and provided with a serviceable index. The first volume contains the editor's own study of the 'Life and Public Services of Arthur St. Clair'...and more than one-third of the St. Clair Papers, this portion embracing St. Clair's correspondence during the period of the boundary troubles between Pennsylvania and Virginia, also during Lord Dunmore's war and the entire Revolutionary struggle. The second volume is devoted entirely to papers touching the government and defence of the Northwestern Territory...It is chiefly for his...merits as the pioneer of law and institutions in the Northwest that [St. Clair] ought to be known; and it is perhaps the chief merit of Mr. Smith's work that he has laid special stress upon the above introduction of government by St. Clair under the Ordinance of 1787." Nation, 1882.

SLOANE, William Milligan.

The French war and the Revolution, [1756–1783]. 1893. (American history series.) 973.3 S63

Bibliography, p.393–396.

"A compendious account, covering the period 1756–83. The conditions do not admit of much new matter or striking originality of treatment; but the state of the French and English colonies at the outbreak of the last French and Indian war, the causes of the Revolution, and the connection between the Revolution and changing American political ideas, are well brought out. The style is agreeable." Larned's Literature of American history.

"Sparks had access to the papers of the Department of State, and made here the first authoritative collection of the Revolutionary diplomatic correspondence...Sparks's method of editing has fallen into disrepute: he printed only such documents as he thought of importance, and he did not hesitate to omit or alter passages containing what he considered irrelevant or objectionable matter. His texts, accordingly, cannot be relied upon. For most purposes, the collection has now been superseded by Wharton's Revolutionary diplomatic correspondence." Larned's Literature of American history.

Campaign in Virginia, 1781; an exact reprint of six rare pamphlets on the Clinton-Cornwallis controversy. 2v. 1888. ..... qr973.3 S84

v.1. Sir Henry Clinton's Narrative.—Earl Cornwallis's Answer.—Clinton's Observations on some parts of the Answer of Cornwallis to Clinton.—Reply to Clinton's Narrative, by Themistocles.—A parting word; or, A summary view of the controversy between Clinton and Cornwallis.—Chronological correspondence, 17 May 1780–31 May 1781.
v.2. Chronological correspondence, 4 June 1781–27 Dec. 1781.—Extracts from the journals of the House of lords.—Correspondance du Lord G. Germain.—Additional correspondence of Clinton and Cornwallis, 1780–81.

"Contains practically everything concerning the controversy between Clinton and Cornwallis as to which was responsible for the fortification of Yorktown." Larned's Literature of American history.

STEVENS, Benjamin Franklin, comp.

Facsimiles of manuscripts in European archives relating to America. 1773–1783. 25v. 1889–98 ..... qr973.3 S84f

"The inaccessibility of most manuscripts, the general demand to-day for [illegible] sources...and the stimulation to work caused by examination of originals...were inducements enough to present the best possible substitute—photographic facsimiles on enduring paper, beautifully imitating in 'fibre, texture, color, sizing, and mill-finish' some models of the Revolutionary period...It is our greatest historical monument since Force's 'Archives' and altogether the stateliest in form." Nation, 1898.

STONE, Edwin Martin.

Our French allies in the American revolution. 1884....qr973.3 S87

"A mass of information, but undigested and ill-edited." Larned's Literature of American history.

Campaign of Lieut. Gen. John Burgoyne and the expedition of Lieut. Col. Barry St. Leger. 1877.....973.3 S88

"It is frankly a compilation, but it is the work of a historian who has made this field of investigation his own, in a half dozen other historical studies of the Burgoyne campaign, and is usually marked by fair judgment and temper...Intended for the general reader." Larned's Literature of American history.

STRYKER, William Scudder.

The battles of Trenton and Princeton. 1898.....973.3 S92

"Authorites," p.486–492.

"Covers the period from the beginning of the retreat through the Jerseys until after the battle of Princeton...The author uses many documents never before laid under contribution, especially German records of the Hessian soldiers." Larned's Literature of American history.

TARLETON, Sir Banastre.

History of the campaigns of 1780 and 1781 in the southern provinces of North America. 1787.....r973.3 T21

Colonel Tarleton's history gives a minute detail of all the military operations in both Carolinas, and part of Virginia, until the surrender of Lord Cornwallis with his whole army at Yorktown, Oct. 19, 1781.

THACHER, James.

Military journal during the American revolution, with biographical sketches of several general officers. 1827. .....973.3 T33

The same, to which is added the life of Washington, his farewell address, etc. 1862. .....r973.3 T33

"Dr. Thacher (1754–1844) served as a surgeon in the American army, and his journal has the great value of first-hand knowledge of the events." Larned's Literature of American history.

Pulpit of the American revolution; or, The political sermons of the period of 1776. 1860. .....r973.3 T41

"Collection of nine discourses, ranging from Dr. Mayhew's (Jan. 30, 1750) to Dr. Stiles' Election sermon, 1783, to prove that 'to the Puritan pulpit we owe the moral force which won our independence' ...A good edition of characteristically stirring discourses which have occasionally an astonishingly modern ring to them." Larned's Literature of American history.

TIFFANY, Mrs Nina (Moore).

From colony to commonwealth; stories of the Revolutionary days in Boston. 1897.....j973.3 T45

TOWER, Charlemagne.

Marquis de La Fayette in the American revolution, with some account of the attitude of France toward the War of independence. 2v. 1895.....973.3 T65

"Mr. Tower's account is most inclusive, careful, and satisfactory... It is not too much to say that he has quadrupled the amount of accessible material concerning Lafayette, relating to this period, and it is difficult to recall a biographical work in American history containing such a wealth of original material concerning the subject treated. For its accounts of the battles of Brandywine, Monmouth, and the campaign of 1781 in Virginia, it is unequaled; and scarcely less good is its outline of the French services to the United States during the Revolution. Mr. Tower writes clearly and interestingly, and has the...advantage of being an admirable linguist; so his translations can be absolutely relied upon." Larned's Literature of American history.

TOWLE MANUFACTURING CO.

Georgian; a pattern of spoons, forks and all other pieces of table flat ware, also an account of the chief events of the War of the revolution and the acts of oppression which preceded and provoked it. 1899.....r973.3 T65

The account of the Revolution is entirely distinct from the silverware designs, and is illustrated with pictures scattered through the text, among them a representation of old Fort Pitt.

TREVELYAN, Sir George Otto.

The American revolution. 2v. in 3. 1899–1903.....973.3 T73

v.1. 1766–1776.
v.2, pt.1. 1776.
v.2, pt.2. 1777–1778.

In attempting to write a sequel to his early history of Charles James Fox Mr Trevelyan found the story of Fox from 1774 to 1782 so inextricably interwoven with that of the American revolution that he was finally led into writing this history.

"With Fox as a central figure, the story of the American Revolution is told with freshness, no small knowledge, and in a spirit of generous sympathy with all that was best in the Revolution...Here and there are brilliant sketches of men and manners, and terse epigrammatic sayings recalling pages, and these by no means the least effective, of the author's illustrious uncle." The Times (London), 1899.

WASHINGTON, George, & Irvine, William.

Washington–Irvine correspondence; official letters concerning military affairs in the west from 1781 to 1783; arranged by C. W. Butterfield. 1882.....r973.3 W27w

WASHINGTON at Valley Forge, together with the Duché correspondence. 1858. .....r973.3 W27

Brief account of the winter at Valley Forge. Duché was a Philadelphia clergyman, who, despairing of the success of the patriot cause, wrote strongly urging Washington to abandon it. The matter came before Congress and Duché was compelled to leave the country.

WATSON, Henry Clay.

Boston tea party, and other stories of the American revolution. 1888. .....j973.3 W31b

Noble deeds of our fathers, as told by soldiers of the Revolution. 1888. .....j973.3 W31

WHARTON, Francis, ed.

Revolutionary diplomatic correspondence of the United States, with preliminary index and notes historical and legal. 6v. 1889. (United States. 50th cong. 1st sess. House. Misc. doc. no.603.).....r973.3 W59

Brief sketch of the life of Francis Wharton, by J. B. Moore, v.1, p.11–27.

"Was authorized by an Act of Congress, August 13, 1888, and was designed to correct, complete, and enlarge the Diplomatic correspondence of the Revolution [r973.3 S73d], by Jared Sparks, 1829–1830...It is a mine of wealth to the student of the diplomatic history of the Revolution, for it contains papers from published memoirs, family archives, and the records of the Department of State, all edited with scrupulous care. The period covered is from 1775 to 1785. Volume first is entirely taken up with an elaborate table of contents, a life of Dr. Wharton (d. 1889)...and an introduction, long, discursive and ponderous...on the development of diplomacy and the careers of the diplomats of the United States during the period covered." Larned's Literature of American history.

973.4 Constitutional period

1789–1812

For United States constitutional history, see 342.7

ADAMS, Henry, b. 1838.

History of the United States of America. 9v. 1889–91....973.4 A21

v.1–2. 1801–1805.
v.3–4. 1805–1809.
v.5–6. 1809–1813.
v.7–9. 1813–1817.

"The most valuable history of this important period, remarkable alike for its research, its penetrating analysis of character and political tendencies, and for the flood of light which it throws upon every phase of the foreign relations of the country...Mr. Adams is at his best in unravelling the complications of diplomacy, and in analyzing the mind and feeling of the different sections of the country." Larned's Literature of American history.

ADAMS, John Quincy.

The jubilee of the constitution; a discourse delivered at the request of the New York historical society, 30th of Apr. 1839, being the 50th anniversary of the inauguration of George Washington, with an account of the celebration. 1839. .....r973 T99

Bound with other pamphlets.

Correspondence between John Quincy Adams and several citizens of Massachusetts concerning the charge of a design to dissolve the Union, alleged to have existed in that state, to which are added additional papers illustrative of the subject. 1829.....r973.4 A21

CONWAY, Moncure Daniel.

Omitted chapters of history disclosed in the life and papers of Edmund Randolph. 1889.....973.4 C76

"A significant contribution to our knowledge of the political events in which Edmund Randolph bore a leading part. The services of Randolph in the constitutional development of the United States are clearly set forth...So far as Randolph's integrity is concerned, Mr. Conway has shown, by documents in French, British and American archives, how baseless is the imputation that Randolph sought, in secret collusion with the French minister, to thwart the policy of the administration he served. He has also conclusively disposed of the fiction by which he is made to appear on the books of the United States Treasury as a defaulter. From the fresh materials gathered Mr. Conway has painted a new portrait wholly unlike the traditional one drawn by Jefferson." Political science quarterly, 1889.

Memoirs of the administrations of Washington and John Adams; ed. fr. the papers of Oliver Wolcott. 2v. 1846. .....r973.4 G36

"A source of primary importance for the history of the Federalist party, consisting mainly of letters to and from Wolcott. The editor's narrative connecting and summarizing the original papers is clear and accurate, but his judgments are strongly biased against the Republicans. Wolcott's correspondence throws a full light on the ideas and purposes of the Federalists, the beginnings of party organization, and upon the practical work of putting the new government under the Constitution into operation." Larned's Literature of American history.

HARPER, Robert Goodloe.

Select works. v.1. 1814.....r973.4 H28

Contents: Address on the treaty of Nov. 1794 with Great Britain.—Observations on the dispute with France, 1797.—Proceedings of France in Switzerland.—Abstract of instructions to the envoys extraordinary, for settling the differences with France.—Abstract of the dispatches from the envoys extraordinary of the United States relative to the demands made on them by the French government, as the price of an audience.—Speech on the necessity of resisting the aggressions and encroachments of France.—Speech on the constitutional powers of the president and Senate in the appointment of foreign ministers.—Letter on the state of affairs between the United States and France in July 1798.—Speech on the impeachability of a senator of the United States, before the Senate in Blount's impeachment.—Speech on the motion for leave to bring in a bill to prevent "unauthorised correspondence with any foreign government with intent to influence its conduct towards the United States or to defeat the measures of our own government."—Speech on the motion to continue in force the sedition law.—Letter containing a view of the principles and system of the Federalists.

HERMANN, Binger.
Louisiana purchase and our title west of the Rocky mountains, with a review of annexation by the United States. 1898.....q973.4 H47
The same. 1900. (United States. 56th cong. 2d sess. House. Doc. no.708.).....qr973.4 H47
"Hermann argues the hardly disputed thesis that the Louisiana cession did not include the Oregon territory. He presents a brief history of American expansion and sketches of men prominent in the movement...He explored no unfamiliar sources and gives no evidence of sound scholarship, while he is inaccurate in details. His dull style is occasionally enlivened by cheap rhetorical outbursts." Larned's Literature of American history.

HOSMER, James Kendall.
History of the Louisiana purchase. 1902.....973.4 H82
"Traces rapidly the early history of Louisiana; the subsequent steps in the negotiations between France and the United States being followed in more detail...The novelty of the work is the fuller account than other English writers have given of the negotiations as narrated in the 'Mémoires' of Lucien Bonaparte." Nation, 1902.
Mr Hosmer has approached the subject from the French side, making large use of French authorities and giving at length some important secret history not fully set forth heretofore in English.

MONROE, James, 1758–1831.
View of the conduct of the executive in the foreign affairs of the United States connected with the mission to the French republic, 1794–6. 1797.....r973.4 M83
"An attack on Washington's management of foreign affairs. Gives Monroe's account of his diplomatic mission in France in 1795–6. It reveals the man's mediocrity; and convicts him of the offences charged against him by his enemies. It is an ill-written performance; little skill and less judgment are apparent, and the whole is decidedly unfair and ill tempered. The appendix contains many useful documents, and gives Monroe's letters expressing his opinions of the state of France in 1795–6." Larned's Literature of American history.

RIVES, William Cabell.
History of the life and times of James Madison. 3v. 1866–68. .....r973.4 R52
"Founded on original and, in some instances, unpublished documents ...Ends with the election of John Adams to the presidency. Although Rives was the victim of violent prejudices, his volumes are of value for the period of the formation of the Constitution and the presidency of Washington." C. K. Adams.

SAFFORD, William Harrison.
Blennerhassett papers, embodying the private journal of Blennerhassett and hitherto unpublished correspondence of Burr and others, account of the "Spanish association of Kentucky" and a memoir of Blennerhassett. 1891. .....r973.4 S12
Contains much interesting and important information, particularly concerning Blennerhassett's connection with Aaron Burr, and the latter's western expedition. The letters and journals were never intended for publication and often contain very sharp criticisms of men and events.

ST. CLAIR, Gen. Arthur.
Narrative of the campaign against the Indians, 1791, and the reports of the committees of Congress to inquire into the causes of the failure thereof. 1812.....r973.4 S13
"St. Clair's own story of his disastrous campaign, with documents.

Written long after the event and the work of a disappointed man. Of value only to the student." Larned's Literature of American history.

UNITED STATES—State department.

French spoliations; report of the secretary of state relative to the papers on file in the department touching the unsettled claims of citizens of the United States against France, for spoliations prior to July 31, 1801. 1884. (48th cong. 1st sess. Senate. Ex. doc. no.205.).....r973.4 U25

"Consists of three lists: an alphabetical list of claimants against France on account of the capture of American vessels, showing the names of the vessel and master, disposition of the vessel and of the claim, etc.; (2) an alphabetical list of vessels, with references to the first list; (3) a list of names incidentally mentioned in the other two lists, with references thereto. The first list indicates whether or not evidence exists in support of each claim. A list is also given of contemporary memoranda and official reports concerning French spoliations on file in the Department of State." Larned's Literature of American history.

BURGESS, John William.
The middle period, 1817–1858. 1897. (American history series.) 973.5 B89
Bibliography, p.497–502.
"Portrays the struggle between the national and states-rights theories, tracing their growth from the Missouri Compromise. The Mexican cessions and their political consequences are discussed at disproportionate length. Mr. Burgess possesses keen logical power; has written from the sources; holds pronounced views and is not unbiased, though he usually states both sides fairly and moderately. In considering the Mexican war he surrenders this attitude, justifying the United States in all points. A stimulating book." Larned's Literature of American history.

"Not only is the history of the campaigning of 1812–14 attempted, but also that of the civil administration and leading political events of the period extending from the Revolution to the treaty of Ghent. To these are added personal sketches and biographies not only of prominent public characters, but of officers, soldiers, sailors, and scouts, ambassadors, writers, and editors...Note-book and pencil in hand, the author has travelled more than ten thousand miles between the great Lakes and the Gulf of Mexico, visiting nearly all the scenes of the incidents recorded, receiving accounts from survivors, and sketching scenery, battle-fields, and notable localities. The result is a handsome volume of more than one thousand pages, which one may open anywhere at random and find interesting." Nation, 1869.

Nullification and secession in the United States. 1897..973.5 P87

Contents: The nullification resolutions of 1798.—Plot for a Northern confederacy in 1803–4.—Burr's attempt at cleaving the Union in the Southwest.—New England nullification in 1812–14.—South Carolina nullification in 1832.—Secession in 1861.

The author hopes to aid in creating a more generous national sentiment, to convince all sections that no one section has exclusive claim to national righteousness, in short, to recognize the full part of the South in the building of the nation.

ROOSEVELT, Theodore.

Naval war of 1812. 1894. .....973.5 R68

The author has thoroughly studied preceding histories, the published documents of both the English and American governments, and especially the material in our own Navy department, much of which had never been touched before, and has written an extremely interesting history of the war. Of many of the engagements he gives very complete accounts, carefully considering the comparative skill and power of the opposing forces.

RUSSELL, J. comp.
History of the war between the United States and Great Britain, 1812–1815; compiled chiefly from public documents. 1815. .....r973.5 R91
Contains a list of vessels captured from Great Britain during the war.

Bound with other pamphlets.

TOMPKINS, Daniel D.
Public papers of Daniel D. Tompkins, governor of New York, 1807–1817. v.1–3. 1898–1902.....r973.5 T59 v.1–3. Military.
Submitted to the Legislature as the report of the state historian.
Valuable contribution to the history of the War of 1812.

WILLIAMS, John S.
History of the invasion and capture of Washington and events which preceded and followed. 1857.....r973.5 W74
Contemporary accounts are quoted at length. The primary object of the book is to remove the blame which the author believes has been undeservedly cast on American soldiers for the defeat at Bladensburg in 1814.

WILLIAMS, Samuel, 1786–1859.
Two western campaigns in the War of 1812–13. 1870. (Ohio valley historical series.).....r977 E84
The campaigns described are the expedition of Capt. Henry Brush with supplies for General Hull, in 1812, and the expedition of Governor Meigs for the relief of Fort Meigs, in 1813.
Bound with Espy's "Memorandums of a tour in Ohio, Kentucky and Indiana territory."

CUTTS, James Madison.
Conquest of California and New Mexico by the United States in 1846 & 1847. 1847.....r973.6 C95
Consists chiefly of official dispatches.

JAY, William.
Review of the causes and consequences of the Mexican war. 1849. .....973.6 J22
"Written from the Abolitionist point of view. The facts presented are drawn from the sources then available and are incontrovertible. Jay held that the war was merely one act in a conspiracy to secure Mexican territory. He is very severe on the slaveholding politicians and on the policy and management of the war...The story of the Mexican war from this side has never been better told, or more forcibly and logically argued." Larned's Literature of American history.

LADD, Horatio Oliver.
History of the War with Mexico. 1883.....973.6 L13
"Ought to be welcomed by a great many persons who have wished a compendious account...The illustrations are for the most part of the usual kind—fancy pictures—but good of their kind." Nation, 1883.

LIVERMORE, Abiel Abbot.
War with Mexico reviewed. 1850.....r973.6 L74
"A prize essay written in the interest of universal peace. It is of very little consequence save as it presents in very strong light some of the causes of the war. The value of the book is in chapters 3–8, where is clearly presented, from extracts of writings and speeches, the desire of the South to acquire new territory in the interests of slavery." C. K. Adams.

MANSFIELD, Edward Deering.
Mexican war; a history of its origin, and a detailed account of the victories which terminated in the surrender of the capital, with the official dispatches of the generals, to which is added the treaty of peace, and valuable tables of the strength and losses of the United States army. 1851. .....r973.6 M34

OSWANDEL, J. Jacob.
Notes of the Mexican war, 1846–48. 1885.....973.6 O29
Author was a member of the 1st regiment, Pennsylvania volunteers. The book consists of the journal which he kept during the war.

WILCOX, Cadmus Marcellus.
History of the Mexican war. 1892.....973.6 W71
Roster of officers, p.609–709.
Names of the original members of the Aztec club, p.710–711.
"An intensive study of the military operations of the war from an expert standpoint. The writer served as a second lieutenant, and a portion of the description is from personal observation." Larned's Literature of American history.

CUSSONS, John.

Glance at current history. 1899.....973.7 C94

Contents: A glance at current history.—On history as taught in our schools.—On "teachable" history.—On the outworn theory of government by consent.—On granting forgiveness before it is asked.—On the "treachery" of the American Indian.

Also published with the title "United States 'history' as the Yankee makes and takes it."

Protest against the histories in which the Civil war is discussed entirely from a Northern point of view. In this connection Goldwin Smith's "United States" is severely criticized. Concludes with a defense of the American Indian.

DAVIS, Jefferson.

Rise and fall of the Confederate government. 2v. 1881..973.7 D31

"Largely a history of the military operations of the Civil War, adding few facts to the controversy. Prefaced by excursive essays to prove on historical authority the right of secession. Probably the most scholarly recital of the 'states rights' arguments, since it was written by the leader of the movement after mature reflection. Concerning the Confederate states it reveals little inside history; no personal reminiscence; controversial rather than descriptive. Closes with the earlier period of Reconstruction." Larned's Literature of American history.

Short history of the Confederate States of America. 1890.....r973.7 D31

"The introductory chapters were written 'to prove by historical authority that the states had the reserved power of seceding.' The larger portion of the book treats of the southern conduct of the war to show 'how thorough was their conviction of the justice of their cause.' Contrasts especially the conduct of the northern and southern troops in the treatment of captives and neutrals. The accuracy of the military details has been challenged by certain Confederate generals. The personality of the writer is kept in the background. He closes the narrative with his capture." Larned's Literature of American history.

DODGE, Theodore Ayrault.

Bird's-eye view of our Civil war. 1884.....973.7 D67

"The style is simple and clear, the tone elevated and fair, the conception of military operations comprehensive, and the criticisms upon them judicious...Evidently...the work of an experienced soldier... Many evidences of haste and inaccuracy...Data seem, in a number of instances, to have been imperfectly used." Nation, 1883.

DRAPER, John William.

History of the American civil war. 3v. 1867–70.....973.7 D79

"This book is pervaded with Dr. Draper's peculiar views of the causes of national development...His beliefs are essentially those of Buckle. At bottom, he has no faith in other causes than those which can be traced directly to Nature. Climate is the great controlling force. He attaches his faith principally to the January isothermal of forty-one degrees...As an attempt to build a history on a philosophical foundation, the work cannot be called a very signal success. Until it can be shown that an isothermal has something to do with such blunders as those at Fredericksburg and Chickamauga, most men will regard Dr. Draper's theories as not proved." C. K. Adams.

FISKE, John.

Mississippi valley in the Civil war. 1900.....973.7 F54

Does not attempt to cover the less important incidents, but treats those dominant movements which prophesied and led to the final result of the war.

GUERNSEY, Alfred Hudson, & Alden, H. M.

Harper's pictorial history of the great Rebellion. 2v. 1866–68.....qr973.7 H28

"During the actual progress of the war, Harper's weekly was the leading illustrated paper in bringing its scenes home in pictorial sketches by artists on the spot. When the war ended, the natural sequel was the collecting, selecting, connecting, and...editing this war matter in separate form. This book is the result, and in its way, text and pictures can never be wholly superseded as an authentic current narrative and illustration of the period." Larned's Literature of American history.

HEADLEY, Joel Tyler.

The great Rebellion; a history of the Civil war. 2v. 1863–66.....973.7 H38

"A reasonably adequate view of the war, for uncritical readers, as seen by one who is in the midst of the northern Union sentiment. The style is simple, and the defects of the narrative are mainly due to inaccessibility of full documentary evidence, such as later compilations now put at the command of all writers." Larned's Literature of American history.

JOHNSON, Rossiter.

Short history of the war of secession. 1889.....973.7 J364

"Interesting and accurate...except so far as later monographic publications have brought new light to bear on details." Leypoldt & Iles's Books for girls and women.

LOGAN, Gen. John Alexander, 1826–86.

The great conspiracy; its origin and history. 1886.....973.7 L77

"Sketches the growth of the contest between the Union and the States, and...the history of the War of the Rebellion. The author keeps himself entirely in the background and mingles the civic with the military conduct of the war...Too partisan and bitter against the Confederates to rank as history." Larned's Literature of American history.

Rebellion record; diary of American events, with supplement. 12v. 1861–73.....973.7 M87

"Gives an important diary of events from the outbreak of the war to its close. In addition to the more formal documents introduced, it contains many maps and portraits, as well as a vast number of newspaper scraps, songs, biographical sketches, military orders, and proclamations." C. K. Adams.

The same. 4v. 1875–88.....973.7 P23

v.3–4 ed. by J. P. Nicholson.

"v.4 contains the seventh volume of the French edition, and so much of the eighth volume as was contained in the manuscripts which the ...author carried with him when he was banished from France." Preface to v.4.

"The fairness of his spirit has been manifest in every chapter, his military criticism is rarely at fault, his powers of description give his pages great vividness and stirring life, and his sympathy with the national cause for which he fought is sincere and outspoken. No other historian of the Civil War can compare with him in grasp of the subject as a whole and in judicious proportioning of the parts." Nation, 1888.

POLLARD, Edward Albert.

First year of the war. 1862.....973.7 P76f

Commences with a discussion of the causes of the war and ends with the fall of New Orleans and the battles around Richmond. Written from the Southern standpoint.

Lost cause; a Southern history of the war of the Confederates. 1867.....973.7 P76l

The same. 1867.....973.7 P76l

"A book struck off at a white heat by a Richmond editor of the most uncompromising secessionist principles, who was utterly unappreciative of northern character and sentiment. Valuable for the southern side of the slavery controversy and the Civil War, though necessarily untrustworthy because of the writer's temper, lack of judgment and inability to get complete information. Pollard is savagely hostile to President Davis. The book is written in an interesting, but turgid and oratorical style." Larned's Literature of American history.

Southern history of the war. 2v. 1866.....r973.7 P76

Written during the Civil war by the editor of the "Richmond examiner."

"A Secessionist à l'outrance, believing with all the strength of his nature in the Confederate cause, he was yet a caustic critic of the Confederate government." Publisher's announcement.

ROPES, John Codman.

Story of the Civil war; a concise account of the war in the United States, 1861–1865. v.1–2. 1895–98.....973.7 R68s v.1. To the opening of the campaigns of 1862.

v.2. The campaigns of 1862.

List of works cited, v.1, p.11–14; v.2, p.7–12.

A political and military history. The author's special object is "to write of the subjects treated from the standpoint of each of the contending parties."

"Incontestably the most intelligent as well as the most complete and impartial analysis of the campaigns and battles of the Great Rebellion, so far given to the world. The author has used his abundant materials with all the acumen and skill of a trained lawyer and critic and with unerring certainty, in the singularly clear and succinct narrative, which he has given us." American historical review, 1900.

The author died in 1899, soon after the publication of the second volume, leaving the work only a little more than half finished.

SCHWAB, John Christopher.

Confederate States of America, 1861–1865; a financial and industrial history of the South during the Civil war. 1901. (Yale bicentennial publications.).....973.7 S39

List of authorities, p.313–323.

"The most scholarly and comprehensive effort yet made to portray other than military and naval affairs of the seceding states. The book is additionally noteworthy in that it is a study made by a Northern man, with the evident purpose of scientific impartiality... The investigator has gone into the difficult and scattered sources most elaborately." American historical review, 1902.

The same; atlas. 2v. 1891–95.....qr973.7 U253a

"A monumental work...the most important, by far, of all books concerned with the Civil War period. It is divided into four series. The first contains the strictly military reports and correspondence relating to campaigns in the field, with the statistical returns of the armies, both Union and Confederate. The second gives the records and correspondence relating to prisoners of war and prisoners of state so far as the military authorities dealt with them. The third [embodies] everything relating to calls for national troops, whether militia or volunteers, and the apportionment to the states, the enforcement of drafts, etc.: also the reports, etc., of the administrative bureaus of the War Department, and the correspondence between the national and the state authorities. The fourth [is] the compilation of the Confederate records similar to those of the third series, so far as they have been preserved...The first is much the largest and most essential to the study of the period." Larned's Literature of American history.

Political history. Principles involved

BUCHANAN, James.

The administration on the eve of the Rebellion; a history of four years before the war. 1865.....r973.7 B84

"Object...was to show that the war had its origin in the intense antagonisms begotten by the mutual recriminations of abolitionists and fire-eaters...The principal value of the book is in the collection of views of different men brought together." C. K. Adams.

v.2. 1862–1865.

"Meant chiefly for students of political science; and it is not to be doubted that these will find much of interest in Professor Burgess's discussions of various constitutional and political questions, and in his judgments of persons." American historical review, 1903.

CURRY, Jabez Lamar Monroe.

Civil history of the government of the Confederate States, with some personal reminiscences. 1901.....973.7 C93

"A popular work in defense of secession, with a description of the excellencies of the Confederate Constitution and an outline of the political history of the Confederacy." American historical review, 1902.

DUNNING, William Archibald.

Essays on the Civil war and reconstruction. 1898.....973.7 D92

Contents: The constitution of the United States in Civil war.—The constitution of the United States in reconstruction.—Military government during reconstruction.—The process of reconstruction.—The impeachment and trial of President Johnson.—Are the states equal under the constitution?—American political philosophy.

"The military history of the Civil war is familiar or readily accessible; the constitutional and political history is neither. As to the Reconstruction, the term is to most people merely a synonym for bad government, and conveys no idea of the profound problems of statecraft that had to be solved between 1865 and 1870. These essays... have been written with reference to this situation." Preface.

GRANGER, Moses Moorhead.

Washington vs. Jefferson; the case tried by battle in 1861–65. 1898 ..... 973.7 G78

Brief, plain, popular statement of the opposing doctrines of states' rights, and of the supremacy of the national government, and a narrative of the growth in this vital difference of opinions from Washington and Jefferson down through the Civil war.

GREELEY, Horace.

American conflict; a history of the great Rebellion, intended to exhibit especially its moral and political phases, with the drift and progress of American opinion respecting human slavery from 1776 to [1865]. 2v. 1864–66. ..... 973.7 G82

"Distinctively a political rather than a military history of the war... The first half of the first volume is perhaps the best existing portrayal of the causes that led gradually up to the conflict. No man was more familiar with American politics from 1830 to 1860 than Mr. Greeley; and of the vast stores of his knowledge he made good use in the volume before us. The part of slavery is especially well portrayed, and the cumulative power of the story carries the reader forward with irresistible force. The military portion of the history is less fortunate." C. K. Adams.

KING, Horatio.

Turning on the light; dispassionate survey of Buchanan's administration. 1895 ..... 973.7 K26

"Author...was Assistant Postmaster-General under President Buchanan, and Acting Postmaster-General after Mr. Holt's appointment as Secretary of War. About half the contents are an unsuccessful attempt to defend the administrative acts of President Buchanan dealing with secession, during the few months preceding the Civil War." Larned's Literature of American history.

LOWELL, James Russell.

Political essays. 1892 ..... 973.7 L95

Contents: The American tract society.—The election in November [1860].—E pluribus unum.—Pickens-and-stealin's rebellion.—General McClellan's report.—The Rebellion; its causes and consequences.—McClellan or Lincoln. — Abraham Lincoln.— Reconstruction.— Scotch the snake, or kill it?—The president on the stump.—The Seward-Johnson reaction.

POLLARD, Edward Albert.

Rival administrations; Richmond and Washington, Dec. 1863. 1864 ..... r973.7 P76r

Pollard believed in the Southern cause but disliked Jefferson Davis. He finds evidences of weakness at Richmond, and vigor and decision, although accompanied by brutality, at Washington.

SCOTT, Eben. Greenough.

Reconstruction during the Civil war in the United States. 1895. ..... 973.7 S4251

"Consists largely of an introduction which presents the rights of the states against the encroachments of the Federal Union, the lack of coercive power in the latter, and the just demand of the seceding states for restoration unimpaired. Hence true reconstruction history is treated very briefly and largely by extracts from speeches of the radical Republicans in Congress." Larned's Literature of American history.

STEPHENS, Alexander Hamilton.

Constitutional view of the late war between the states. 2v. 1868–70 ..... 973.7 S83

"These volumes, by one of the ablest as well as one of the most conspicuous champions of the South, might very properly have been called a history of the doctrines of nullification and secession. But they are not simply a history, they are an argument...There has probably been no abler presentation of the argument of the South." C. K. Adams.

VALLANDIGHAM, Clement Laird.

Record of C. L. Vallandigham on abolition, the Union and the Civil war. 1863 ..... 973.7 V15

Vallandigham belonged to the extreme states' rights wing of the Democratic party and believed that the South could not be compelled to abolish slavery and that the Union could not be preserved by force of arms.

Diplomatic history

BIGELOW, John.

France and the Confederate navy, 1862–1868; an international episode. 1888 ..... 973.7 B47

"What he playfully terms an 'international episode'...was nothing less than the attempt of the Confederacy, with the active coöperation of the Emperor Napoleon III., to make France play the same part for the Confederates that she played in 1778 for the Revolutionary colonies. The story has up to this time remained buried in the captured Confederate archives." Nation, 1888.

CALLAHAN, James Morton.

Diplomatic history of the Southern confederacy. 1901. (Albert Shaw lectures on diplomatic history, 1900.) 973.7 C13

"Attempts to give a careful and purely historical presentation of the theories, purposes, policies, diplomatic efforts, and difficulties of the Secessionists, as reflected from their official archives and other original records. It traces the inner working of the diplomatic machine ...observes the attitude, motives, and policy of the great nations with whom the Confederate agents sought to negotiate, and throws light upon international questions arising between the United States and foreign powers." Preface.

HARRIS, Thomas Le Grand.

The Trent affair, including a review of English and American relations at the beginning of the Civil war. 1896 .. 973.7 H29

"Complete survey of the question; the author being thoroughly informed, and writing from the original sources. The conclusions reached are in all essential particulars favorable to the legal position taken by the English ministry." Larned's Literature of American history.

Naval history

AMMEN, Daniel.

The Atlantic coast. 1883. (The navy in the Civil war.) .. 973.7 A51

Account of naval operations from Cape Hatteras to Cape Florida.

"Throughout the book Union and Confederate reports of the same occurrences are joined to support or check each other. The work indicates laborious research and straightforward honesty...Altogether the book is a pleasant and instructive one." Nation, 1883.

MAHAN, Capt. Alfred Thayer.

The Gulf and inland waters. 1883. (The navy in the Civil war.) 973.7 M25

"Deals principally with the service of the navy at Mobile and on the Mississippi and its tributaries." Nation, 1883.

MATTHEWS, Franklin.

Our navy in time of war, (1861–1898). 1899.....j973.7 M47

PORTER, Admiral David Dixon.

Naval history of the Civil war. 1886.....qr973.7 P83

"Admiral Porter's accuracy of statement has been seriously impeached. His report of conversations and proceedings during President Lincoln's visit to Richmond (the Admiral being present) is said to be untrue to a degree which cannot easily be accounted for." Larned's Literature of American history.

SCHARF, John Thomas.

History of the Confederate States navy. 1894.....q973.7 S31

The same. 1887.....r973.7 S31

"In writing a book upon this great and attractive subject, Mr. Scharf has been fortunate in having an absolutely unoccupied field. Having been himself one of the pupils of the Naval academy at Richmond, and having borne a creditable part in some of the famous exploits of his service, he has exceptional advantages for the tests of authorship...The most extraordinary feature, however, of Mr. Scharf's otherwise useful book is the undercurrent of political animosity and bitterness which penetrates all his references to the causes of the war and the conduct and motives of the Union leaders." Nation, 1887.

SEMMES, Admiral Raphael.

Service afloat; or, The career of the cruisers Sumter and Alabama during the war between the states. 1887....r973.7 S47

Running title reads "Memoirs of service afloat."

"Interesting story of the Sumter and the Alabama, Confederate cruisers, their construction, and their exploits. The cruise of the Alabama in foreign parts is well told. The author commanded each vessel and writes from personal experience. There are a few preliminary chapters justifying the South in trying to secede from the Union." Larned's Literature of American history.

Cruise of the Alabama and the Sumter, from private journals. 1864.....r973.7 S47c

SINCLAIR, Arthur.

Two years on the Alabama. 1896.....973.7 S61

An account of the Alabama from the time of her escape from the Mersey down to her destruction by the Kearsarge. The author was fifth lieutenant of the Alabama.

"Good-tempered, though one-sided, and a distinct contribution to civil war literature." Dial, 1896.

SOLEY, James Russell.

The blockade and the cruisers. 1890. (The navy in the Civil war.).....973.7 S68

"The first service the navy was called on to perform in the war was to establish the blockade...The experiences of the blockading squadrons are given in detail—in Chesapeake Bay, on the Atlantic coast, and in the Gulf...The principal naval action immediately connected with the blockade and the attempts to break it was that of the Monitor and Merrimac...The book is well arranged, written clearly, without technical terms, and shows great familiarity with the subject." Nation, 1883.

Sailor boys of '61. 1887.....j973.7 S68s

TAYLOR, Thomas E.

Running the blockade. 1896.....973.7 T25

In the interests of English merchants the author ran the Northern blockade many times during the Civil war. He relates his many adventures and narrow escapes.

UNITED STATES—Navy department.

Official records of the Union and Confederate navies in the War of the rebellion, 1st ser., v.1–date. 1894–date..r973.7 U25

Authentic contemporaneous records of the war. Includes the reports, orders and correspondence relating to all naval operations, condition of the navy, before and during the war, construction of the Confederate navy, statistics and correspondence relating to naval prisoners, etc.

Special campaigns and battles

BARNARD, John Gross.

C. S. A. and the battle of Bull Run. 1862.....r973.7 B25

Barnard was brigadier-general and chief engineer of the Army of the Potomac. Extremely brief history of the secession of the Confederate States is followed by an account of the battle, taken almost entirely from official reports. Five maps of the battle-field are included.

BOYNTON, Henry Van Ness.

Was General Thomas slow at Nashville? 1896.....973.7 B67

Appeared in the New York "Sun," Aug. 9, 1896.

Thomas was severely criticized for his delay in attacking Hood at Nashville in 1864. The facts are briefly reviewed and Thomas's action defended.

CIST, Gen. Henry Martyn.

Army of the Cumberland. 1892. (Campaigns of the Civil war.).....973.7 C49

"A conscientious and truthful narrative of the operations of the Army of the Cumberland from the date of its organization to the end of the Chattanooga campaign, but it does not deal with the battle of Shiloh, in which that army took such an important part." Nation, 1882.

COLLIS, Charles Henry Tucky.

Bound with "Sketch of the 126th regiment Pennsylvania volunteers."

CONFEDERATE STATES OF AMERICA—War department.

Reports of the operations of the Army of northern Virginia, from June 1862 to and including the battle at Fredericksburg, Dec. 13, 1862. 2v. 1864.....r973.7 C74r

COX, Gen. Jacob Dolson.

Atlanta. 1882. (Campaigns of the Civil war.).....973.7 C85

"General Cox has given us a clear and straightforward account of the memorable campaign of Sherman against Atlanta...The author, himself a distinguished participant in the movements he describes, shows great familiarity with all the details of the campaign, and a minute comprehension of the varied topography of the field of operations. His narrative is careful and painstaking, and his style lucid, though he is likely to become wearisome to other than professional readers, from the particularity with which he describes the positions and movements of the troops." Nation, 1882.

Battle of Franklin, Tennessee, Nov. 30, 1864. 1897.....973.7 C85b

"Author was a volunteer officer of distinction, an experienced literary worker, especially in the history of the Civil War. In this book he makes an important contribution to our acquaintance with a campaign which has been the subject of much discussion, especially in its bearing upon the respective merits of Sherman and Thomas." Larned's Literature of American history.

March to the sea; Franklin and Nashville. 1892. (Campaigns of the Civil war.) 973.7 C85m

"Concise but clear narrative of Thomas's defence of Tennessee against Hood in the fall of 1864, and of Sherman's 'March to the Sea' and his subsequent campaign in the Carolinas down to the close of the war." Nation, 1882.

Second battle of Bull Run, as connected with the Fitz-John Porter case. 1882 ..... r973.7 C853

"In this little book General Cox has presented some ingenious arguments in opposition to the conclusion arrived at by the Board of Officers who re-examined the case of General Porter. He seems to have felt it to be his duty to reiterate his belief in Porter's guilt." Nation, 1882.

CRAWFORD, Gen. Samuel Wylie.

Genesis of the Civil war; the story of Sumter. 1887 ..... 973.7 C87

Also published with the title "History of the fall of Fort Sumter."

"The new matter which Gen. Crawford has collected is most of it very valuable...In collating the material he has collected, the author has avoided carefully—too carefully, we think—the expression of his own judgment, preferring to let the principal characters speak through their own documents and recorded conversations." Nation, 1888.

DAVIS, Nicholas A.

Campaign from Texas to Maryland. 1863 ..... r973.7 D32

Davis was chaplain of the 4th Texas regiment. Gives very brief account of the part Texas played in the war, with muster roll of the regiment.

DOUBLEDAY, Gen. Abner.

Chancellorsville and Gettysburg. 1892. (Campaigns of the Civil war.) 973.7 D75

Interesting though not unbiased record of these important battles.

"Such recollections are very interesting, but they are in no sense history; and the whole tenor of this book is so essentially different from that of the series in which it is placed...that we hardly think it necessary to follow these personal recollections in detail." Nation, 1882.

Gettysburg made plain; a succinct account of the campaign and battles. 1888 ..... r973.7 D75g

"Gen. Doubleday...was active in high command throughout the battle, and had an active part afterward in the discussion of the controversial questions which arose...His position and means of knowledge make him a weighty factor in the discussion." Larned's Literature of American history.

Reminiscences of Forts Sumter and Moultrie, 1860–61. 1876. ..... r973.7 D75r

Author was a captain in the 1st United States artillery at Fort Moultrie and afterwards at Fort Sumter. His book is a valuable memoir, vigorous and interesting in style.

DRAKE, Samuel Adams.

Battle of Gettysburg, 1863. 1893. (Decisive events in American history.) 973.7 D78

Pictures the field and the surroundings of the fight, Lee's march into Pennsylvania, the points of strategic importance, the battle itself and the retreat. Includes a chapter of entertaining anecdotes and miscellany, and an estimate of the forces of the Army of the Potomac.

Campaigns in Virginia, 1861–1862. 1895. (Military historical society of Massachusetts. Papers.) 973.7 D97

Contents: Patterson's Shenandoah campaign, by Col. T. L. Livermore.—The Peninsular campaign: General McClellan's plans, by J. C. Ropes.—The siege of Yorktown, by Gen. J. C. Palfrey.—After the fall of Yorktown, by Gen. F. W. Palfrey.—The Seven days' battles, to Malvern hill, by Gen. F. W. Palfrey.—The battle of Malvern hill, by Gen. F. W. Palfrey.—Comments on the campaign, by Gen. C. A. Whittier.—Operations in the Shenandoah valley, March 10–June 9, 1862, by Maj. J. F. Huntington.

Bibliography, p.47–51.
Revised and enlarged edition of "The Peninsular campaign of General McClellan."

Virginia campaign of 1862 under General Pope. 1895. (Military historical society of Massachusetts. Papers.) 973.7 D97

Contents: Gen. Halleck's military administration in the summer of 1862, by Gen. S. M. Quincy.—The campaign of Gen. Pope in Virginia; 1st part, to the 19th of Aug. 1862, by Col. C. P. Horton; 2d and 3d parts, to the end of the campaign, by J. C. Ropes.—The 27th of August 1862, by Gen. G. H. Gordon. — The battle of Chantilly and a revisit to the field, by Gen. C. F. Walcott.—Strength of the forces under Pope and Lee, by Col. William Allen.—The case of Fitz-John Porter, by Gen. S. M. Weld.—The conduct of Gen. McClellan at Alexandria in August 1862, by Col. Franklin Haven.—The same subject, by Gen. S. M. Weld.—Review of the reports of Col. Haven and Gen. Weld, by Col. Theodore Lyman.—The conduct of Generals McClellan and Halleck in August 1862; and the case of Fitz-John Porter, by Col. T. L. Livermore.—The hearing in the case of Fitz-John Porter, by J. C. Ropes.—The battle of Cedar Mountain, Aug. 9, 1862, by Gen. G. L. Andrews.
List of books cited, p.11–21.

FORCE, Gen. Manning Ferguson.

From Fort Henry to Corinth. 1889. (Campaigns of the Civil war.) 973.7 F75

"Though every page bears evidence of careful research—of an earnest desire to adhere strictly to truth, to avoid opinions, and steer clear of controversy—yet it must be confessed that the story is tedious." Nation, 1881.

FORSYTH, Gen. George Alexander.

Thrilling days in army life. 1900 ..... 973.7 F78

Contents: A frontier fight.—An Apache raid.—Sheridan's ride.—The closing scene at Appomattox Court-House.
Reprinted from "Harper's magazine" and "Harper's weekly."

GREENE, Francis Vinton.

The Mississippi. 1892. (Campaigns of the Civil war.) 973.7 G83

Carefully prepared history of operations for control of the river from May 1861, till the capture of Vicksburg, July 1863.

GREENE, Jacob Lyman.

Gen. William B. Franklin and the operations of the left wing at the battle of Fredericksburg, Dec. 13, 1862. 1900. ..... 973.7 G836

Reviews facts relating to the battle of Fredericksburg, seeking to exonerate Gen. Franklin from the charges of disobedience brought against him by the committee on the conduct of the war.

HUMPHREYS, Gen. Andrew Atkinson.

From Gettysburg to the Rapidan; the Army of the Potomac, July 1863 to April 1864. 1883 ..... 973.7 H92f

The contents of this volume were intended to form the first part of v.12 of the "Campaigns of the Civil war," but owing to the length of that work are published separately.

Virginia campaign of '64 and '65. 1890. (Campaigns of the Civil war.) 973.7 H92

Describes movements of armies under Grant and Lee clearly, concisely and in a fair spirit.

JACOBS, Michael.

Notes on the rebel invasion of Maryland and Pennsylvania and the battle of Gettysburg. 1864 ..... 973.7 J13

JOHNSON, Robert Underwood, and others, ed.

Battles and leaders of the Civil war; contributions by Union and Confederate officers. 4v. 1884-88.....q973.7 J36

"The war papers originally published in the Century magazine, carefully edited, beautifully printed and illustrated, and thoroughly indexed, form an extremely interesting and valuable history of the war." Larned's Literature of American history.

"The novel scheme of printing side by side the story of battles and movements as told by men of opposite sides who participated in them, was a delicate experiment, but has proved a great success." Nation, 1888.

McCLELLAN, Gen. George Brinton.

Report on the organization of the Army of the Potomac and of its campaigns in Virginia and Maryland, 1861–1862. 1864. (United States. 38th cong. 1st sess. House. Ex. doc. no.15.).....r973.7 M13

The same, to which is added an account of the campaign in western Virginia. 1864.....r973.7 M13r

Title reads "Report on the organization and campaigns of the Army of the Potomac."

"He has omitted many documents essential to the formation of a just opinion, and it is only when we have read these also, in the Report of the Committee on the Conduct of the War, that we feel the full weight of the cumulative evidence going to show the hearty support in men and confidence that he received from the administration, and, when there were no more men to be sent, and confidence began to yield before irresistible facts, the prolonged forbearance with which he was still favored." Lowell's Political essays.

MARKS, James J.

Peninsula campaign in Virginia. 1864.....973.7 M39

The same. 1864.....r973.7 M39

Author was an army chaplain. He gives some of his experiences in caring for the sick and wounded.

NELSON, Alanson H.

Battles of Chancellorsville and Gettysburg. 1899.....973.7 N22

NEW YORK (state)—Monuments commission for the battlefields of Gettysburg and Chattanooga.

Final report on the battlefield of Gettysburg. 3v. 1900..qr973.7 N26

"New York at Gettysburg," by W. F. Fox, v.1, p.3–109.

Contains itineraries, rosters, casualty lists, roll of honor, etc., followed by orations and addresses at the dedication of monuments, descriptions of monuments, and historical sketches. Excellently illustrated, and furnished with 15 maps.

NICHOLS, George Ward.

Story of the great march; from the diary of a staff officer. 1866.....973.7 N31

The volume is compiled from notes taken on the spot, and has, therefore freshness, raciness and vigor. Gives many details and many of the author's sentiments and opinions. Is not, however, a real military narrative and does not show the working out of the great design which underlay the march. Adapted from Nation, 1865.

NICOLAY, John George.

Outbreak of rebellion. 1890. (Campaigns of the Civil war.) 973.7 N32

"He narrates those events, and those only, which are worth remembering; his style is never dull, often brilliant, always clear and concise; he speaks directly and to the point; and whether we agree with his opinions or not, he gains and holds our undivided attention." Nation, 1881.

PALFREY, Gen. Francis Winthrop.

Antietam and Fredericksburg. 1890. (Campaigns of the Civil war.).....973.7 P18

"The story is one of great interest, both to the generation which took part in it and to that which has grown up since the war. Its manner of treatment and its literary execution are admirable. One battle being a dismal failure, and the other little more than a half-success, the narration of them must involve any author in constant criticism. General Palfrey has not been sparing of this, but we believe his strictures are in general abundantly justified by the facts." Nation, 1882.

PARTON, James.

General Butler in New Orleans, 1862. 1864.....r973.7 P27

"After a preliminary history of the subject's career in civil and military life, he devotes the larger part of the book to a defence, with elaborate discussion, of Butler's administration, in his capacity of Department Commander of the city of New Orleans for eight months in 1862. Vivacious, readable, but one-sided and not settling all the charges against its hero." Larned's Literature of American history.

PATTERSON, Gen. Robert.

Narrative of the campaign in the valley of the Shenandoah, 1861. 1865.....qr973.7 P31

"This is General Patterson's vindication of himself in his conduct of operations collateral to the Bull Run battle, for which he was much criticised." Larned's Literature of American history.

POND, George Edward.

Shenandoah valley in 1864. 1892. (Campaigns of the Civil war.).....973.7 P78

"Deals with one of the most exciting and interesting of the subordinate campaigns of the war. It is written with unusual clearness; the arrangement is lucid, the style good, the description simple and straightforward...He is probably unconscious that his field of view is so filled with the deeds of the Federal army and its leaders as to have space for only a distant, imperfect, and sometimes incorrect view of the Confederates." Nation, 1883.

PORTER, Gen. Fitz John.

Proceedings and report of the board of army officers convened Apr. 12, 1878 in the case of Fitz-John Porter, with the proceedings in the original trial and papers relating thereto. 3v. in 2. 1879. (United States. 46th cong. 1st. sess. Senate. Ex. doc. no.37.).....r973.7 P836p

Report of the board of officers in the case of Fitz-John Porter; General Porter's narrative of the services of the fifth army corps in 1862 in northern Virginia; Argument of Anson Maltby, counsel for Porter, before the advisory board of army officers at West Point, Jan. 1879; Argument of John C. Bullitt, counsel for Porter, before the advisory board of army officers at West Point, Jan. 1879; Mr Choate's argument for petitioner, West Point, 1879. 1878–79.....r973.7 P836

POWELL, William Henry.

Fifth army corps, Army of the Potomac; operations during the Civil war. 1896.....r973.7 P87

"For the general reader...it has the defect of being limited to the standpoint of a minor fraction of the army in Virginia. A more serious fault is that the author, in his laudation of McClellan as a commander, pays no attention to the definite criticisms of that general's campaigns which are based on the fuller knowledge gained since 1862." Nation, 1896.

REED, Samuel Rockwell.

Vicksburg campaign and the battles about Chattanooga under the command of Grant. 1882.....r973.7 R28

"Mr. Reed was a brilliant editorial writer on the Cincinnati Gazette, whose style was clear and forcible, and whose role was that of advocatus diaboli, challenging the admission of a great reputation to the list of the immortals. His criticism of Grant (and incidentally of Sherman) is acute, ingenious, and sophistical, bitterly hostile, unrelenting, and armed by whatever a very industrious study of the records could discover." Larned's Literature of American history.

RHODES, Charles Dudley.

History of the cavalry of the Army of the Potomac, including that of the Army of Virginia (Pope's), and the history of the operations of the Federal cavalry in West Virginia. 1900.....973.7 R38

"Works consulted," p.174.

ROMAN, Alfred.

Military operations of Beauregard, 1861–1865. 2v. 1884..r973.7 R65

"Not so much a history of General Beauregard's career as it is a fulsome panegyric of him, an overstrained and often disingenuous defence of everything he did, or did not do, during the war, and an unfair and ill-natured critique upon the conduct of his superiors ...Is enriched by a mass of official documents, many of which are published for the first time. The arrangement is clear and the style easy and attractive." Nation, 1884.

ROPES, John Codman.

The army under Pope. 1891. (Campaigns of the Civil war.) 973.7 R68

"The accounts of the battles of Groveton, Second Bull Run or Manassas, and Chantilly show a careful sifting of the reports, and with the maps give any reader a clear and brief compendium of those important combats." Literary world, 1882.

SCHNECK, Benjamin Shroder.

Burning of Chambersburg, Pa. 1864.....r973.7 S35

Gives in the form of letters details and incidents relative to the burning of the city by the Confederates in 1864.

SMITH, Gen. Gustavus Woodson.

Battle of Seven Pines. 1891.....r973.7 S64

"General Smith succeeded to the command of the Confederate Army in front of Richmond during the battle of Seven Pines (or Fair Oaks), when General Johnston was disabled...Controversy subsequently arose as to the parts of President Davis, and Generals Lee, Johnston, Smith, Longstreet and Huger on the field. General Smith's views are here presented...His contribution to the discussion is, of course, essential to it." Larned's Literature of American history.

STINE, James Henry.

History of the Army of the Potomac. 1893.....973.7 S85

"This book grew out of the appointment of the author by the Association of the First Army Corps, to be the historian of that Corps of the Army of the Potomac. It has many of the characteristics of an historical address to such a body of men, such as eulogies of men not widely known, anecdotes of individual bravery, and the opinions of officers of various ranks upon the Union and the Confederate side concerning battles. It is therefore material for the more methodical historian rather than a sifted discussion of the rise and conduct of an army." Larned's Literature of American history.

SWINTON, William.

Campaigns of the Army of the Potomac. 1866.....973.7 S97c

"The reputation of Mr. Swinton's 'Army of the Potomac' is so well established, that we need do no more than to say here, once for all, that it is a work well-nigh indispensable to the student of the war." Nation, 1882.

Twelve decisive battles of the [Civil] war. 1867.....973.7 S97

Contents: Bull Run.—Donelson.—Shiloh.—Antietam.—Murfreesboro.—The Monitor and Merrimac.—Vicksburg.—Gettysburg.—Wilderness.—Atlanta.—Nashville.—Five Forks.

The same. 1867.....r973.7 S97t

Readable popular account.

UNITED STATES—Conduct of the war, Joint select committee on.
Report on the massacre at Fort Pillow. 1864. (38th cong. 1st sess. House. Report no.65.).....r973.7 U2532
"Testimony taken by Messrs. Wade and Gooch as a sub-committee of the joint select committee on the conduct of the war, together with its report, which was adopted as that of the full committee. The testimony was taken chiefly at the Mound City, Ill. hospital, most of the witnesses being wounded survivors of the Fort-Pillow affair, which occurred April 12, 1864. The operations of Gen. Forrest against Union City, Tenn., and Paducah, Ky., just before the capture of Fort Pillow, are also touched upon." Larned's Literature of American history.

VAN HORNE, Thomas Budd.
History of the Army of the Cumberland. 3v. and atlas. 1875.....r973.7 V19
"Mr. Van Horne does not profess to give us much general criticism of campaigns, wisely limiting himself, in the main, to the narration of events as they passed. In the nature of the case, his work is strongly eulogistic." Nation, 1875.

WALKER, Francis Amasa.
History of the second army corps in the Army of the Potomac. 1891.....973.7 W16
"The narrative is clear, the style vivid, the account of military movements simple, straightforward, and free from the dulness that too often makes narratives of campaigns but a wearisome labor to the general reader." Larned's Literature of American history.

"Political conditions during the war," by R. M. Kelly, and "Biographical sketches," by Alfred Pirtle.

"The authors all served with distinction, were peculiarly qualified for their task, and their tone and treatment are excellent." Larned's Literature of American history.

TEMPLE, Oliver Perry.

East Tennessee and the Civil war. 1899.....973.7 T28

"Chancellor Temple is one of the very few of the leading loyalists of East Tennessee who still survive...Though himself a slaveholder, he was active in the opposition to secession, and in the canvass which resulted in voting down the calling of a convention to consider it. When secession became dominant in other parts of the State...he declared for unconditional adherence to the Union though emancipation should follow...Probably no other living man is so well fitted to write the inner history of the loyalists of the Holston Valley. Portions of the records which have been preserved could be fully understood only when read with the comments of one who intimately knew the spirit which ruled the people, as well as the reasons which modified the outward form of their action in critical junctures." Nation, 1900.

Appeared in an abridged form in "Century magazine," v.49–50, Nov.–May 1895.

"Pen-sketches of war-time scenes and celebrities, interesting mainly for what the author tells us of Mr. Lincoln, whom he saw often and knew intimately." Dial, 1895.

BROWNE, Junius Henri.

Four years in Secessia; adventures within and beyond the Union lines. 1865.....r973.7 B81

Author was war correspondent for the "New York tribune." The book includes an account of experiences in Southern prisons.

BROWNLOW, William Gannaway, (Parson Brownlow).

Sketches of the rise, progress and decline of secession. 1862.....r973.7 B82

"'Fighting Parson' Brownlow was editor of a Knoxville, Tennessee, newspaper. Although favoring slavery, he opposed secession and was imprisoned by the Confederate authorities for refusing to take an oath of allegiance to that government. This volume is a reprint of some of his editorials, correspondence, speeches, and experiences during his eventful life in the South." Larned's Literature of American history.

COX, Gen. Jacob Dolson.

Military reminiscences of the Civil war. 2v. 1900.....973.7 C85mi

"His services covered a wide...field from West Virginia to the Army of the Potomac, during the campaign of South Mountain and Antietam; from East Tennessee to Atlanta; then in the battles before Nashville, which destroyed Hood's army; and, at last, with Schofield, from Wilmington, N. C., in coöperation with Sherman's march, in time to be present at the surrender of Johnston, and to have temporary charge of the department in which the surrendered forces lingered in their sudden transition from war to peace...He brought to these Reminiscences...the philosophic imagination which raises them above a bare chronicle of notable events, or a mere personal record... and entitles them to a place among historic views of the character and conduct of our armies." Nation, 1901.

DANA, Charles Anderson.

Recollections of the Civil war; with the leaders at Washington and in the field in the sixties. 1898.....973.7 D19

Mr Dana was assistant secretary of war, 1863–65. He was not only practically a member of the Cabinet and in the confidence of the authorities at Washington, but he was also the chosen representative of the War department with General Grant and other military commanders, and was present at many of the councils which preceded movements of the greatest importance. His recollections are mostly based upon his official and unofficial reports from the front, and upon his private letters.

a history of the war from the secession of South Carolina to the battle of Malvern hill in 1862.

GILMORE, James Roberts.

Personal recollections of Abraham Lincoln and the Civil war. 1898.....973.7 G42

"As a direct contribution to history...the book will need to be sifted as to every page, and it will be of more use in helping to give 'local color' to incidents of the Civil war than as proof of any important facts." Nation, 1899.

GLAZIER, Willard Worcester.

Battles for the Union; comprising descriptions of many of the most stubbornly contested battles in the War of the great rebellion, with incidents and reminiscences of the camp, the march and the skirmish line. 1875.....973.7 G47b

Three years in the Federal cavalry. 1870.....r973.7 G47

Author served in the Army of the Potomac. His description of battles and skirmishes is compiled from a diary kept during the war.

GOSS, Warren Lee.

Recollections of a private; a story of the Army of the Potomac. 1890.....973.7 G69r

"The book is interesting as showing what a man experiences as he develops from a recruit to a veteran under the pressure of active service, and is of value in bringing to view the public opinion of the camp concerning the directing forces, intelligent and otherwise, of campaigns...It is a good book for the average reader, boy or man." Nation, 1890.

GREGG, J. Chandler.

Life in the army in the departments of Virginia and the Gulf, including observations in New Orleans. 1866....r973.7 G86

Author was an army chaplain. His narrative combines autobiography, history and travel.

Stories of war told by soldiers. 1895.....973.7 H15

Contents: Life at Little Crastis.—The first Bull Run.—Fort Henry and Fort Donelson.—Gen. McClellan and the Peninsula; West Virginia.— Antietam.— Pittsburg Landing.— Vicksburg.—Gettysburg. —Chickamauga and Chattanooga. — Grant's advance on Richmond; The Wilderness; Sheridan's ride.—Sherman's great march.—Nashville.—Siege of Richmond; The last week.—The end.

HOOD, Gen. John Bell.

Advance and retreat; personal experiences in the United States and Confederate States armies. 1880.....r973.7 H76

"Chapters are naturally divided into three groups, of which the first and shortest contains a sketch of Hood's service in the United States Army before the late war, and in the Confederate Army from 1861 to 1863; the second is his reply to General Johnston; and the third is his narrative of his own command of the Army of Tennessee after he relieved General Johnston." Nation, 1880.

Narrative of military operations, [1861–65]. 1874.....973.7 J369

"General Johnston...has not written a historic memoir to satisfy the demand of the world for information...He has simply written an earnest, almost passionate defence of himself before the Southern people from the charge of having caused or contributed to their defeat...A contribution to controversial polemics rather than to military history, although much light is thrown upon some important phases of the conflict." Nation, 1874.

JONES, John Beauchamp.

A rebel war clerk's diary. 2v. 1866.....r973.7 J41

"Full of most interesting facts bearing on the internal history of the Confederacy, and picturing life at Richmond during the progressive despondency, poverty and suffering in 1864–5." Larned's Literature of American history.

KEIFER, Joseph Warren.

Slavery and four years of war; a political history of slavery in the United States, with a narrative of the campaigns and battles of the Civil war in which the author took part, 1861–1865. 2v. 1900.....973.7 K16

v.1. 1861–1863.

v.2. 1863–1865.

Author was a volunteer officer in the Union army throughout the War of the rebellion, his service being in the field; he was (1881–83) speaker of the House of representatives, and major-general of volunteers in the Spanish-American war of 1898.

KIEFFER, Henry Martyn.

Recollections of a drummer-boy. 1888.....j973.7 K24

Appeared in "St. Nicholas," v.9–10, Nov. 1881–Oct. 1883.

Personal experiences of three years of active service during the Civil war.

Camp fires of the Confederacy; anecdotes, reminiscences, poems, etc. 1898.....973.7 L11

"Book of short anecdotes and reminiscences of the Civil war...It is a really remarkable collection of the kind; and if the stories are sometimes, like the illustrations, crudely sketchy, something amusing will be found on almost every page." Nation, 1898.

LEAVES from a trooper's diary. 1869.....r973.7 L46

Very brief account of service in the Army of the Cumberland.

LONGSTREET, Gen. James.

From Manassas to Appomattox. 1896.....973.7 L84

"While...General Longstreet's memoirs cover the whole period of his military career, we find, as we might expect, that his vindication from aspersion becomes the most stimulating part of his book... The memoir is a work without which the literature of the war would be incomplete...With Stonewall Jackson he shared the honor of being Lee's principal subordinate, and for energy in field fighting he was brilliantly conspicuous throughout the war." Nation, 1896.

McCLELLAN, Gen. George Brinton.

McClellan's own story, [1861–62]. 1887.....973.7 M13

"In 1863 Gen. McClellan prepared a volume which was entitled 'A Report of the Organization and Campaigns of the Army of the Potomac'...It was his history of his military career, prepared as the justification of his conduct and generalship...The present volume is in substance a revised edition of that Report, with considerable additions, a few omissions, and with some chapters of extracts from his private correspondence." Nation, 1887.

MONTEIRO, A.

War reminiscences, by the surgeon of Mosby's command. 1890.....r973.7 M85

Slight record of personal experiences.

MOULTON, C. W.

Review of General Sherman's Memoirs examined. 1875..r973.7 M94

Review under discussion is Henry Van Ness Boynton's "Sherman's historical raid," in which Sherman is accused of egotism and injustice and his ability as a commander questioned. Moulton vigorously denies the charges.

PORTER, Gen. Horace.

Campaigning with Grant. 1897.....973.7 P83

Appeared in the "Century magazine," v.53, Nov. 1896–Apr. 1897.

"To the presswork of the De Vinne press, add an uncommonly tasteful binding, and we have as handsome a specimen of book-making as one often sees. Speaking of the substance of this work, we cannot rate it highly. Not only is it badly diluted, but there is much more of Porter than of Grant in it." Nation, 1897.

Men and things I saw in Civil war days. 1899.....973.7 R89

Contents: Lincoln. — Johnson. — McClellan. — Burnside. — Hooker. — Meade.— Thomas.— Sherman.— Sheridan.— Grant.— Lee.— Campaigning and soldiering.—A great quartermaster [Robert Allen].—The angel of the third corps [Helen L. Gilson].—Some army letters.

"Authorities," p.3–4.

"The author was an officer in the Quartermaster's department, both in the field and at supply depots, and has put his recollections of leading men into lively chapters, which must be read as presentations of offhand opinions and predilections rather than critical estimates of historical value." Nation, 1900.

SCHOFIELD, Gen. John McAllister.

Forty-six years in the army. 1897.....973.7 S36

Chiefly concerned with the Civil war, with Sherman's generalship in the campaigns of Atlanta and the Carolinas, with the campaigns of Franklin and Nashville and the author's relations to General Thomas, etc.

"Not a connected narrative of the author's life. It is rather a collection of notes and comments on events that he had part in." Nation, 1898.

SENOUR, F.

Morgan and his captors. 1865.....r973.7 S478

Morgan was a major-general in the Confederate army. The book describes his raids in Kentucky, Ohio and Indiana in 1863 and his final raid, the year following, in Tennessee.

ISHAM, Asa Brainerd, and others.
Prisoners of war and military prisons. 1890.....973.7 I29
"The fullest compendium of descriptions of southern military prisons and the treatment of the prisoners. The authors were themselves prisoners...and all are men of standing in civil life. Besides personal experience, they have diligently used official documents, and authentic personal narratives by others. The book is an authoritative one. The horrible story is told with calmness and with judgment, discriminating fairly between what is incidental to captivity and what is the result of intentional cruelty and system. It is indispensable to a real study of the subject." Larned's Literature of American history.

JEFFREY, William H. comp.

LIVERMORE, Mrs Mary Ashton (Rice).

My story of the war. 1890.....973.7 L74

"A sharp photograph of a phase of war in which the virtues of patience, faith, hope, charity, and mercy were practically applied. Commencing with the first gun at Sumter, she outlines the progress of events to the assassination of Lincoln, dwelling upon the work of the Sanitary Commission as it came under her notice during a close acquaintanceship with the horrors of war." Nation, 1889.

MOSS, Lemuel.

Annals of the United States Christian commission.

1868. .....973.7 M93

Organized in 1861.

"Its specific work was to be chiefly for the moral and religious welfare of the soldiers and sailors [in the Civil war]...Its labors were not confined wholly to spiritual and intellectual ministrations, but also to the distribution of a vast amount of food, hospital stores, delicacies, and clothing. It, too, followed the great armies, and was like a twin angel of mercy with the sanitary commission." Harper's Encyclopædia of U. S. history.

STILLÉ, Charles Janeway.

History of the United States sanitary commission; being the general report of its work during the War of the rebellion. 1866.....qr973.7 S85

"Mr. Stillé...has described the whole movement clearly, succinctly, and gracefully...He has given enough figures to make clear the magnitude of the work. His style is...a little stiff, but it is always perspicuous; and there is not in the whole work a line of rhetoric or padding." Nation, 1866.

"Contains brief but intelligible and excellent sketches of all the army corps and of a few of the more famous divisions. Then follow 300 pages of regimental statistics, a page to a regiment. These give the figures by companies, the actions and resulting deaths, and a concise regimental sketch in the form of notes...These...are succeeded by a list of 225 battles, with the regiments sustaining the greatest losses in each, and this...by a list by States of all the regiments and batteries...The book closes with naval statistics and a chapter upon Confederate losses." Nation, 1889.

LIVERMORE, Thomas Leonard.
Numbers and losses in the Civil war in America, 1861–65. 1900. .....973.7 L747
"Colonel Livermore aims to establish, upon the best evidence obtainable, the number of men who served during the Civil War in the Confederate army. In this he is unquestionably successful, and the result of the evidence and estimates he produces is incontrovertible...Gives the numbers engaged in a list of battles, in each of which the losses were not less than 1,000...Presents his subject in clear and simple language, and in a soldierly and most impartial manner." American historical review, 1901.

LODGE, Henry Cabot.

Appeared in "Harper's magazine," v.98–99, Feb.–July 1899.

Based on official reports of the military and naval operations, supplemented by an examination, so far as possible, of all accounts of eyewitnesses having either interest or authority. The political side of the story and the account of events in Washington are written from personal knowledge, Mr Lodge being at the time a member of the committee on foreign relations.

Story of the Rough Riders, 1st U. S. volunteer cavalry; the regiment in camp and on the battlefield. 1899....973.89 M41

The author, correspondent of the New York journal, was a participant with the "Rough Riders," and was severely wounded by a Mauser bullet while at the extreme front of the firing line at Las Guasimas.

His book is entirely devoted to the Rough Riders, telling with many anecdotes and details of the personalities of its members, and its part in the war in Cuba. The book contains a complete roster of the regiment.

MILEY, John David.

In Cuba with Shafter. 1899.....973.89 M68

Lieutenant Miley was on General Shafter's staff.

"In this volume it is my object to put before my readers a clear and intelligent narrative of the Santiago campaign, showing the orders received and how they were executed; the plans formed and how they were carried out; the obstacles met and how they were overcome. The work is not, in any sense, a criticism of persons or military movements, but a plain statement of facts as the writer knows them." Preface.

MILLET, Francis Davis.

Expedition to the Philippines. 1899.....973.89 M69

An account of soldier life on a troop ship between San Francisco and the Philippines, and of the taking of Manila. Mr Millet is both an artist and author, and accompanied General Merritt as special correspondent of "Harper's weekly" and of the London "Times."

"Both directly and incidentally, Mr. Millet gives us much interesting and useful knowledge of Luzon and its people; and the 50 reproductions of photographs...are full of instruction." Nation, 1900.

History of the Spanish-American war of 1898. 1900....973.89 T53

Appeared in "Munsey's magazine," v.20–21, Oct. 1898–Mar. 1899.

"On the whole, we may say that the author is quite fair, but too uncritical to deal with his subject in a way to carry conviction. His book is, however, superior to previous writings on this subject in the fact that it is not inflated, and the reader is thus enabled to get a pretty clear idea of the war without being called upon to swell with indignation or dilate with patriotism over every commonplace event in it." Nation, 1900.

"Presents a brief and forceful argument from the pro-Filipino standpoint. His book is, therefore, naturally a sharp arraignment of the policy of the American administration. The greater portion of the volume consists of a review of the steps which led up to and resulted in the outbreak of February 4, 1899...He states that 'the main purpose of the book is to indict and condemn Imperialism as a political doctrine, inimical to the spirit, not only of American Democracy, but Christianity itself.' BELTRAMI, Giacomo Costantino.
Pilgrimage in Europe and America, leading to the discovery of the sources of the Mississippi and Bloody river, with a description of the whole course of the former, and of the Ohio. 2v. 1828.....r917.3 B42
"Gives his impressions of the West with much vividness. He had much to say of the aborigines, and expatiates upon the natural history and scenery of the region he visited with intelligence and enthusiasm." Tuckerman's America and her commentators.
"Vol. II is almost entirely devoted to the author's travels among the Northwestern Indians, of whom he gives some novel particulars. The narrations of what he witnessed are tinged with the peculiar glow of the author's temperament. Beltrami must have moved in a gigantic world, if he saw external objects through the same media with which he viewed his own person and accomplishments." Field's Indian bibliography.

BERNARD, John.
Retrospections of America, 1797–1811. 1887.....r917.3 B456
Biographical notice, by Laurence Hutton and Brander Matthews, p.3–7.
"Bernard was an English actor, whose experiences were gained during his professional visits to this country. His travels extended up and down the Atlantic coast from Canada to the Carolinas and westwardly to the Ohio River. The historical investigator will find a mass of anecdotes and incidents of the drama, and scattered through it a few glimpses of Washington, Jefferson, John Adams, and others, although some of the stories must be taken with allowance. Of more value are the glimpses of the life of the people, the cities, dress, and customs." Larned's Literature of American history.

BERNHARD, Karl, herzog von Sachsen-Weimar.
Travels through North America, 1825 and 1826. 2v. in 1. 1828. .....r917.3 B45
"The kindliness and intelligence of the Duke are apparent on every page of these two volumes; but there is little new in the subjects or mode of treatment." Tuckerman's America and her commentators.

BIRKBECK, Morris.
Notes on a journey in America from the coast of Virginia to the territory of Illinois. 1818.....r917.3 B49
"Brief and intelligent account of the journey of an English farmer travelling from Virginia to Illinois Territory, then a frontier settlement. Birkbeck was a radical both in politics and religion, and his judgments show a slight bias. He had a keen eye for a suitable place for future settlement and, in agricultural matters, showed practical knowledge. The book gives a vivid picture of the difficulties attending pioneer settlement." Larned's Literature of American history.

BISHOP, Nathaniel Holmes.
Voyage of the paper canoe from Quebec to the Gulf of Mexico. 1878.....917.3 B49

BONNET, J. E.
Réponse aux principales questions qui peuvent être faites sur les Etats-Unis de l'Amérique, par un citoyen adoptif de la Pensylvanie. 2v. 1795.....r917.3 B62

These two volumes undertake to answer 137 questions, for the information of those who think of emigrating to North America.

BOURGET, Paul.

Outre-mer; impressions of America. 1895.....917.3 B65

Contents: At sea.—The first week.—Society: a summer city [Newport].—Society: women and young girls.—Business men and business scenes.—The lower orders: the workingmen; farmers and cowboys.—Education.—American pleasures.—Down South: in Georgia.—Down South: in Florida.—Homeward.

BREMER, Fredrika.

Homes of the New World; impressions of America; tr. by Mary Howitt. 2v. 1853.....r917.3 B72

Series of letters written between 1849 and 1851. During this period the Swedish authoress traveled through a greater part of the United States and in Cuba. The account of her visit to Concord and her meeting with Emerson is especially interesting.

BRISSOT de WARVILLE, Jean Pierre.

Examen critique des Voyages dans l'Amérique septentrionale de M. le marquis de Chatellux; ou, Lettre à M. le marquis de Chatellux, dans laquelle on réfute principalement ses opinions sur les Quakers, sur les negres, sur le peuple & sur l'homme. 1786.....r917.3 B75e

"A spirited writer here attacks the Marquis for having, in the publication of his travels, exposed to ridicule, and grossly misrepresented the principles and manners of the Quakers; he also endeavors to show that the Marquis's reflections on the slavery of the negroes, and his thoughts on the condition of mankind, with respect to the ranks in society, are often unjust. M. de Warville's language is forcible, his arguments are striking, if not always conclusive, and his work is replete with liberal sentiments on religious and political subjects." Quoted in Sabin's Dictionary of books relating to America.

New travels in the United States, performed in 1788; tr. fr. the French. 1792.....r917.3 B75

"The author, a Frenchman, restlessly interested in politics, afterwards a prominent character in the French Revolution, came to America in 1788 'to study men who had just acquired their liberty.' The work was published in Paris in 1791 as useful in supporting the Revolution. Brissot's journey, covering a period of six months, extended from Boston through the Atlantic states to Virginia. Although many of his observations are naïve and superficial, his sketches of life and manners are entertaining and are frequently quoted by historians." Larned's Literature of American history.

Picturesque America. 2v. 1872–74.....qr917.3 B84

The same, with a sketch of the author, letters from Washington to the marquis of Chastellux, and notes and corrections by the editor. 1827.....r917.3 C39t2

Voyages dans l'Amérique septentrionale, 1780–1782. 2v. 1786. .....r917.3 C39

"Spontaneous comments and descriptions such as fill the letters and journals of an intelligent traveller...Whoever would compare the present condition of the Southern and most of the New England states with that of eighty years ago, will find few more pleasant authorities than the Marquis de Chastellux...His appreciation of the social virtues of the people and his tolerance of their limited means—his interest in their welfare, and his respect for their cause, are evident on every page. No foreigner has manifested a greater admiration of Washington, or more truly described his bearing and principles." Tuckerman's America and her commentators.

CHEVALIER, Michel.

Society, manners and politics in the United States; a series of letters on North America; tr. fr. the 3d Paris edition. 1839. .....r917.3 C42

"Chevalier was a Frenchman sent to this country in 1834 under a government appointment to inspect the public works of the United States.

Much interested in political and social organization, he spent two years in further observation. 'His letters give the results of his observations, the impressions made on his mind, the speculations in regard to the future destiny of our institutions, rather than a detailed narrative of facts and even events.' A considerable part of the book is devoted to an account of banking questions. There are chapters on railroads...western steamboats...social reform, middle classes...Chevalier was a trained observer and a careful writer." Larned's Literature of American history.

COBBETT, William.

A year's residence in the United States of America. 3 pts. in 1. 1828.....r917.3 C63

"Journal of Thomas Hulme," p.259–309.

"The year consisted of ten months in Long Island and two in Eastern Pennsylvania, and was spent in farming. Cobbett wrote with the particular object of describing the United States as a country for farmers, giving, however, some space to customs, manners, political and religious institutions...Cobbett was a shrewd observer, and wrote in a far better temper and more judicial mood than was common with him." Larned's Literature of American history.

COOPER, Thomas, 1759–1840.

Some information respecting America. 1794.....r917.3 C78

The author visited America in 1793–94 "to determine," he says, "whether America, and what part of it, was eligible for a person, like myself, with a small fortune and a large family, to settle in." Although he traveled quite widely, with Philadelphia as headquarters, he gives the preference to Pennsylvania. His book is full of practical information as to manners and customs, government, climate, prices, etc., for possible settlers.

COXE, Tench.

View of the United States of America. 1794.....r917.3 C85

CRÈVECŒUR, J. Hector St. John de.

Letters from an American farmer, describing certain provincial situations, manners and customs not generally known, and conveying some idea of the late and present interior circumstances of the British colonies in North America. 1782.....r917.3 C88

"Crevecœur was of noble birth, a native of Normandy, born in 1731; he was sent to England when but sixteen years old, which is the cause of his early and complete mastery of our language. In 1754 he came to New York, and settled on a farm in the adjacent region...His 'Letters'...have a winsome flavor, and picture so delectably the independence, the resources, and the peace of an agricultural life, just before and after the Revolution...that the reader of the present day cannot feel surprise that he beguiled many an emigrant from the Old World to the banks of the Ohio and the Delaware." Tuckerman's America and her commentators.

Voyage dans la haute Pensylvanie et dans l'état de New-York, par un membre adoptif de la nation Onéida. 3v. 1801. .....r917.3 C88v

"Though called a translation, this is believed to be an original work by M. de Crevecœur, whose initials only appear at the end of the dedication to Washington. The author spent nearly a quarter of a century in America...His experience, therefore, enables him to give much information and personal gossip not readily found elsewhere ...'This work is distinguished by its valuable details on the aboriginal tribes, and their gradual disappearance. No other writer has so well described the Indian great councils, or assemblies, where they deliberate on their public interests.'" Sabin's Dictionary of books relating to America.

"American notes" is "a superficial book, written as the result of a residence of six months in the United States. Dickens visited New England, the Middle States and the West, spending a few days also in Washington and Richmond. While sincere and fair, he had little insight into the conditions underlying American society...On the whole favorable to America, though it violently attacks slavery and American manners." Larned's Literature of American history.

The same; [reprinted]. 1905. (In Thwaites's Early western travels, 1748–1846, v.11–12.).....r917.8 T43 v.11–12

"However, amidst Faux's chaff there is some good grain, quite worth the attention of the student of early American life. His very brutality and frankness lead to revelations of conditions which men more delicately-minded would have felt bound to conceal. We may at this date, perhaps, pardon our author's lack of taste and good manners, for the fidelity with which he holds his mirror up to portray American nature at a time when our Middle West was the Far West." R. G. Thwaites, in introduction.

FEARON, Henry Bradshaw.

Sketches of America; narrative of a journey through the eastern and western states of America. 1818.....r917.3 F31

"Fearon came to America on a tour of inspection in the interest of some English farmers who contemplated settling in Illinois. His narrative is interesting and, as he observes with especial care everything of importance to intending settlers, it is especially instructive to the student of social and economic history. The price and quality of land, the conditions of trade, the competition between English and domestic goods, the cost and conditions of travel by sea and over land, types of settlers, and phases of public opinion are the features ...to which Fearon devoted most of his attention." Larned's Literature of American history.

The same; [reprinted]. 1904. (In Thwaites's Early western travels, 1748–1846, v.9).....r917.8 T43 v.9

Contains a chapter on Pittsburgh in 1818.

"A remarkable study of American life in the beginning of its new era, at the close of the second war with England. Charitable, comprehending, thoughtful, he does not slur over national faults nor unduly praise local virtues. Dangers, both financial and political are pointed out; but the basic principles of American society are distinctly and clearly laid bare, and the progress and possibilities of the New West revealed." R. G. Thwaites, in introduction.

FLINT, Timothy.

History and geography of the Mississippi valley, to which is appended a condensed physical geography of the American continent. 2v. in 1. 1833.....r917.3 F647h

Title-page of v.2 reads "United States and other divisions of the American continent."

"Timothy Flint was extensively read and widely beloved. A native of Massachusetts, and by profession a clergyman, he entered on a missionary life in the Valley of the Mississippi in 1815...The peculiar value of [his] account of the remarkable region of whose history and aspect he wrote, consists in the fact that it is not the result of a cursory survey or rapid tour, but of years of residence, intimate contact with nature and man, and patient observation... There is one portion of [his] writings that has a permanent charm, and that is the purely descriptive...No one has more graphically revealed to distant readers the shores of the Ohio, or made so real in our language the physical aspects of the Great Valley." Tuckerman's America and her commentators.

Recollections of the last ten years passed in the valley of the Mississippi, from Pittsburg and the Missouri to the Gulf of Mexico, and from Florida to the Spanish frontier. 1826.....r917.3 F647

FREEMAN, Edward Augustus.

Some impressions of the United States. 1883.....917.3 F91

"His desire to be fair has led him to be so cautious that it is really often very difficult to get from his book a distinct idea of what his impressions are...He is also, to a certain extent, the victim of a theory which he was anxious to verify by observation—that of the essential unity of the English nation on both sides of the water." Nation, 1883.

Author visited Canada, Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Virginia.

"The production of a sensible and enlightened traveller, who is evidently concerned to do justice to the people whom he describes, and to furnish useful information." Eclectic review.

"The farming or emigration prospects and practicabilities of Canada are what most deeply interest English readers; and they will find here a good deal of information that bears every mark of being well considered and judicious." Tait's Edinburgh magazine.

GRANT, Mrs Anne (Macvicar).

Memoirs of an American lady, with sketches of manners and scenery in America. 1846.....r917.3 G78

First published in 1808.

"The character of the Lady, her way of keeping house on a large scale, the state of the domestic slaves, the customs of the young men of Albany, their practice of robbing one another in joke, etc., are novel and curious." Allibone's Dictionary of authors.

"On the basis of her very youthful recollections, affected, without doubt, by the imaginations and prejudices of after-years, she constructed this work at the age of fifty-two. It is not without interest ...but no one will suppose that it can make much pretension to accuracy." North American review.

GRATTAN, Thomas Colley.

Civilized America. 2v. 1859.....r917.3 G79

Author came to Boston as British consul in 1839, which position he held for some years. Considers only the Atlantic states. Has chapters on national characteristics, social system in New England, American aristocracy, servants, political parties, the north-eastern boundary question, the Irish in America, religious sects, education, slavery, etc., as well as on Henry Clay, Edward Everett, Calhoun and Daniel Webster. Map.

GRISWOLD, Rufus Wilmot.

The republican court; or, American society in the days of Washington. 1856.....qr917.3 G93

"It consists of a fluent narrative, intended to convey an authentic and picturesque idea of social life in the days of Washington...In the preparation of this elegant quarto, the memoirs and correspondence of the period have been searched, the diaries of leading members of society gleaned, the reminiscences of survivors drawn upon, and such works as Sullivan's Letters on Public Characters, Duer's Recollections of New York, the autobiographies of French officers engaged in the war, the letters of Mrs. Adams, and Graydon's Memoirs, carefully examined." H. T. Tuckerman, in North American review, 1855.

GRUND, Francis Joseph.

Americans in their moral, social and political relations. 2v. 1837.....r917.3 G94a

"Author, born in Bohemia (1806), emigrated to the United States and engaged in journalism...This work is a serious discussion of American manners, the attitude of the United States toward foreign immigration, theatre and the arts, literature, journalism, education, religion, [etc.]...The tone is philosophic although the style is labored ...One of the best aids in the study of the fundamental characteristics of the United States in...1830–1840." Larned's Literature of American history.

Aristocracy in America. 2v. 1839.....r917.3 G94

"We assume this work to be written by Mr. Grund, though he is professedly only the editor. He has given two whole volumes of sketches of manners; but the vast majority are caricatures, without point, hint, or even vraisemblance." Athenæum, 1839.

Travels in North America. 2v. in 1. 1829.....r917.3 H17

Hall was an Englishman who traveled in the United States and Canada in the years 1827–28. He criticizes American customs with a good deal of frankness.

HALL, Francis.

Travels in Canada and the United States in 1816 and 1817. 1818. .....r917.3 H172

His route included New York, Albany, Quebec, Montreal, Kingston, Niagara Falls, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Virginia and Charleston.

"He has good sense enough to think that a country is not to be judged by its tavern-keepers and hostlers, and too much good-humour to rail at a whole people because he meets with occasional instances of fraud and churlishness." North American review, 1819.

"Mr. Haweis was never anything but scrappy, even in 'Music and Morals,' the book which gave him a deserved reputation, and here the touch-and-go of his itinerary makes him scrappier than ever." Nation, 1896.

"The travel is mere globe-trotting and the talk mere chit-chat, and over all is writ an immense I." Dial, 1897.

HODGSON, Adam.

Letters from North America, written during a tour in the United States and Canada. 2v. 1824.....r917.3 H66

"He tells us, that he travelled upwards of seven thousand miles in the United States; that is, he went from Maine to New Orleans, and from New Orleans back again to Maine. He also made an excursion to Canada and the Lakes. His remarks are desultory, sometimes woven into the web of a narrative, and at others wrought up into discussions of deeper interest." North American review, 1824.

HOLE, Samuel Reynolds, dean.

Little tour in America. 1895.....917.3 H71

"The outcome of the author's recent lecturing tour in the States... The Dean writes in his usual chatty, facetious vein, spinning lightly over a variety of subjects...treating us and our ways with unfailing good-humor." Dial, 1896.

KALM, Pehr.

Travels into North America, containing its natural history and a circumstantial account of its plantations and agriculture in general, with the civil, ecclesiastical and commercial state of the country; tr. into English by J. R. Forster. 2v. 1772.....r917.3 K12

"Author was 'Professor of Œconomy' in the University of Aobo, Swedish Finland...He made a tour through the Middle Colonies, going as far west as Niagara...Professor Kalm comments garrulously on all things American, especially in the department of natural history; his observations upon manners and customs are informing, although sometimes amusing. Excellent for the student of American development, material and social." Larned's Literature of American history.

LATROBE, Charles Joseph.

Rambler in North America, 1832–1833. 2v. 1835.....r917.3 L36

"Nor can we call to mind any English pictures of American scenery more fresh and characteristic than these by Mr. Latrobe." Athenæum. [illegible]

LEVASSEUR, A.

Lafayette in America in 1824–1825. 2v. in 1. 1829.....r917.3 L66

The same. 2v. 1829.....r917.3 L66l

Author was secretary to General Lafayette during his journey, which included the principal cities of the country. His visit to Pittsburgh is briefly described on p.182 and 183.

LIEBER, Francis.

The stranger in America; sketches of the manners, society and national peculiarities of the United States. 2v. in 1. 1835 ..... r917.3 L69

"Give[s] remarkably full statements of judicial and penitentiary systems, and of social traits. Dr. Lieber's ample opportunities of observation, his familiarity with society and life both North and South, and the philosophical tendency of his mind, make him a remarkably apt expositor of the most important questions relating to our country." Tuckerman's America and her commentators.

LYELL, Sir Charles.

Travels in North America in 1841–2, with geological observations on the United States, Canada and Nova Scotia. 2v. in 1. 1845 ..... r917.3 L98

MACKAY, Alexander.

The western world; or, Travels in the United States, 1846–47. 3v. 1849 ..... r917.3 M17w

Author visited the United States for the London "Morning chronicle," to report the debates at Washington in relation to the Oregon question.

"A very able work on the people and institutions of the United States, distinguished for elegance of diction, vigour of style, and liberality of sentiment." Allibone's Dictionary of authors.

MACKAY, Charles.

Life and liberty in America. 1859 ..... r917.3 M175

"Author visited the United States, for the purpose of lecturing, in 1857, and was correspondent of the London Times at New York 1862–65." Allibone's Dictionary of authors.

MARJORIBANKS, Alexander.

Travels in South and North America. 1854 ..... r917.3 M39

MARRYAT, Capt. Frederick.

Diary in America, with remarks on its institutions, 1st–2d ser. 6v. 1839 ..... r917.3 M41

"Captain Marryat visited the United States in 1837...He travelled quite generally, and his book is made up of numerous anecdotes and not very profound observations in regard to the scenes that he passed through. He is, however, keen in his analysis of human character." Larned's Literature of American history.

MARTINEAU, Harriet.

Retrospect of western travel. 3v. 1838 ..... r917.3 M43r

Consist of the lighter and more personal portion of her impressions and experiences during her visit to America in 1834–5. She was everywhere received with the greatest respect and enthusiasm, and appreciated the country and the people more justly than any other traveler of that time.

Society in America. 3v. 1837 ..... r917.3 M43

A discussion of the political and social condition of America from the standpoint of an abolitionist. Miss Martineau made what were for that time very extensive journeyings through the region east of the Mississippi, knew people in every condition of life and had unequaled opportunities for a thorough knowledge of the country and its institutions.

MAXWELL, Archibald Montgomery.

Run through the United States during the autumn of 1840. 2v. 1841 ..... r917.3 M52

"He sees everything in the broadest sunshine, and every mile of his road is strewed with flowers. All the men are full of intelligence, and all the women unrivalled for beauty...He has, at all events, made a very pretty book; and, if Jonathan is not pleased, he must be a sour fellow indeed." Blackwood's magazine, 1841.

MICHAUX, François André.

Travels to the westward of the Allegany mountains in Ohio, Kentucky and Tennessee and return to Charlestown through the upper Carolinas, 1802; tr. fr. the French by B. Lambert. 1805.....r917.3 M66

The same; [tr. into English]; [reprinted]. 1904. (In Thwaites's Early western travels, 1748–1846, v.3.)..r917.8 T43 v.3

"Excellent, for economic conditions." R. G. Thwaites.

"Michaux was a careful observer and discriminating writer. He gives clear and trustworthy descriptions of the states named...their inhabitants and products, and the occupations of the people. His book is free from Indian legends and border stories." Larned's Literature of American history.

MUIRHEAD, James Fullarton.

Land of contrasts; a Briton's view of his American kin. 1900.....917.3 M95

Contents: The land of contrasts.—Lights and shadows of American society.—An appreciation of the American woman.—The American child.—International misapprehensions and national differences.—Sports and amusements.—The humour of the "man on the cars."—American journalism; a mixed blessing.—Some literary straws.—Certain features of certain cities.—Baedekeriana.—The American note.

Also published with the title "America, the land of contrasts."

"Mr. Muirhead, as compiler of Baedeker's handbooks to the United States and to Great Britain, has had exceptional chances of 'sampling' American characteristics, and he has made most excellent use of his opportunities...He has read widely as well as travelled widely, and without parade he draws on his accumulations of study and observation to show John Bull where he may learn from Brother Jonathan." Academy, 1900.

MÜNSTERBERG, Hugo.

American traits, from the point of view of a German. 1901.....917.3 M96

Contents: The Americans and the Germans.—Education.—Scholarship.—Women.—American democracy.

MURRAY, Sir Charles Augustus.

Travels in North America during 1834, 1835 & 1836, including a sumer residence with the Pawnee tribe of Indians. 2v. 1839 ..... r917.3 M976

"He has treated of the manners and institutions of the United States with a very uncommon freedom from the prejudices either of nation or caste." Edinburgh review.

"His juvenile spirits are to be envied; he is evidently not without cleverness; and we have been pleased...with the gayety and good humour of his narrative." London quarterly review.

NEWKIRK, Garrett.

Rhymes of the states. 1896 ..... j917.3 N28

"A series of rhymes which should assist children in studying the history and geography of the United States."

NICHOLS, Thomas L.

Forty years of American life. 1874 ..... r917.3 N31

"Author was a northerner who, on the outbreak of the rebellion, took refuge in England. He regarded the action of the government as unconstitutional, and yet he could not fight against the union... The work...includes a survey of the customs, militia system, country schools, state of religion and morals...Clearly and attractively written, and, while not important, is interesting." Larned's Literature of American history.

OFFENBACH, Jacques.

Offenbach in America. 1877 ..... r917.3 O16

Amusing book of impressions by the popular composer, who came to the United States to conduct some concerts at the Centennial exhibition in Philadelphia in 1876.

Jonathan and his continent. 1889 ..... 917.3 O28

"It is not that the book is very deep or very wise, or contains much that is new and important; but it is the work of an observer of a certain originality of style, who has occasionally the gift of insight, and who has the art of telling disagreeable truths without giving offence." Nation, 1889.

Jonathan et son continent. 1889 ..... 917.3 O28j

OUR country: East. 1899 ..... j917.3 O32

Contents: Great lake country.—On the Gulf.—Along the Atlantic.—In New England.

PALMER, John.

Journal of travels in the United States and in Lower Canada, 1817. 1818 ..... r917.3 P19

"Contains particulars relating to the prices of land and provisions, remarks on the country and the people, an account of the commerce of the principal towns...Sydney Smith...described it as having been written by a 'plain man of good sense and slow judgment.'" Dictionary of national biography.

"Mr. Palmer travelled through all, or the greater part of the country he describes; but he confesses that the outlines of his travels were filled up from other books." Sabin's Dictionary of books relating to America.

PECK, J. K.

Seven wonders of the New World. 1885 ..... j917.3 P35

Contents: Niagara falls.—Yellowstone park.—Mammoth cave.—The cañons and Garden of the gods, Colorado.—The giant trees, California.—The natural bridge, Virginia.—Yosemite valley.

PERRIN du LAC, François Marie.

Travels through the two Louisianas and among the savage nations of the Missouri, also in the United States, along the Ohio and the adjacent provinces, 1801–1803; tr. fr. the French. 1807 ..... r917.3 P44

Much abridged from the French original.

Voyage dans les deux Louisianes et chez les nations sauvages du Missouri, par les États-Unis, l'Ohio et les provinces qui le bordent, 1801-1803. 1805 ..... r917.3 P44v

The "adjacent provinces" include New York, New Jersey, Philadelphia, and Washington. It is interesting to see what the author finds most striking in the manners and customs of that day.

POPE, John.

Tour through the southern and western territories of the United States. 1888 ..... r917.3 P81

A reprint of the edition of 1792.

POWER, Tyrone.

Impressions of America, 1833–1835. 2v. 1836 ..... r917.3 P87

Author was a well-known actor who toured the United States in 1833, 1834 and 1835.

POWNALL, Thomas.

Topographical description of such parts of North America as are contained in the (annexed) map of the middle British colonies, &c. in North America. [Ed.2.] 1776. ..... qr917.3 P877

The map, 19¼x32¼ inches, was first published by Lewis Evans of Philadelphia, in 1755. An appendix to the book contains "Extracts from the journal of Capt. Harry Gordon, chief engineer in the western dep't in North America, who was sent from Fort Pitt on the Ohio, down the said river, etc. to the Ilinois, in 1776," and "Journal of Christopher Gist's journey, began from Col. Cresap's, at the old town on the Potomack river, Oct. 30, 1750, continued down the Ohio to Roanoak river in North Carolina, where he arrived May 19, 1751."

PULSZKY, Ferencz Aurel, & Mme Terézia.

White, red, black; sketches of society in the United States during the visit of their guest, [Kossuth]. 3v. 1853 .. r917.3 P98

Pulszky, a Hungarian patriot, accompanied Kossuth on his tour through the United States in 1851 and 1852.

RAUMER, Friedrich Ludwig Georg von.

America and the American people; tr. fr. the German by W. W. Turner. 1846 ..... r917.3 R22

"Written by the great German historian from personal observation and material collected during a visit to the United States. It contains a mass of information on historical, political, social, and economic subjects, much of it now without value, though the book is still of service as giving a picture of American life. The author was in sympathy with the country and its people; possessed insight; was unprejudiced and thoroughly equipped for his task. The principal criticism of his work is that he depended too much on material furnished by others. Letters written by him while in America are appended, and constitute perhaps the most valuable part of the book." Larned's Literature of American history.

La vie américaine; l'éducation et la société. [1899.] 917.3 R77

Contents: L'éducation américaine.—Les fiançailles et le mariage.—Les Américains chez eux et hors de chez eux.—La vie journalière.—L'aristocratie en Amérique.—L'esprit d'association et les intérêts généraux.—La vie politique.—La vie intellectuelle aux États-Unis.—La situation religieuse.

ROYALL, Mrs Anne.

Sketches of history, life and manners in the United States, by a traveller. 1826.....917.3 R81

Mrs Royall, 1769–1854, was a well-known figure in Washington, D. C. John Quincy Adams described her as a going about "like a virago-errant in enchanted armor, redeeming herself from the cramps of indigence by the notoriety of her eccentricities and the forced currency they gave to her publications." She was the terror of politicians, and especially of congressmen. At last she became so unendurable that she was formally indicted by the grand jury as a common scold. Her books are full of cutting remarks about public men who offended her, and from a present-day point of view are very amusing.

RUSSELL, William Howard.

My diary, North and South. 1863.....r917.3 R91

"Author was the well-known war correspondent of the London Times, a man of intellect, of great energy and enterprise, practised in observation. In our Civil War...he visited both sections for the purpose of gathering information bearing upon our affairs. Some of his earlier letters greatly exasperated our people, but, with due allowance for the unfriendly attitude of the great journal he wrote for, his collection of experiences and observations has great historical value." Larned's Literature of American history.

SALA, George Augustus Henry.

America revisited; from the Bay of New York to the Gulf of Mexico, and from Lake Michigan to the Pacific. 2v. 1883. .....r917.3 S15

"It is quite unnecessary to say that America Revisited is an exceedingly readable and amusing book, because Mr. Sala seems to find it impossible to write anything that is unreadable and dull...Had [he] devoted the numerous pages now filled with amusingly appreciative criticism of meats and drinks to a record of really illuminating and characteristic facts, his book would have been a valuable addition to our knowledge." Spectator, 1883.

SCHULTZ, Christian.

Travels on an inland voyage through the states of New-York, Pennsylvania, Virginia, Ohio, Kentucky and Tennessee, and through the territories of Indiana, Louisiana, Mississippi and New-Orleans in 1807 and 1808. 2v. in 1. 1810.....r917.3 S38

"Though not intended for the public, his letters are intelligent, and, for the most part accurate. Those referring to the Western Territories must have afforded seasonable and desirable information at that period; and his account of the Middle States is in some respects highly satisfactory." Tuckerman's America and her commentators.

SMYTH, John Ferdinand D.

Tour in the United States of America. 2v. 1784..... r917.3 S66

The author was a Tory scout and spy who more than once narrowly escaped hanging by the Whigs, but lived to make this record of his travels.

"This book, although replete with falsehood and calumny, contains the truest picture of the state of society and manners in Virginia (such as it was a half century ago) that is extant." Larned's Literature of American history.

STANSBURY, Philip.

Pedestrian tour of 2300 miles in North America, to the lakes, the Canadas and the New-England states. 1822..r917.3 S79

"This work, which is exceedingly rare, is characterized by great keenness of observation, and contains one of the best descriptions extant of the important battle-fields included in the conquest of Canada in 1759–'63, its invasion during the war of 1812, the wars with the Indians in the New England states, the Revolutionary contest in Massachusetts, and the disastrous expedition of Gen. Burgoyne. As a comparison between the customs, habits of living, modes of thought and educational interests of New England and New York of eighty years since and to-day, Stansbury's work is valuable." Appletons' cyclopædia of American biography.

STEEVENS, George Warrington.

Land of the dollar. 1897..... 917.3 S81

Reprinted from the London "Daily mail."

During the presidential campaign of 1896 the author came to America as correspondent of the London "Daily mail" to report the election and incidentally to study the country. He is a keen observer and reports his observations in a way that makes this book far more interesting and valuable than most newspaper correspondence.

STRONG, Josiah.

Our country; its possible future and its present crisis. 1891. ..... 917.3 S92

The same. 1885..... r917.3 S92

"Not historical either in conception or execution. An alarmist presentation of statistics to prove that the church is in danger of losing 'the West,' unless the Home Missionary Society is provided with funds. Sees perils in immigration, Romanism, the Mormons, intemperance, etc. Pessimistic for a purpose." Larned's Literature of American history.

STUART, James, 1775–1849.

Three years in North America. 2v. 1833.....r917.3 S93

Vivid and faithful picture of life in America in 1830. The author visited New York, New England, the Southern states as far as New Orleans, returning by way of the Mississippi and Ohio rivers. He was a keen observer and his book is one of the few unprejudiced accounts of America at that time.

SUTCLIFF, Robert.

Travels in some parts of North America, 1804–1806. 1812..r917.3 S96

"A clear, circumstantial, and entertaining account of the state of society on the other side of the Atlantic." Monthly review, 1817.

"Though some of her strictures are well merited, the book is conceived in bitterness and ill nature; what is truly said is ungraciously said; much is said on hearsay which is not true; much is caricatured and exaggerated." North American review, 1833.

This sixty-year-old classic ought to be read with the greatest avidity, for it is history in its most taking form. Mrs Trollope's reflections have still a salutary lesson for us—her book enables us to learn something about the development of American manners and character in our dark ages. Adapted from Nation, 1894.

TUCKERMAN, Henry Theodore.

America and her commentators, with a critical sketch of travel in the United States. 1864.....r917.3 T81

"Useful and entertaining guide to the literature of description and criticism of the United States. Extensive extracts are given from some of the less accessible sources. Three chapters are given to the French and English travellers, respectively, and one each to the Germans and Swedish, the Italian and American travellers. Of especial value to librarians and to students of social history." Larned's Literature of American history.

BAKER, Charlotte Alice.

True stories of New England captives carried to Canada during the old French and Indian wars. 1897.....974 B17

"No more picturesque stories can be found than those of some of the New England captives carried during King William's and Queen Anne's wars to Canada...With a most sympathetic touch, after having turned over in Canada many a parish and convent record, walking pityingly in tracks which the captives...trod with bare and bleeding feet, [Miss Baker] tells of those by-gone sorrows." Larned's Literature of American history.

Devoted to an attempt to prove that in their attack on Father Ralé's mission at Norridgewock, Maine, in 1724, the New Englanders "were not murderers and assassins...but were driven to the necessity of subduing their savage neighbors, who were deliberately incited by Ralé and others of his countrymen."

Pilgrim Fathers of New England and their Puritan successors. 1895.....974 B79

"A clear, strong account, written with special reference to Gov. Bradford's History of Plymouth plantation and having illustrations of high grade. Two thirds of the book are devoted to the Scrooby Company...It is an English account of a great episode, unbiased and readable, but offering no new material." Larned's Literature of American history.

BYINGTON, Ezra Hoyt.

The Puritan as a colonist and reformer. 1899.....974 B99

Contents: The Pilgrim as a colonist.—The Puritan as a colonist.—John Eliot, the apostle to the Indians.—Jonathan Edwards and the great awakening.—Shakespeare and the Puritans.

"List of authorities referred to," p.23–26.

"Not...a comparative study of the colonizing ideals and methods of the Puritans, or of their peculiarities as reformers...It is rather a somewhat loosely connected group of essays...All are agreeably written, and the essential outlines are skilfully presented; but the concluding paper is hardly germane to the general theme of the rest of the volume, and is its least valuable portion. The book, as a whole, is worthy of cordial commendation." Nation, 1900.

DRAKE, Samuel Adams.

Making of New England, 1580–1643. 1894.....974 D78

"Embodies the results of thorough scholarship, presented in attractive form...The part devoted to Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Maine is especially satisfactory." Larned's Literature of American history.

FELT, Joseph Barlow.

Ecclesiastical history of New England, comprising not only religious but also moral and other relations, [to 1678]. 2v. 1855–62.....r974 F34

Dr Felt spent 10 years in arranging the old state papers of Massachusetts, engaged in much other antiquarian research and was noted for his thorough knowledge of New England history.

FISKE, John.

Beginnings of New England; or, The Puritan theocracy in its relations to civil and religious liberty. 1894.....974 F54

Bibliographical note, p.279–287.

"As the title indicates, this is not a formal history of New England, but an attempt to indicate the principles at work in its history down to the Revolution of 1689. The whole is considered as an illustration of the English method of nation-making, i. e., by incorporation with representation. The settlement of the Puritan colonies, the formation of the Confederacy and the overthrow of the Andros government are taken as the chief features of the period." Larned's Literature of American history.

HAWKS, Francis Lister.

History of the middle states illustrated by tales, sketches and anecdotes. 1844.....r974 H36

First published in 1833. Intended for "young readers."

MATHER, Cotton.

Magnalia Christi Americana; or, The ecclesiastical history of New-England from its first planting, 1620, unto 1698.

2v. 1820.....r974 M46

"Mather knew a great deal of the history he here essays, and most of the persons whose biographies he writes, and where he does not know he pads it out. He inserts documents of all sorts, and the most miscellaneous information. But he is eminently readable and enjoyable." Larned's Literature of American history.

NEAL, Daniel.

History of New-England, containing an account of the civil and ecclesiastical affairs to 1700, and their charter, ecclesiastical discipline and municipal-laws. 2v. 1720..r974 N17

"[Neal's] chief authorities were Winslow, Morton, Wood, Josselyn, Increase and Cotton Mather, and Hubbard, but he used also contemporary pamphlets and letters, and obtained by inquiry some private information. His work was, therefore, superior to anything of the kind that preceded it. He depended to a large extent on Mather's 'Magnalia,' but his attitude is that of one who wishes to be impartial." Larned's Literature of American history.

NEW England's first fruits, with divers other special matters concerning that country. 1865. (Sabin's reprints.)....r974 N26

Originally published in London in 1643. Divided into two parts: the first, "in respect of the Indians;" the second, "of the progresse of learning in the colledge at Cambridge in Massachusetts bay."

PALFREY, John Gorham.

History of New England. 5v. 1890–92.....r974 P18

v.1–3. During the Stuart dynasty.

v.4–5. From the revolution of the 17th century to the revolution of the 18th.

"Not only the most satisfactory history of New England we have, but one of the most admirable historical works ever produced in America. It shows great learning...comprehensive views...and sound judgment...Written in graceful and agreeable style." C. K. Adams.

"Its only shortcoming is that it deals somewhat too leniently with the faults of the Puritan theocracy and looks at things too exclusively from a Massachusetts point of view." Fiske's Beginnings of New England.

WEEDEN, William Babcock.

Economic and social history of New England, 1620–1789.

2v. 1894.....974 W42

Describes growth of industries and government during colonial period and deals specially with the social life of the people.

"Mr. Weeden deserves the thanks of all who are interested in the history of one of the most remarkable of human societies, for his work will prepare the way for the broader study of this history that is to come." Nation, 1890.

WINTHROP, John, 1587–1649.

Winthrop papers. 6v. 1863–92. (In Massachusetts historical society. Collections, ser.4, v.6–7; ser.5, v.1, v.4, p.287–313; ser.5, v.8; ser.6, v.3, 5.).....q1974.4 M45

"This mass of papers relates to the history of New England from 1630–1727, more particularly to that of Massachusetts and Connecticut. Many other papers from the Winthrop collection are scattered through the Proceedings and the earlier volumes of the Collections." Larned's Literature of American history.

917.4 Description and travel

BACON, Edwin Munroe.

Historic pilgrimages in New England among landmarks of Pilgrim and Puritan days and of the provincial and Revolutionary periods. 1898.....j917.4 B12h

Readable, well-illustrated historical guide-book to Boston and its neighborhood.

BARTRAM, John.
Observations made in his travels from Pensilvania to Onondago, Oswego and the Lake Ontario in Canada, to which is annex'd a curious account of the cataracts at Niagara, by Peter Kalm. 1895.....r917.4 B27
Reprinted from the edition of 1751.

BOLLES, Frank.
At the north of Bearcamp water; chronicles of a stroller in New England from July to December. 1893.....917.4 B61
"The scene is the neighborhood of Chocorua, and the papers will be pleasant reminders of old, and possibly guides to new, fields for those acquainted with the region." Nation, 1893.
Land of the lingering snow; chronicles of a stroller in New England from January to June. 1898.....917.4 B61l
Notes of a lover of nature on his walks and longer excursions radiating from Cambridge, Mass. It is remarkable how much of interest he finds in winter and his description of the reluctant advance of the New England spring is very faithful. As a naturalist he is most interested in the birds.

BURNABY, Andrew.
Travels through the middle settlements in North America in 1759 and 1760. 1798.....qr917.4 B92
"There is a pleasant tone, a wise and educated spirit in this record, which make ample amends for the obvious influences of the writer's religious and political views upon his impressions of the country and the people. The Rev. Andrew Burnaby was a native of Lancastershire, an élève of Westminster School, and a graduate of Queen's College, Cambridge...His book on America was 'praised and valued' as a fair and agreeable report of 'the state of the colonies' then called the 'Middle Settlements.'" Tuckerman's America and her commentators.

CHILD, Frank Samuel.
The colonial parson of New England. 1896.....917.4 C43
"Generally similar in matter and treatment to the books of Mrs. Alice Morse Earle...His book is pleasantly written, and affords some amusing and instructive glimpses of Colonial parsons in general... as well as parsons specific." Dial, 1897.

CROWNINSHIELD, Mrs Mary (Bradford).
All among the lighthouses; or, The cruise of the Golden-rod. 1886.....j917.4 C89

CURTIS, George William.
Lotus-eating. 1852.....917.4 C93
Contents: The Hudson and the Rhine.—Catskill.—Catskill falls.—Trenton.—Niagara.—Saratoga.—Lake George.—Nahant.—Newport.
"We should do the book an injustice...if we failed to recognize... its essential originality, its unapproached success in throwing around beautiful scenes an atmosphere less crude and arid than that of mere fashion, its peculiarly acute and amiable study of certain phases of American society and character in the light of Old-World travel and intelligence." W. D. Howells, in North American review, 1868.

DRAKE, Samuel Adams.
Nooks and corners of the New England coast. 1875.....917.4 D78
Beginning at Mount Desert the author gives pleasant description and interesting history of well-known points along the whole New England coast, York, the Isles of Shoals, Salem, Plymouth, Provincetown, Nantucket, Newport, Norwich, Saybrook and many other places. Illustrated.

DWIGHT, Theodore, comp.
Northern traveller, containing the route to the Springs,

Niagara, Quebec and the coal mines, with a tour of New England. 1841.....r917.4 D97

The same, combined with The northern tour. 1828.....r917.4 D97n

Cushing gives Henry Dilworth Gilpin as author of "The northern tour."

EARLE, Mrs Alice (Morse).

Customs and fashions in old New England. 1894.....917.4 E17

Contents: Child life.—Courtship and marriage customs.—Domestic service.—Home interiors.—Table plenishings.—Supplies of the larder.—Old colonial drinks and drinkers.—Travel, tavern and turnpike.—Holidays and festivals.—Sports and diversions.—Books and bookmakers.—Artifices of handsomeness.—Raiment and vesture.—Doctors and patients.—Funeral and burial customs.

"Collects a great deal of information which will be useful to students of the social and economic development of the colonies." English historical review, 1894.

FIELD, Edward.

The colonial tavern; a glimpse of New England town life in the 17th and 18th centuries. 1897.....917.4 F45

Farmer's boy. 1894.....;.....j917.4 J35

Describes work, play and yearly routine of the New England country boy. Attractive illustrations.

KENDALL, Edward Augustus.

Travels through the northern parts of the United States, 1807–08. 3v. 1809.....r917.4 K179

KNIGHT, Mrs Sarah (Kemble).

Private journal of Sarah Kemble Knight; the record of a journey from Boston to New York in 1704. 1901.....917.4 K34

"Madame...Knight...rode...substantially over the route now known in railroad parlance as the Shore Line. She was a widow, a woman of affairs...intelligent and humorous, given to putting down her experience in verse above the average of her time; and this record of her adventures and of settlements and manners along her way was highly rated for its historical value as soon as discovered." Nation, 1901.

LINCKLAEN, John.

Travels in the years 1791 and 1792 in Pennsylvania, New York and Vermont. 1897.....917.4 L71

List of authorities, p.9–11.

Life of Lincklaen, p.1–26.

John Lincklaen of Amsterdam journeyed to America in 1790 and penetrated the woods and swamps of western New York for the purpose of studying the maple sugar industry as an investment. The venture was not successful. The journals give a vivid realization of pioneer life and early geography. Adapted from Dial, 1897.

POWELL, Lyman Pierson, ed.

Historic towns of New England. 1898. (American historic towns.).....917.4 P87

Contents: Introduction.—Portland, by S. T. Pickard.—Rutland, Mass., by E. D. Mead.—Salem, by G. D. Latimer.—Boston, by T. W. Higginson and E. E. Hale.—Cambridge, by S. A. Eliot.—Concord, by F. B. The familiar stories interwoven with the early history of Massachusetts, having for their heroes such men as Miles Standish, Governor Winthrop, Sir Harry Vane, James Otis, the Adamses, Hancock and Revere, Daniel Webster and Horace Mann, Everett and Sumner, are here retold in a simple, attractive style for young readers.

BROWN, Abram English.

Beside old hearth-stones. 1897. (Footprints of the patriots.) 974.4 B78

"Searching out the homes of the minute-men who answered Paul Revere's alarm 'thro' every Middlesex village and farm' on April 19, 1775, the author tells us those little incidents of their daily lives that make clear to us their personality and environment...It is illustrated with pictures of many notable homesteads, relics, documents, quaint tombstones, and portraits of the patriots and their descendants." Dial, 1898.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass.—Council.

Records of the town of Cambridge (formerly Newtowne),

Mass., 1630–1703; the records of the town meetings and of the selectmen, comprising all the first volume of records, and being v.2 of the printed records of the town. 1901 ..... r974.4 C14

DEXTER, Henry Martyn.

As to Roger Williams and his "banishment" from the Massachusetts plantations, with a few further words concerning the Baptists, the Quakers and religious liberty. 1876 ..... qr974.4 D52

"The object of the author is to justify the original act of exclusion... The book has awakened the most emphatic approval as well as the most violent dissent; but its historical accuracy has not been successfully impeached. As to whether the facts as established justify the exclusion, there will doubtless continue to be differences of opinion." C. K. Adams.

DRAKE, Samuel Adams.

On Plymouth rock. 1897 ..... j974.4 D78

Contents: Old Cambridge.—Old Cambridge in three literary epochs.—Holmes.—Longfellow.—Lowell.

"Treats of Old Cambridge [Mass.]...from a predominantly and almost exclusively literary point of view...The extent to which Mr. Higginson is able to avoid the matter used in his 'Cheerful Yesterdays' [92 H536] and yet write so charmingly is highly creditable to his memory and to the fulness of his reminiscent mind." Nation, 1899.

HOWE, Daniel Wait.

Puritan republic of the Massachusetts Bay in New England. 1899.....974.4 H85

"Authorities," p.35–38.

"This is an attempt to tell once more the story of the Puritans and the development of the government they established in America. Mr. Howe prejudices his reader against him at the outset by confounding Pilgrims with Puritans and so throwing doubt on his sense of historical accuracy. He has told his story with unnecessary dryness, and without an adequate appreciation of the needs of the general reader on one side or the demands of the student on the other. The book contains much information, but nothing that is either new or original." Larned's Literature of American history.

JOHNSON, Edward.

History of New England, 1628–1652. 1826–46. (In Massachusetts historical society. Collections, ser.2, v.2, p.49–95; ser.2, v.3, p.123–161; ser.2, v.4, p.1–51; ser.2, v.7, p.1–58; ser.2, v.8, p.1–39.).....qr974.4 M45

The heading of the first chapter and the running title is "Wonder-working providence of Sion's Saviour in New England."

"A history of New England the book is not, but rather a history of Massachusetts down to...1651. Among New England histories it has the distinction of being the first to appear in print, for it was printed in London in 1653 (dated 1654). It was printed anonymously, but its author is known to have been Captain Edward Johnson, selectman and town clerk of...Woburn, Massachusetts...The hot zeal, the narrow partisanship, the confident dogmatism, which characterized so much of Puritanism, have in him a striking example...While he gives much valuable information, especially as to the successive planting of new towns and churches in Massachusetts, he is not seldom inaccurate." Jameson's History of historical writing in America.

ROBERTS, Ellis Henry.

New York. 2v. 1890. (American commonwealths.)....974.7 R53

"That part...recounting the colonial history is written with more care and clearness than the sequel...The portraits of royal governors are done with some touch of individual quality." Nation, 1887.

SCHUYLER, George Washington.

Colonial New York; Philip Schuyler and his family. 2v.

1885. .....974.7 S39

"A book of genealogy and family memoirs, with an abundant addition of history...The intermarriages give the author an opportunity to sketch the fortunes of the Van Cortlandts, Van Rensselaers, Livingstons and others. So closely were the Schuylers concerned with Indian affairs, that the author considers himself justified in recounting much of the history of relations with the Iroquois and the French during the colonial period. The Schuylers were Dutch, and that occasions a disquisition of nearly 200 pages on the history of New Netherland. But the matter presented is reliable, and the book is a valuable commentary on many phases of social development in provincial New York." Larned's Literature of American history.

SEVERANCE, Frank Hayward.

Old trails on the Niagara frontier. 1899.....974.7 S49

Contents: The cross bearers.—The Paschal of the great pinch.—With Bolton at Fort Niagara.—What befel David Ogden.—A Fort Niagara centennial.—The journals and journeys of an early Buffalo merchant [John Lay].—Misadventures of Robert Marsh.—Underground trails.—Niagara and the poets.

SMITH, William, 1728–93.

History of New-York, to 1732, with a continuation to 1814.

1814 .....r974.7 S66

"The material of the work throughout is drawn very largely from the journals of the Assembly and of the Legislative Council...It is strictly a political history...The style is simple, concise, dry...Ranks with Stith's Virginia and Hutchinson's Massachusetts as one of the worthiest examples of historical literature produced in later colonial times." Larned's Literature of American history.

Really ends with 1747, in spite of the title-page. A later edition in two volumes brings the history down to 1762.

STILES, Henry Reed.

History of Brooklyn, including Bushwick and Williamsburgh. 3v. 1867–70.....r974.7 S85

"It has evidently been a labor of love on the part of its author and editor, who has not only harvested but gleaned in every field of available information...Is of more than merely local interest...Profusely illustrated with views, maps, plans, autographs, portraits, and other illustrations, all well selected and admirably executed." Nation, 1870.

TURNER, O.
History of the pioneer settlement of Phelps & Gorham's purchase and Morris' reserve, [with] a continuation of the pioneer history of Ontario, Wayne, Livingston, Yates and Allegany. 1852.....r974.7 T86
"Traces the records of the Genesee Valley through the periods of warfare, exploration and settlement. Too diffuse and disconnected for an adequate history, it is an invaluable repository for a vast quantity of pioneer reminiscences." Larned's Literature of American history.

HASWELL, Charles Haynes.

Reminiscences of an octogenarian of New York, 1816–1860. 1896 ..... 974.71 H34

"It is not designed to furnish a history of the city during the period designated...It is purposed only to give my recollection of some matters and occurrences that came under my observation or knowledge and of some individuals who were prominently before the public, referring to matters previous and subsequent to the period embraced only when necessary to illuminate the subject treated of." Preface.

Illustrated.

HEMSTREET, Charles.

Story of Manhattan. 1901 ..... j974.71 H43

A history of New York city, written for children.

LAMB, Mrs Martha Joanna Reade (Nash).

History of the city of New York. 3v. 1877–96 ..... qr974.71 L17

v.3 title-page reads "History of the city of New York: the externals of modern New York," by Mrs Burton Harrison.

"The result of careful investigation. The first volume gives a faithful and picturesque account of the colony. The later history is 'too large and diversified to be treated otherwise than as a series of sketches.'" Nation, 1881.

"Mrs. Harrison continues the story from 1880, giving a succinct and lively description of events." Larned's Literature of American history.

ROOSEVELT, Theodore.

New York. 1891. (Historic towns.) 974.71 R68

"The chief merit of Mr. Roosevelt's sketch, so far as it relates to the history of the city of New York—for we think his digressions the best part of it—is the clearness with which he brings out the mongrel character of the population...The purely narrative portions of the history are very agreeably written, and leave the reader with the single regret that they are necessarily so much abbreviated." Nation, 1891.

STONE, William Leete, b. 1835.

History of New York city, [1868]. 1868 ..... r974.71 S87

"More truly an account of events which occurred in the city, than a history of the city itself...Mr. Stone's treatment of the present century constitutes the most valuable part of his book. But in that he dwells on the popular, spectacular and superficial aspects of the subject rather than on the essentials of municipal history." Larned's Literature of American history.

TODD, Charles Burr.

Brief history of the city of New York, [to 1898]. 1899...974.71 T55

"Weaves into his narrative details of the life of the people, their dress, manners, customs and fête days, with accounts of visiting travelers." Current literature, 1900.

Visits are made by a father, his sons of eleven and fourteen, and "the walking historian" to places of interest, past and present, and the facts are brought out in conversation.

917.471 Description

ALDEN, Mrs Cynthia May (Westover).

Manhattan, historic and artistic; a six-day tour; the greater New York guide book. 1897.....917.471 A35

"It does not seek to take the place of a directory. Many places of considerable interest are barely mentioned, and some are not mentioned at all...Visitors are told how to follow routes covering 12 half days, with an extra day in Brooklyn, so arranged as to bring them within reach of a larger number of interesting features than any other routes taking the same time would furnish, every foot of the ground having been gone over and the time carefully registered. The hours when visitors are admitted to different institutions are always mentioned, and calculated for in the itinerary." Preface.

APPLETONS' dictionary of New York and its vicinity. 20th year. 1898.....r917.471 A65

DAYTON, Abram C.

Last days of Knickerbocker life in New York. 1897....917.471 D33

An interesting description of New York in the early thirties, of its domestic and social life, its occupations and amusements, before the old Dutch element had been overwhelmed by the influx of a very different population.

Conrad Weiser and the Indian policy of colonial Pennsylvania. 1900. .....974.8 W19c

The same. 1900.....r974.8 W19c

Conrad Weiser came to America from Germany in 1709. Circumstances threw him much among the Indians, with whose habits, customs and language he grew familiar. Coming into the service of the province of Pennsylvania in 1738, he became the champion of the English among the Indians. His skill in guiding and controlling the Indian policy of colonial Pennsylvania postponed the threatened rupture with the Six nations, until the English colonies were prepared to cope with their French enemies.

Appendix contains the "Hazleton travellers; or, Numerous personal and family sketches of the ancient sufferers;" together with a description of the monument and a ballad on the terrible massacre of 1778, written immediately after the event.

"Miner was a local antiquarian, who gathered his materials from the people of the Valley, from printed sources and from original documents in state and English archives...Especially valuable for its accounts of the controversy between Connecticut and Pennsylvania, and the Wyoming massacre, on which subjects it is accurate and very full. It ends with the settlement of the controversy." Larned's Literature of American history.

History of the Girtys; also of the part taken by them in Lord Dunmore's war, in the western border war of the Revolution and in the Indian war of 1790–95. 1890..r974.88 B98

"Gathers from many obscure sources the thread of Simon Girty's renegade life, and the scarcely more reputable careers of others of the family, whose services, in aid of Indians and of British, made the name of 'Girty' a terror along the western borders of Pennsylvania and Virginia. The author undertakes not merely to record the facts, but to show the falsity of a vast amount that has been published about the Girtys, some of it in works held in good repute." Larned's Literature of American history.

DODDRIDGE, Joseph.

Notes on the settlement and Indian wars of the western parts of Virginia and Pennsylvania, from 1763 to 1783. 1876.....r974.88 D66

With newspaper clippings.

First published in 1824.

"Joseph Doddridge...was a physician and a missionary of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and in both his professions a man highly esteemed. He was born in Maryland in 1769, and in his fourth year removed with his family to the western border of the line between Pennsylvania and Virginia. With abundant opportunities in his youth of familiarity with the rudest experiences of frontier life near hostile Indians, he was a keen observer, a skilful narrator, and a diligent gatherer-up of historical and traditional lore from the hardy and well-scarred pioneers ...He was a keen student of nature as well as of humanity. His pages give us most vivid pictures of life under the stern and perilous conditions; not, however, without their fascinations, of forest haunts, of rude and scattered cabins, of domestic and social relations, of the resources of the heroic whites, and of the qualities of Indian warfare in the desperate struggle with the invaders." Winsor's Narrative and critical history of America.

GIST, Christopher.

Christopher Gist's journals, with notes and biographies of his contemporaries, by W. M. Darlington. 1893..qr974.88 G45

"In 1750 and 1751 Christopher Gist, the Agent of the Ohio Company of Virginia, explored the greater portion of the region now included within the boundaries of...Ohio, Kentucky and West Virginia, and parts of Western Maryland and Southwestern Pennsylvania. These explorations were the earliest made so far west, for the single object of examining the country, as they are the first also of which a regular journal was kept." Introductory memoir.

Exposure of a few of the many misstatements in Brackenridge's History of the Whiskey insurrection. 1859. .....r974.88 C86

"Intended not as a History of the Insurrection, but as a neutralizer of the influence of the books of the Brackenridges." Introduction.

FINDLEY, William.

History of the insurrection in the four western counties of Pennsylvania, 1794, and an historical review of the previous situation of the country. 1796.....r974.88 F49

"His treatise, on the whole, was written but to give a partial view of the matter, and as an apology for his own share in it, as was Brackenridge's account, who thought it worth while to recount the affair at large to illustrate and explain his own peculiar course. Findley's account was not in all particulars correct, so his contemporaries said, and he himself afterwards acknowledged that in some matters he had been misinformed, and in others he had relied on vague reports...There was only one edition of the 'History' printed, and copies are now scarce. All of his adversaries...admit that in the statement of facts he would not knowingly deviate from truth, but they assert that his prejudices were strong, and that his personal enmity biased his judgment. Findley and Brackenridge were very bitterly opposed to each other. In the matter of substantial gain and advantage, Findley probably had the best of Brackenridge; but now that they and their generation have passed, Brackenridge still gets the ear of the people in his inimitable satire in which Findley is caricatured." Albert's History of the county of Westmoreland.

FORD, David.

Journal of an expedition made in 1794 with troops into western Pennsylvania to aid in suppressing the Whiskey rebellion. r974.88 B67

Bound in copy 1 of Brackenridge's "History of the western insurrection."

GALLATIN, Albert.

Speech in the General assembly of Pennsylvania on the question touching the validity of the elections held in the four western counties, Oct. 14, 1794, with an appendix containing documents relative to the western insurrection. 1795. .....r974.88 G14

Speech against the resolution that these elections were unconstitutional and therefore void.

PENNSYLVANIA—General assembly.

Papers relating to the Whiskey insurrection in western Pennsylvania, 1794. (In Pennsylvania archives, 2d ser., v.4, p.3–550.).....r974.8 P399p1 v.4

Short historical account of the insurrection, p.5-18.

A large number of documents including those of the government and of the insurgents: official papers, correspondence, acts of Congress relating to excise, the president's proclamations, Hamilton's report, Judge Addison's charge to the grand jury, Gen. Lee's proclamation of pardon, and many other documents. In an appendix are given a few papers which appeared in newspapers and give the humorous side of the matter: an Indian treaty; speeches of Capt. Whiskey, Capt. Alliance and Capt. Pacificus, with the Jersey Blue's answer.

WILSON, Erasmus, ed.

Standard history of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania. 1898...qr974.886 W76

"Design of this work was to bring all continuous subjects, with as much detail as space would allow, down to the time of the Rebellion, and to sketch the most important recent events only. So many requests were made for the insertion of individual, business and family sketches that a few of a representative character were accepted and will be found grouped in one chapter at the close of the book. Owing to lack of space it was found impracticable to publish special sketches of many prominent persons and institutions; and accordingly a selection was made covering the entire range of the city's history and embracing those that would well represent many classes and pursuits." Preface.

Large volume of more than 1,000 pages, with no index. Illustrated with portraits. Contains chapters on manufactures, transportation, banks, schools, the medical profession, newspapers and literature, art, societies and associations, etc.

GORDON, Thomas F.
History of New Jersey, from its discovery by Europeans to the adoption of the federal constitution. 1834..r974.9 G65
"In this volume the general facts of New Jersey history may be found clearly and concisely set forth. The most valuable part of the book is that which deals with the proprietary period, and with the land system as it was when New Jersey became a royal province. In the preparation of this original authorities were used, which cannot always be said of the later parts of the work." Larned's Literature of American history.

History of New Jersey, [to 1876]. 2v. 1877.....r974.9 R22

"The larger part of the first volume...is an impudent plagiarism. It is for the most part a verbatim reproduction of Smith's 'History of New Jersey,' without, so far as I have noticed, the slightest acknowledgment until, on page 240, Smith is credited with being the authority for a minor detail of local history...The second volume, and that part of the first volume which was prepared without the silent coöperation of Smith, is a hotchpotch of history and statistics and local details, which, if they were well put together, might make a respectable gazetteer of New Jersey. But the character of the first part of the work throws doubt on all the statements made in the latter part." Larned's Literature of American history.

Travels through North and South Carolina, Georgia, East and West Florida, the Cherokee country, with observations on the manners of the Indians. 1792.....r917.5 B28
"While the author is largely concerned with natural history, the Indians and the white fur-traders interest him greatly, and his journal abounds in graphic descriptions of forest life and aboriginal manners. An appendix...specifically treats of 'The persons, manners, customs and government of the' tribes visited. The work is of high value as an original authority upon our southern Indians, during the period of the Revolutionary War." Larned's Literature of American history.

The same. 1902 ..... 917.5 L51

Reprint of the edition of 1672.

Lederer came to this country in 1688 from Germany. He offered his services to Sir William Berkeley, governor of Virginia, for the exploration of the Blue Ridge and Alleghany mountains. His three expeditions all failed in their object, the finding of an easy passage across the mountains, but his book is the first to contain a description of the geography of these mountains.

OLMSTED, Frederick Law.

Cotton kingdom; a traveller's observations on cotton and slavery in the American slave states. 2v. 1861–62 .... r917.5 O23

Journey in the seaboard slave states, with remarks on their economy. 1856 ..... 917.5 O23j

The same. 1856 ..... r917.5 O23j

"This work, contributed in the form of letters to the New York daily times, deals almost entirely with economic life in the South. The author, an ardent abolitionist, sees everything from that standpoint. He makes slavery responsible for all its ills, and has a remarkable faculty for seeing the worst side of southern society...The work abounds in bitterness, prejudice, misrepresentation and contradictions. Still, the author was a close observer, and there is much in the way of descriptions of country that is reliable." Larned's Literature of American history.

The old South; essays, social and political. 1900 ..... 917.5 P140

Contents: The old South.—Authorship in the South before the war.—Glimpses of life in colonial Virginia.—Social life in old Virginia before the war.—Two old colonial places, old Yorktown and old Rosewell.—The old Virginia lawyer.—The want of a history of the Southern people.—The negro question.

"The book owes its significance to the fact that the author is descended from a distinguished Virginia family, and has had special opportunities to absorb the traditions of southern life. Moreover, he has made a careful study of old records—some unpublished. While he recognizes the faults of the old régime, the author generally presents only the brighter side. Incidentally a strong defence is made of the much-maligned civilization of the South. Mr. Page writes in the best of tempers, and his style is generally marked by the same fine literary touch that is found in his stories." Larned's Literature of American history.

PANGBORN, Joseph Gladding.

BOZMAN, John Leeds.

Sketch of the history of Maryland during the three first years after its settlement, [1632–38]. 1811.....r975.2 B67

"As a literary production the work is dull, but as a source of information for the student it is invaluable. The author in all cases used the original sources, and that with scrupulous care. He refers to all his authorities and prints many important documents in his appendices." Larned's Literature of American history.

BROWNE, William Hand.

Maryland; the history of a palatinate, [to 1777]. 1890. (American commonwealths.) 975.2 B81

"Well-written and reliable outline of the history of Maryland. It begins with the colonizing experiment of Lord Baltimore in Newfoundland, and closes with the downfall of proprietary government in Maryland during the Revolution. Its author is not only thoroughly acquainted with the subject, but has shown good judgment. The account of events in the 18th century is very brief." Larned's Literature of American history.

v.3. 1812–1880.

"While we appreciate the industry and commendable zeal displayed in this work, we will venture to hint to Mr. Scharf that chronicles are written by heaping together facts, history by building them up into a complete and harmonious whole. Had he more thoroughly digested the material he has collected so laboriously, and condensed his three volumes into two, his history would have been none the worse book to refer to, and much the better book to read." Nation, 1880.

BROWN, Alexander, b. 1843.

English politics in early Virginia history. 1901.....975.5 B78

"The real controversy...was between the Patriot party, which determined to plant a popular course of government in the New World, and the Court party, which opposed that purpose. The object of this book is to explain this case and the results of this controversy; to show that the political principles involved in the contest...were of vast importance to us, and to give due consideration to the influence of politics in our earliest history." Preface.

First republic in America; an account of the origin of this nation, written from the records then (1624) concealed by the council, rather than from the histories then licensed by the crown. 1898.....975.5 B78f

"A work of great importance, but difficult to read or use. Under strict chronological arrangement, with hardly a trace of connected narrative form, are presented the important facts contained in the records of the Virginia Company, supplemented by others gleaned from the author's industrious researches." Larned's Literature of American history.

BRUCE, Philip Alexander.

Economic history of Virginia in the 17th century. 2v. 1896. .....975.5 B82

Bibliography, v.1, p.15–19.

"One of the best historical works on early Virginia, and without equal in its special field. On nearly every phase of the economic life of the colony the information offered is full, and always first-hand; while the general presentation is balanced, and the literary merit considerable. The author is perhaps too trustful of early contemporary writers, and somewhat lavish of incident; and his views regarding the profitableness of slave labor are not those now generally held." Larned's Literature of American history.

CAMPBELL, Charles.

History of the colony and ancient dominion of Virginia. 1860. .....r975.5 C15

With ms. annotations by Isaac Craig.

"On the whole...the most satisfactory presentation of early Virginian history. The author's skill as a writer is conspicuous, especially in narration. In matters requiring the exercise of critical judgment, he is less successful. He seems to take his authorities as he finds them, without questioning their trustworthiness." C. K. Adams.

"The design of this volume is to tell the story of the severance of Virginia into two commonwealths, prefacing with some account of the causes leading up to the event: on the one hand, the internal antagonisms which had wrought towards disruption from an early day; on the other, the Southern Rebellion, which involving Virginia and setting up a military usurpation therein precipitated the crisis between the eastern and western sections that had been gathering head for fifty years." Preface.

BYRD, Col. William.

Writings of "Colonel William Byrd of Westover in Virginia, Esqr.;" ed. by J. S. Bassett. 1901.....qr917.55 B99

Contents: Introduction [The Byrd family in Virginia], by J. S. Bassett. —History of the dividing line.—A journey to the land of Eden.—A progress to the mines.—Miscellaneous letters.—APPENDIXES: Catalogue of books in the library at Westover; Genealogy; The Byrds in England.

William Byrd (1674–1744) was one of the most prominent members of the Virginia colonial aristocracy, a member of the Council for 37 years, and finally its president. He accumulated great wealth and gathered the most valuable library in the colony. The Westover manuscripts, first printed in 1841, contain an account of his experiences as commissioner of his colony in determining the border line between Virginia and North Carolina in 1728, together with a journey undertaken with a friend to survey a grant of land on which he planned to exploit iron mines, and another frontier journey to mines already in operation.

Of the "History of the dividing line," Prof. Moses Coit Tyler says: "It is almost unique in our colonial age; and it is, without question, one of the most delightful of the literary legacies which that age has handed down to ours. Here we have the off-hand, daily jottings of a very clever Virginia gentleman of the early time, who has traveled much, read much, been long in the best company; and who, with a gayety that will not yield to any hardship or vexation, travels for several weeks through a wilderness...encountering Indians, semi-savage whites, wild beasts, insects, reptiles, every sort of fatigue and discomfort, the horrors and grandeurs of nature in its wildest state."

Like many other early southern historians, he seems unable to get beyond the early colonial period. The book is one of value, however, and contains a luminous description of Florida during the American Revolution. The period from the acquisition of Florida by the United States to the present time Mr. Fairbanks does not cover as thoroughly as he might have done, although there is a somewhat detailed account of the Seminole War." Larned's Literature of American history.

"The author, a lawyer of Mobile, has made a special study of the church records, and other archives of old Mobile. His legal training qualifies him to understand, and, for the most part, to use them wisely in reconstructing the colonial history. In parts, however, the information given is dry and statistical; and the work would be improved by omissions. The temper of the author is judicial, and his style clear, concise and vigorous." Larned's Literature of American history.

BARBÉ-MARBOIS, François, marquis de.
History of Louisiana, particularly of the cession of that colony to the United States, with an essay on the constitution and government of the United States. 1830..r976.3 B23

"As the commissioner appointed by Bonaparte to represent France in the preliminary negotiations with the United States, Barbé-Marbois was well qualified to be the historian of the event; and his book has proved the general source of information about it. The vividness of its style quickens the usual tedium of diplomatic negotiations into a real dramatic interest, which culminates in the cession as a climax rather than as a result." Larned's Literature of American history.

BROWN, John Mason.
Political beginnings of Kentucky; a narrative of public events bearing on the history of that state up to the time of its admission into the Union. 1889. (Filson club. Publications.) qr976.9 B79

"Valuable contribution to an interesting subject; but written primarily to clear the memory of the author's ancestor, John Brown, one of the foremost men of his time west of the Alleghany Mountains, of the charge of complicity in the plan to separate Kentucky from the Union and unite it with the Spanish government of Louisiana." Larned's Literature of American history.

COLLINS, Lewis.

History of Kentucky; revised and brought down to 1874 by R. H. Collins. 2v. 1882 ..... r976.9 C71

List of authorities, v.2, p.11–16.

"This remarkable work embodies as much patient labor as has ever been given to the history of any American state, but the multitude and variety of the facts brought together make it rather a storehouse of information than a feast that invites the reader." Shaler's Kentucky.

GREEN, Thomas Marshall.

Spanish conspiracy; a review of early Spanish movements in the South-west. 1891 ..... r976.9 G83

"Deals with an important but keenly controverted subject in an acutely controversial spirit. Family feeling in Kentucky has entered deeply into the matter, and the author may be said to hold the brief of one side to the quarrel. The book is a reply to John Mason Brown's 'The political beginnings of Kentucky' [qr976.9 B79]...and will be valuable to the student of the general subject." Larned's Literature of American history.

JOHNSTON, Josiah Stoddard, ed.

First explorations of Kentucky: Thomas Walker's Journal of an exploration of Kentucky in 1750; being the first record of a white man's visit to the interior of that territory, now first published entire, with notes and bio-

RANCK, George Washington.

Boonesborough; its founding, pioneer struggles, Indian experiences, Transylvania days and Revolutionary annals. 1901. (Filson club. Publications.).....qr976.9 R18

Like other publications of the Filson club, this is an exhaustive monograph on its subject. The appendix contains many extracts from rare books, manuscripts, pamphlets and newspapers. Illustrated.

SHALER, Nathaniel Southgate.

Kentucky. 1888. (American commonwealths.).....976.9 S52

List of Kentucky histories, p.424–427.

Mr Shaler disclaims intention of writing a history but offers a most readable setting forth of the natural advantages and a historical outline.

"Author...was qualified by a long personal knowledge of men and events in Kentucky, to write the history of the state. He fought in the Civil War on the Union side, and presents a vivid picture of the events that marked the great conflict, as well as of the period of 'reconstruction.' Naturally, also, there is a good description of the geology of the state...Author's judgment seems to be occasionally biassed by excessive state pride; but he shows an honest effort to be fair towards those who thought differently from him in the Civil War. The style is clear and vigorous." Larned's Literature of American history.

BALDWIN, James.

Discovery of the old Northwest and its settlement by the French. 1901.....j977 B19

Sketches of historical events in the discovery and colonization of the section of country lying west of the Alleghanies and bounded by the Mississippi, the Ohio and the Great lakes. Suitable for school reading.

BARRETT, Jay Amos.

Evolution of the Ordinance of 1787, with an account of the earlier plans for the government of the Northwest territory. 1891. (University of Nebraska—Departments of history and economics. Seminary papers.)....r977 B26

Bibliography, p.89–94.

"Admirably clear and methodical history of the Ordinance of 1787 up to its adoption. Mr. Barrett treats impartially and judicially the rival claimants for the honor of having shaped the tenor of the Ordinance." Larned's Literature of American history.

BURNET, Jacob.

Notes on the early settlement of the North-western territory. 1847.....r977 B93

With annotations by Judge Veech.

"Valuable original contribution to the early history of the Northwest and particularly of Ohio. The author, educated at Nassau Hall and bred to the law in New Jersey, made his home in Cincinnati in 1796 and died in that city in 1853. He rode the circuit with the territorial judges; filled numerous important offices; was an active participant in many of the events which he relates...The book is not to be implicitly trusted, although perfectly sincere and aiming to be impartial. The author depended too much upon his memory, which he did not sufficiently refresh by reference to authorities." Larned's Literature of American history.

BUTTERFIELD, Consul Willshire.

History of Brulé's discoveries and explorations, 1610–1626; a narrative of the discovery of lakes Huron, Ontario and Superior, and of the explorations of Pennsylvania and western New York, also of the province of Ontario, with a biographical notice of the discoverer. 1898. (Western reserve historical society. Miscellaneous publications.) r977 B98

Brulé (1592–1632) came to Canada with Champlain in 1608. The geographical details which the author gives are helpful in identifying localities and his extracts from rare authors, as Champlain and Sagard, are gratifying, but he brings forward no new authorities nor newly discovered facts. Adapted from American historical review, 1899.

History of the discovery of the Northwest by John Nicolet in 1634, with a sketch of his life. 1881.....977 B98

"Complete and exhaustive account of the life and explorations of Nicolet, amply fortified by citations from the original authorities, and provided with a good index." Nation, 1881.

DRAKE, Samuel Adams.

Making of the Ohio valley states, 1660–1837. 1894.....977 D78

Popular history presenting the familiar tales of pioneer life and giving clearly and concisely other matter which is not found in the ordinary history. Excellent illustrations of life in early days.

"By reference to authority, by supplementary foot-note, by illustration from local environment Mr. Drake has stamped his narrative with the certificate of truthfulness." Dial, 1894.

ENGLISH, William Hayden.

Conquest of the country northwest of the Ohio, 1778–1783, and life of Gen. George Rogers Clark. 2v. 1896..q977 E64

"Noble historical and biographical work of permanent value, which at once takes first rank. The story is told with precision and in great detail; it abounds in contemporaneous documentary material of the highest value, and is enriched with a great many facsimiles of letters and autographs, besides portraits, views, maps, and other illustrations ...The appendix...contains a great variety of interesting matter, including in full Clark's account against the State of Virginia, and the strange history of the bill in chancery over his alleged will, filed May 6, 1835, and not dismissed till November 20, 1865." Nation, 1896.

ESPY, Josiah.

Memorandums of a tour in Ohio, Kentucky and Indiana territory, 1805. 1870. (Ohio valley historical series.)..r977 E84

"Mr. Espy's narrative is that of a man with a 'curiosity of observation' as he himself says, with an acute judgment which led him frequently to conclusions greatly in advance of his time." Thomson's Bibliography of Ohio.

FERNOW, Berthold.

The Ohio valley in colonial days. 1890. (Munsell's historical series.).....r977 F41

Small volume of 155 pages originally designed for use in schools.

HILDRETH, Samuel Prescott.

Pioneer history; an account of the first examinations of the Ohio valley and the early settlement of the Northwest territory. 1848 ..... r977 H54

This is v.1 of the Transactions of the Historical society of Cincinnati.

"The work of a man who had lived in the Ohio Valley more than forty years, and who was personally acquainted with a large portion of the early settlers. The chief interest of the volume clusters about the work of the Ohio Company, which made its first settlement at Marietta, and which soon extended its influence over the whole state." C. K. Adams.

HINSDALE, Burke Aaron.

Old Northwest; the beginnings of our colonial system. 1888. ..... 977 H57

Contains a chapter on the Pennsylvania boundary disputes.

"A series of essays rather than a continuous narrative...The story of this territory is told to the time of the admission of the separate states...A closing chapter illustrates the development of the Northwest, up to 1880. A creditable piece of work, mostly based upon secondary sources." Larned's Literature of American history.

MONETTE, John Wesley.
History of the discovery and settlement of the valley of the Mississippi by Spain, France and Great Britain, and the subsequent occupation, settlement and extension of civil government by the United States until 1846. 2v. 1846. ..... r977 M82
"One of the old established standard works on the history of the Mississippi valley, extending in time from the first Spanish discoveries in Florida to the admission of Texas into the Union. Although, as to colonial records, superseded by a younger generation of books... it is yet authoritative over an important field and period in American history; notably of the political and geographical complications following the Treaty of Paris, and the questions arising during the transitional period after the cession of Louisiana. The abundant notes given furnish a good bibliography on these subjects." Larned's Literature of American history.

HUTCHINS, Thomas.

Topographical description of Virginia, Pennsylvania, Maryland and North Carolina, with an appendix containing Patrick Kennedy's Journal up the Illinois river. 1778. ..... r917.7 H96

"Author...was born in New Jersey, 1730, and his whole life after his 16th year was spent in the western country; he was assistant engineer in Bouquet's Expedition, and did efficient service." Thomson's Bibliography of Ohio.

LONG, Stephen Harriman.

Narrative of an expedition to the source of St. Peter's river, Lake Winnepeek, Lake of the Woods, &c. performed in 1823, by order of J. C. Calhoun, secretary of war, under the command of Stephen H. Long; compiled from the notes of Major Long, Messrs Say, Keating & Colhoun, by W. H. Keating. 2v. 1825 ..... r917.7 L82

"One of the earlier reports on the region of the upper Mississippi, more valuable for its account of the Indians than for its geographical descriptions, long ago superseded." Larned's Literature of American history.

LOOMIS, Chester A.

Journey on horseback through the great west in 1825. [18—.] r917.7 L85

Small pamphlet describing a journey through Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Missouri.

MAY, John.

Journal and letters relative to two journeys to the Ohio country, 1788 and '89, with a biographical sketch by R. S. Edes and notes by W. M. Darlington. 1873. (Historical and philosophical society of Ohio. Publications.) r917.7 M52

"One of the best of the early journals of travelers on the Ohio, for economic views. May was a Boston merchant." Thwaites's Afloat on the Ohio.

PEYTON, John Lewis.

Over the Alleghanies and across the prairies; personal recollections of the far west. 1869 ..... r917.7 P47

The journey here described was taken in 1848, and the recollections afford some interesting comparisons between conditions then and now. The travels cover parts of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Kentucky, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Missouri.

PIKE, Zebulon Montgomery.

Expeditions to headwaters of the Mississippi river, through Louisiana territory and in New Spain during 1805–7; ed. by Elliott Coues. 3v. 1895 ..... r917.7 P58 v.1. Memoir of the author.—Mississippi river.

v.2. Arkansaw journey.—Mexican tour.
v.3. Index.—Maps.

"In historical interest and importance, Pike's reports of his expeditions stand second only to the reports of Lewis and Clark. This new edition, reprinted from the original of 1810, with copious critical commentary, exhaustive memoir of Pike, new map, and other illustrations, and complete index, presents the explorer and his work in far better form than he presented himself in the original edition. The work is edited on the same lines as Dr. Coues' Lewis and Clark, and shows an equal wealth of illustration." Larned's Literature of American history.

POWELL, Lyman Pierson, ed.

Historic towns of the western states. 1901. (American historic towns.) 917.7 P87

Contents: Introduction, by R. G. Thwaites.—Marietta, by M. C. Dyar.—Cleveland, by C. F. Thwing.—Cincinnati, by M. E. Ailes.—Detroit, by Silas Farmer.—Mackinac, by S. A. Shafer.—Indianapolis, by P. S. Heath.—Vincennes, by W. H. Smith.—Chicago, by L. J. Gage.—Madison, by R. G. Thwaites.—Minneapolis and St. Paul, by C. B. Elliott.—Des Moines, by F. I. Herriott.—St. Louis, by W. M. Cole.—San Francisco, by Edwin Markham.—Monterey, by Harold Bolce.—Los Angeles, by F. E. Winslow.

SCHOOLCRAFT, Henry Rowe.

Summary narrative of an exploring expedition to the sources of the Mississippi river in 1820; resumed and completed by the discovery of its origin in Itasca lake in 1832. 1855 ..... 917.7 S37

Author was appointed in 1820 geologist to Gen. Lewis Cass's exploring expedition to Lake Superior and the headwaters of the Mississippi.

SHEA, John Gilmary.

Discovery and exploration of the Mississippi valley, with the original narratives of Marquette, Allouez, Membré, Hennepin and Anastase Douay. 1853 ..... r917.7 S53d

"Contains a facsimile of the newly discovered map of Marquette. A painstaking study of the above named sources, with introductions and biographical sketches, written with a Roman Catholic bias. Valuable for the translated text, edited with careful notes. The Marquette Relation is also given in French. A fragmentary anticipation of Thwaites' Jesuit relations." Larned's Literature of American history.

SMITH, John Calvin.

Western tourist and emigrant's guide, with a gazetteer of Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois and Missouri, and territories of Wisconsin and Iowa. 1839 ..... r917.7 S65

Contains a map showing the lines of the United States surveys.

THOMAS, David.

Travels through the western country in the summer of 1816, including notices of the natural history, antiquities, topography, agriculture, commerce and manufactures. 1819. ..... r917.7 T37

Contains a map of "the Wabash country now (1819) settling."

"This journey was undertaken with a view to explore the Wabash Lands in the New Purchase. It is a work of sterling merit. The author (a Quaker) was a practical engineer, and on the whole, the work, although very unpretentious in style, is well worthy of attention. The route of the author was down the Ohio, stopping at all the towns and places of interest on both sides of the river." Thomson's Bibliography of Ohio.

THWAITES, Reuben Gold.

Afloat on the Ohio; an historical pilgrimage of a thousand miles in a skiff, from Redstone to Cairo. 1897 ..... 917.7 T43

Also published with the title "On the storied Ohio."

Selected list of journals of previous travelers down the Ohio, p.320–328.

Having a keen eye for natural beauty, as well as an intimate knowledge of the history of the Ohio valley, Mr Thwaites gives a most interesting account of this pilgrimage in search of "local color" for work on western history.

WHITTLESEY, Charles.

Fugitive essays; a reprint from various periodicals of the day. 1852 ..... r917.7 W66

Contents: Review of the "Historical transactions" of Ohio.—Justice to the memory of John Fitch.—Early discoveries in the Mississippi valley.—Rights of authors outside of copyrights.—Elevation of places in Ohio, with reference to the geological beds.—On the origin of bituminous coal.—Lord Dunmore's expedition to the Scioto towns in 1774.—Antiquities of America, Delafield's enquiry into their origin, Lokey's appendix.—On the natural terraces and ridges of the lake country.—The age of the material universe.—Settlement and progress of the city of Cleveland; Rise and fall of water in Lake Erie.—The coal and iron trade of the Ohio valley.—Boquet's expedition into the Muskingum country, Oct. 1764.—Two months in the copper region.—On the agricultural interest and condition of Ohio; Yield of wheat in Hamilton county, Ohio.—Relation of the Indian tribes to the whites in 1776.—Indian treaties and grants of title for the territory of Ohio.

History of Ohio, 1650–1787. v.1. 1854.....977.1 T25

"Although this first volume gave great promise, it has had no successor. The author's original purpose of writing a complete history of the state in four volumes seems to have been permanently abandoned. The fragment we have, however, is the most satisfactory account yet written of the ante-territorial period." C. K. Adams.

VENABLE, William Henry.

Footprints of the pioneers in the Ohio valley. 1888.....r977.1 V25

"These Centennial years are producing a full crop of 'Sketches'...The book is a valuable contribution to a class of literature much of which will be deservedly ephemeral...The narrative is made more vivid by extracts from or epitomes of the descriptions written by early travellers in the valley." Dial, 1888.

Indiana; a redemption from slavery. 1891. (American commonwealths.).....977.2 D92
"Gives a general view of Indiana from the time when the first French explorers entered the country to the admission of the state to the Union. The interest, however, centres in the sub-title. The attempt to break down the prohibition of slavery incorporated in the Ordinance of 1787 was vigorous and persistent, though not in the end successful, and this work gives the best accessible account of the struggle." Larned's Literature of American history.

EDWARDS, Ninian Wirt.
History of Illinois, from 1778 to 1833, and life and times of Ninian Edwards. 1870 ..... 977.3 E31
"An attempt to convey an impression as to the condition of Illinois during the years of its territorial life and the first years of its existence as a state. The effort was not very successful. The book contains a discouraging multitude of public documents, and is furnished with neither table of contents nor index. The documentary nature of the book would give it value as a work of reference if the student could find conveniently what it contains." C. K. Adams.

FORD, Thomas.
History of Illinois, 1818–1847, containing an account of the Black Hawk war, the rise and fall of Mormonism, the Alton and Lovejoy riots, and other events. 1854 .... r977.3 F76
"Ford was active in state affairs during the entire period, being Governor from 1842 to 1846. His history is based on his own experience and facts drawn from original sources. He was a man of moderate temper and moderate intellect, of strict integrity and positive opinions. Writing from the democratic point of view, he is not impartial or always just, against individuals he is frequently unduly severe. His style is uncouth, though at times forcible and direct." Larned's Literature of American history.

LAPHAM, Increase Allen.

Antiquities of Wisconsin surveyed and described. 1855. (Smithsonian institution. Contributions to knowledge.).....qr913.77 L31

"His object was to present surveys and descriptions of the earthworks of Wisconsin, mainly effigy mounds. He is cautious in offering explanations of the purpose of the mounds, but reaches the probably correct conclusion, that they were required by the ceremonies and beliefs of the builders, who were themselves the ancestors of the present Indians. Fifty-five plates, most of them from direct surveys by the author, accompany the text." Larned's Literature of American history.

HAZEN, William Babcock.
Our barren lands west of the 100th meridian and east of the Sierra Nevadas. 1875.....917.8 H38
In 1874 the author, a brigadier-general in the U. S. army, published a letter in the "New York tribune" pronouncing a large proportion of the lands of the Northern Pacific railroad co. worthless, both for agriculture and as a security for money. This aroused much controversy in which General Custer took a leading part, making a long reply in the newspapers. This pamphlet is a continuation of the discussion and reiterates the author's original opinions.

INMAN, Henry.
The old Santa Fé trail; the story of a great highway. 1897. .....917.8 I24
A most interesting story of this old trail, which was once the great highway from the Missouri river to New Mexico. Col. Inman tells of the first Spaniards who followed the famous trail, of the traders and hunters who followed them, and of the Mexican war, but has most to say of the many exciting encounters with the Indians which accompanied every stage of its history, from its opening to the day when the railroad invaded the region.

INMAN, Henry, & Cody, W. F.
Great Salt lake trail. 1898.....917.8 I24g
Next to the Santa Fé trail, already described by this author, the Salt lake trail is perhaps the most famous of the historic roads across the plains. This was the route of the famous overland stage, and no less famous pony express, of the expeditions of Fremont, Stansbury, Lander and others, and by this trail the Mormons traveled. "Buffalo Bill," joint author of the book with Col. Inman, began his remarkable career as a boy on this trail.

IRVING, Washington.
Adventures of Capt. Bonneville in the Rocky mountains and the far West. 1868.....917.8 I28ad
"Entertaining narrative of early travel and adventure in the West, but, as might be expected in the digest of an unscientific observer by a literary editor, the geographical features of the region receive scanty attention." Larned's Literature of American history.
Astoria; or, Anecdotes of an enterprise beyond the Rocky mountains. 1893.....917.8 I28
"Irving was put in possession of a large number of original manuscripts relating to Astoria by J. J. Astor. In addition he drew largely from other writers on Oregon. The result is a book indispensable to the student of the early history of Oregon, written in the inimitable style of this master of language. Irving's powerful imagination, however, occasionally led him to embellish the facts; he was also ignorant in respect to the geography of the West, and is not infrequently in error as to dates." Larned's Literature of American history.

Report upon the Colorado river of the West, explored in 1857–58 under the direction of the Office of explorations and surveys, with appendices. 1861. (United States. 36th cong. 1st sess. House. Ex. doc. no.90.) .. qr917.8 I33

Contents: General report.—Hydrography report.—Geological report, by J. S. Newberry.—Botany, by Professors Gray, Torrey, Thurber and Engelmann.—Zoology, by S. F. Baird.—Appendices.

"Important and interesting report on the lower course of the Colorado River and of its canyon as seen from the plateaus on the south, by a party led by a lieutenant of engineers, U. S. Army. The geologist of the expedition was Newberry, by whom a clear statement was made of the origin of the canyon and of the cliffs on the plateau uplands by ordinary erosion. The steepness of the canyon walls is much exaggerated in the illustrations." Larned's Literature of American history.

JACKSON, Mrs Helen Hunt.

Bits of travel at home. 1891 ..... 917.8 J12

Contents: California.—New England.—Colorado.

"There are thirty-eight chapters or sketches in this small volume; each distinguished by marvelous pen-pictures...sixteen relate to California scenery, eighteen to that of Colorado, four only to New England." Literary world, 1878.

v.4 is an index volume.

"Lewis and Clark's Expedition from the Mississippi river to the Pacific ocean was the first governmental exploration of the 'Great West.' The History of this undertaking is the personal narrative and official report of the first white man who crossed the continent between the British and Spanish possessions...The duration of the journey was from May, 1804, to September, 1806...This is our national epic of exploration, conceived by Thomas Jefferson, wrought out by Lewis and Clark and given to the world by Nicholas Biddle...It...has held its own for nearly a century as a standard work of reference." Preface.

"This edition...is in every respect commensurate with the literature of the subject and the importance of the expedition itself. It is...accompanied by a copious critical commentary, prepared after examination of unpublished official papers, and many other sources of information, including a diligent study of the original manuscript journals and filed notes of the explorers...The information brought to the illustration of the text is remarkable for its amount, variety, minuteness and accuracy." Larned's Literature of American history.

B. Goode.

"This report renewed the interest, first awakened by Newberry's account...in the marvels of the Colorado canyon and the lofty plateaus through which it is eroded. The record of adventure during Powell's passage through the canyon in small boats is most thrilling. A more popular account of the expeditions is given by the same author in the Canyons of the Colorado." Larned's Literature of American history.

UNITED STATES—War department.
Reports of explorations and surveys to ascertain the most practicable and economical route for a railroad from the Mississippi river to the Pacific ocean, made in 1853–54. 12v. in 13. 1855–60. (v.1–11, 33d cong. 2d sess.

House. Ex. doc. no.91; v.12, 36th cong. 1st sess. House. Ex. doc. no.56.) qr917.8 U25 v.8–10 contain the general report upon the zoölogy of the regions through which the surveys extended.

"Narrative reports of many officers on various routes, giving much information concerning the western country, but in large part superseded by more recent surveys. The publication of the reports being chiefly in the form of original journals, kept day by day, gives them a certain accuracy that might have been lost had the writers more frequently indulged in general descriptions; yet the want of summaries by the very men best qualified to make them renders it difficult for the reader to gather all the results that these numerous expeditions might have afforded. The illustrations seem to have been elaborated from imperfect drawings, and when compared with photographs, they are often found to give very erroneous impressions. There are many scientific reports upon the collections brought home. Unfortunately there is no general table of contents." Larned's Literature of American history.

Reports of the secretary of war, with reconnaissances of routes from San Antonio to El Paso, by J. E. Johnston, W. F. Smith, F. T. Bryan, N. H. Michler and S. G. French, also the report of R. B. BANDELIER, Adolph Francis Alphonse.
The gilded man, and other pictures of the Spanish occupancy of America. 1893.....978.9 B22
Contents: The gilded man.—Cibola.—The massacre of Cholula (1519).—The age of the city of Santa Fé.—Jean l'Archévèque.
"In this succinct work Bandelier covers much ground. He clears away the mystery for centuries enveloping El Dorado, the land of the Amazons, the seven cities of Cibola, and the province of Quivira—all the result of personal familiarity with a vast body of documentary evidence, extensive travel, and careful ethnologic and historical study. From kindred sources he sheds much light on the massacre of Cholulu in 1519, settles the question of the approximate date of the founding of Santa Fé, New Mexico, and renders important information regarding the expedition and betrayal of La Salle, thus supplementing Parkman's studies in this direction. Unfortunately the author was absent from the country when the work was passing through press, and the editorial labor was placed in incompetent hands. The result is a series of typographical blunders, many of them serious." Larned's Literature of American history.

"A modest title for a book which, in fact, is the most accurate 'history' of that Territory that has ever been published...Author enjoys the advantage of having resided in the country which he describes... Hence the book has a certain merit of subjective actuality, well felt and fairly expounded, in such a plain and unassuming manner as to put the contents within easy reach even of youthful readers." Nation, 1892.

The same. 1905.....917.9 S66a

Treats of the results of modern scientific irrigation in connection with colonization with coöperative capital. Describes the Mormon economic system, the Greeley colony in Colorado, the Riverside colony in California, etc.

SYMONS, Thomas William.

Report of an examination of the upper Columbia river and the territory in its vicinity, in 1881, to determine its navigability and adaptability to steamboat transportation. 1882. (United States. 47th cong. 1st sess. Senate. Ex. doc. no.186.) qr917.9 S98

"An exploration of the Columbia River east of the Cascade Mountains, with accounts of its rapids, branches, etc., and of the great lava plains of Washington, with some account of the Grand Coulée, Lake Chelan, and the neighboring mountain ranges. The descriptions of the natural features are accurate, but the geological theories are sometimes superseded by those of later observers." Larned's Literature of American history.

VAN DYKE, John Charles.

The desert; further studies in natural appearances. 1901 .. 917.9 V18d

The result of two years' wandering down the Pacific coast and across Sonora and Arizona. The light, the air, the color, the illusions, the vegetation and animals, are all made visible to the reader. There is an excellent chapter on the Colorado river.

"We learn in this book how to appreciate the spiritual part of the desert—its embodiment of mystery, its desolation, and its sublime silence." Outlook, 1901.

Utah

BANCROFT, Hubert Howe.

History of Utah. 1889 ..... q979.2 B22

"Authorities consulted," p.21–47.

Covers the period 1540–1886. Larger part of the book deals with the history of Mormonism, from its beginnings in other states.

SIMPSON, James Hervey.

Report of explorations across the great basin of the territory of Utah for a direct wagon-route from Camp Floyd to Genoa, in Carson valley, in 1859. 1876. (United States—Engineer department (army).).....qr917.92 S61

"Stands side by side in point of importance with the published accounts of Sitgreaves, Frémont, Ives, Emory...and other military explorers in the then almost unknown far west. As a contribution to the knowledge of the geography, ethnology, history, and natural history of the region traversed it is important and for the greater part thoroughly reliable. Simpson's scientific collaborators were of high rank in their respective fields of work." Larned's Literature of American history.

STANSBURY, Howard.

Expedition to the valley of the Great Salt lake of Utah; including a description of its geography, natural history and minerals, and an analysis of its waters, with an authentic account of the Mormon settlement, also a reconnoissance of a new route through the Rocky mountains. 2v. 1855.....r917.92 S79 v.1. Text.

v.2. Maps.

Report submitted to the War department from the Bureau of topographic engineers, April 1852.

"As an account of explorations from Fort Leavenworth to Great Salt Lake through a vast territory only vaguely known to the outside world, this report of a noteworthy military expedition is of value from many points of view. Stansbury was a careful observer and a thoroughly honest recorder of the physiographic features and the people of the country through which he passed or in which he sojourned. His liberal views of the Mormons, based on a year's intimate acquaintance and close study of them, but expressed at a time when only contrary opinions of the sect were elsewhere held, resulted in many unjust criticisms...The appendices to the report by various naturalists enhance its scientific value." Larned's Literature of American history.

California

979.4 History

BANCROFT, Hubert Howe.

California inter pocula. 1888.....q979.4 B22ca

Describes California from 1848 to 1856. Portrays the life and society in the mining camps and gives exciting tales of the gold discoveries.

"All this, while not history after any classic models, is extremely interesting and valuable and forms the storehouse from which all future historians in these fields must draw their supplies." Dial, 1888.

California pastoral. 1769–1848. 1888.....q979.4 B22c

"We are brought face to face with these people—with their flocks and herds...their domestic life, their amusements, occupations, and industries, their laws, their systems of government and religion. A chapter on 'The Bibliography of Pastoral California' is a striking example of the vast resources at the command of Mr. Bancroft and his immense accumulation of original material." Dial, 1888.

History of California. 7v. 1884–90.....q979.4 B22

"Authorities quoted," v.1, p.25–88.

Covers the period 1542–1890. Made up largely from rare and inaccessible manuscript sources.

Popular tribunals. 2v. 1887.....q979.4 B22p

Deals with the period in the life of the Pacific states from 1849 to 1856. Author defends the right of a government to take the administration of justice into its own hands when the existing laws are not adequate. Much space is devoted to a description of the organization of the San Francisco committee of vigilance in 1851.

HITTELL, Theodore Henry.

v.2. The Mexican governors. — The last Mexican governors. — The Americans.

v.3. Early mining times.—Progress of San Francisco.—State growth.

v.4. Early state administration.—Later state administration.

"Has done much and faithful work for many years upon his book, which probably represents the largest result yet obtained by any one man's unaided work in historical writing about California...Mr. Hittell's peculiar virtues, which show to better advantage in the later than the earlier volumes of his book...are those of a trained lawyer, unusually well versed in land-matters and in legislative proceedings." Nation, 1899.

ROYCE, Josiah.

California; a study of American character, 1846–[1856]. 1891. (American commonwealths.).....979.4 R81

"Is only what it purports to be—a study of American character as shown in California during the ten years after the Conquest. Certainly, then, it cannot be reckoned with as a complete history. But it contains some word-pictures of men and scenes that should live long in California literature; it brings home to the meanest understanding such merciless analyses of motives, such brilliant generalizations, that the whole story is illuminated." Nation, 1897.

Oregon; the struggle for possession. 1893. (American commonwealths.) 979.5 B26
"Authorities," p.3–6.
"Utterly unreliable as a history of the Oregon question...In the effort to show how Whitman saved Oregon almost every phase of the history is thrown out of proportion and much of it is grotesquely distorted. Besides its large fictitious element and its perversion of facts, Mr. Barrows's book is bewildering in its repetitions and digressions." Larned's Literature of American history.

DYE, Mrs Eva (Emery).
McLoughlin and old Oregon; a chronicle. 1900.....979.5 D98
The struggle between Great Britain and the United States for the possession of the vast and valuable territory of which Oregon forms a portion, and the part played by McLoughlin, of the Hudson bay company, are here set forth. The author also gives an account of the picturesque life in the mountains—the trappers, the Indians, the missionaries, etc.

NIXON, Oliver Woodson.
How Marcus Whitman saved Oregon, with sketches of life on the plains and mountains in pioneer days. 1895....979.5 N37
"Author himself crossed the plains to Oregon in 1850, and, as purser of the first Columbia River steamboat, knew much of the Oregon country pioneers. He attributes to the Washington authorities ignorance of the western region and defends the Whitman legend." Larned's Literature of American history.

The rainbow's end; Alaska. 1898.....917.98 H44

"Account of a journey by Mrs. Henderson from Chicago to Tacoma, Unalashka, St. Michael's and up the Yukon to Dawson. In it are recorded the impressions of a traveller who appears to have been wholly inexperienced in frontier life, exceptionally credulous of gossip, avid of sprightly tales, and careless in verifying random statements. Her adventures are related in a lively and amusing manner...The brightness and good nature, superficiality, inaccuracy, and cocksureness of the average American young woman stand out in bold relief on every page." Nation, 1898.

"This ostentatious title masks a fraud. The anonymous author... solved the perplexities of research and original composition by lifting bodily the work of Alfred Deberle, Histoire de l'Amérique du sud... Occasionally a paragraph is added, here and there a page; of more considerable additions there are two: the earlier pages of chapter IV...are excerpted from Robertson's America without any indication of the fact, and pp.312–330 are not in Deberle...Mr. Jones has given us a faithful rendering of his Spanish text." American historical review, 1899.

The result of the most elaborate and thorough investigation of manuscript authorities procured from Spain and of other original authorities collected in England and on the continent. The narrative is at once accurate and brilliant, and the descriptions of manners and events remarkably vivid and picturesque.

SQUIER, Ephraim George.

Peru; incidents of travel and exploration. 1877.....918.5 S77

"Mr. Squier's book on Peru stands foremost as the most valuable contribution to the archaeology of that country. Not only is it one which no ethnological student, no American antiquarian, henceforth ought to be without, but it is also well calculated to interest the general reader. While embodying the scientific results of two years spent in ...exploration, it is at the same time a diary of picturesque travel in a strange and most interesting land." Nation, 1877.

History of Paraguay, with notes of personal observations and reminiscences of diplomacy under difficulties. 2v. 1871. .....989 W27
v.1. 1526–1864.
v.2. 1864–1868.
Appendix contains correspondence between Rear-admiral Davis and President Lopez.
Mr Washburn's term of office as minister-resident at Paraguay (1863–68) included the period of the war between Paraguay and Brazil, and he was implicated in the alleged conspiracy of foreign residents against President Lopez.
"Mr. Washburn's personal recollections are intensely interesting, as descriptive of a people, a struggle, and a despot without a parallel in history. He is embittered and revolted, and but too justly so, by what he has seen, learned, and suffered, and his whole book, though intended to present a continuous narrative of historical facts, intermixed with descriptions and anecdotes, resembles a Congressional report by a 'committee on outrages' much more than a history." Nation, 1871.

Visits to Cape Colony, Australia and New Zealand, returning to England via Samoa, the Hawaiian islands, and the United States.
"It seldom happens that a man of genius and a master of English style records his experiences as a traveller. Mr. Froude has no surprising adventures or novel discoveries to relate; but his descriptions are pleasantly vivid, and his reflections are instructive even to those who may sometimes question his conclusions." Saturday review, 1886.

Contents: The Marquesas.—The Paumotus.—The Gilberts.—The Gilberts; Apemania.

The same, with A foot-note to history. 1896.....919.6 S84ii

"From Sydney, in April 1890, the Stevensons sailed again in the trading steamer Janet Nicoll. Aboard the Janet Nicoll, Stevenson began the series of letters for Mr. McClure, which were eventually published in the New York Sun, and, in England, in Black and White, selections from them being presented in the Edinburgh Edition in In the South Seas. They exhibit the Scot abroad in a somewhat dreary aspect. They are picturesque and skilfully written, as all of Stevenson's work must be; yet the author seems wilfully to ignore all of Polynesian life which might not have been set forth by a missionary discoursing at a tea-party." Cornford's Robert Louis Stevenson.

"Work undertaken to order seldom prospered with him, and these 'Letters,' having cost him more labour than anything he ever wrote, have less of his characteristic charm, despite the interest and strangeness of the matters of which they tell." Sidney Colvin, in Dictionary of national biography.

WAWN, William T.

South sea islanders and the Queensland labour trade; voyages in the western Pacific, 1875–1891. 1893....q919.6 W34

"He describes with much detail his twenty-three voyages for natives to the islands of the western Pacific, giving incidentally a full account of the methods of recruiting, both legal and illegal, as well as much information relative to the islands, and the life and customs of their inhabitants." Nation, 1894.

TWOMBLY, Alexander Stevenson.
Hawaii and its people; the land of rainbow and palm. 1900. .....j996.9 T93
Readable and reliable history of Hawaii for young readers. The author has used material from the best authorities, including Fornander, Alexander, Ellis, Jarves and Dibble, also personal information from Hawaiian and other sources.

919.69 Description and travel

ANDERSON, Rufus.
Hawaiian islands; their progress and condition under missionary labors. 1864.....r919.69 A54
Author was secretary of the American board of foreign missions and in that capacity visited the mission stations in the Mediterranean, India and the Sandwich islands.

BATES, G. W. (pseud. A. Haölé).
Sandwich island notes. 1854.....r919.69 B31
In his preface, written in 1854, the author says, "If the present condition of affairs at the Hawaiian Islands augur anything there can not but be a good prospect that they will soon form an integral portion of the United States...I have endeavored to portray the condition of things as they appeared to me in 1853, and my only aim has been impartiality, independent of all party considerations. I have taken especial pains to develop the past and present condition of the people, in their various relations, and have endeavored to specify a few reasons for the 'annexation' of that important group of islands."

BIRD, Isabella L. afterward Mrs Bishop.

Hawaiian archipelago; six months among the Sandwich islands. 1893. .....919.69 B48

The same. 1894.....r919.69 B48

"Bent upon seeing, doing, enjoying, and describing everything, and devoid of crochet or bias, Miss Bird is a model tourist...We do not know of any other handbook which so completely familiarizes the reader with the aspects of nature and life in the Hawaiian Archipelago." Athenæum, 1875.

BLACKMAN, William Fremont.

Making of Hawaii; a study in social evolution. 1899....919.69 B51

Bibliography, p.257–262.

"This work does not purport to be a history of the Hawaiian people, but a study of their social, political, and moral development." Preface.

CRAFT, Mabel Clare.

Hawaii nei. 1899. .....919.69 C85

"The special interest of the book lies in the fact that the writer's stay in the islands coincided with the last days of the 'republic,' and the annexation to the United States. Of the character of these transactions...she does not conceal her disapproval...Parts of 'Hawaii Nei' have already appeared in American newspapers." Athenæum, 1899.

KROUT, Mary Hannah.

Hawaii and a revolution; the personal experiences of a correspondent in the Sandwich islands during the crisis of 1893 and subsequently. 1898. .....919.69 K42

MATHER, Mrs Helen.

One summer in Hawaii. 1891.....919.69 M46

"Her record has fewer errors in the drawing than is usual in a summer tourist's book...The descriptions of Honolulu and of the Pali are especially vivid; and many pleasant glimpses are given of the late King, Kalakaua." Nation, 1892.

MUSICK, John Roy.

Hawaii; our new possessions. 1898.....919.69 M98

"Gives a very complete representation of the picturesque, complex, and varied life of the Islands, in their social, industrial, commercial and political aspects." Dial, 1898.

STEVENS, John Leavitt, & Oleson, W. B.

Picturesque Hawaii. 1894.....qr919.69 S84

Consists chiefly of pictures of the scenery and the people.

STEWART, Charles Samuel.

Arctic regions

ASTRUP, Eivind.
With Peary near the pole. [1898.].....919.8 A85
Astrup accompanied Peary on his expedition in the Kite in 1891–92 and on his second expedition in the Falcon.
"Readers desirous of obtaining information on the scientific results of Mr. Peary's persistent work in Northern Greenland will hardly meet with it in this volume; but they will find instead a most ably written narrative of life in this remote quarter of the globe, and more especially a fascinating account of the 243 Eskimo who occupy the eastern shore of Smith Sound." Athenæum, 1898.

BARROW, Sir John.
Voyages of discovery and research within the Arctic regions, from 1818, in search of a northwest passage. 1846. .....919.8 B29
Author (1764–1848) was secretary of the admiralty for about 40 years.
"More than any other man not actually employed in its operations, he had contributed to the splendid results obtained in the nineteenth century [in Arctic discovery]." Dictionary of national biography.

BATTYE, Aubyn Bernard Rochford Trevor-.
Ice-bound on Kolguev; a chapter in the exploration of Arctic Europe. 1895. .....919.8 B32
Kolguev is an island in the Arctic ocean belonging to Russia and about which little had been known heretofore. The manner of life of the Samoyeds who inhabit the island is described and there is also an account of its natural history.

BLAKE, Mrs Euphemia (Vale), ed.
Arctic experiences; containing G. E. Tyson's wonderful drift on the ice-floe, a history of the Polaris expedition, the cruise of the Tigress and rescue of the Polaris survivors. 1874.....919.8 B52

CONWAY, Sir William Martin.
First crossing of Spitsbergen. 1897.....919.8 C76
"While the coasts and outlying islands of Spitzbergen have been pretty frequently visited and partially explored, its interior was, up to the date of Sir William's expedition last summer, practically unknown ...While Sir William's adventures in the frozen north were not, comparatively speaking, of a specially thrilling or novel order, this story of them is pleasantly told and affords a clear impression of a considerable tract in the hitherto unknown interior of Spitzbergen." Dial, 1897.

With ski & sledge over Arctic glaciers. 1898.....919.8 C76w

"During 1897 Sir Martin Conway, accompanied by Mr. E. J. Garwood, continued the exploration of the interior of Spitsbergen, the first season of which was described in his former book, "The first crossing of Spitsbergen.' The search for the supposed 'inland ice' was continued in the more northern portion of Spitsbergen, which was also proved to bear merely glacial and mountain areas. The only large part of the archipelago which was found to carry an undifferentiated ice-sheet includes New Friesland and North-East Land. The discovery of this fact is the principal geographical result of the campaign of 1897." Evening post (New York).

DE LONG, George Washington.

Voyage of the Jeannette; the ship and ice journals; ed. by his wife, Emma De Long. 1893.....919.8 D41

De Long commanded the polar expedition subsidized by James Gordon Bennett, which set out from San Francisco in 1879. The Jeannette was crushed in the ice north of Siberia and the party after traversing the ice on sledges set out for the land in boats, reaching the Lena river. De Long and most of those in his boat died of starvation.

FRANKLIN, Sir John.

Narrative of a journey to the shores of the polar sea. 1823. .....qr919.8 F88

Author (1786–1847) was a famous Arctic explorer, discoverer of the northwest passage. He started on his last voyage in 1845. After some time had elapsed and no word came from the explorers, a number of relief expeditions were sent out, which finally found evidence that all the party had perished.

Narrative of a second expedition to the shores of the polar sea. 1828. .....qr919.8 F88n

GREELY, Adolphus Washington.

Handbook of Arctic discoveries. 1896.....919.8 G82h

Contents: The scope and value of Arctic exploration.—Early northwest voyages, to 1750. — Nova Zembla. — The northeast passage. — Spitzbergen.—Bering strait.—The northwest passage by sea.—The northwest passage by land.—Franklin's last voyage.—The Franklin search by land.—The Franklin search by sea.—North polar voyages.—The islands of the Siberian ocean.—Smith sound and Robeson channel.—Franz Josef Land.—The circumpolar stations.—Greenland.

International polar expedition; report on the proceedings of the United States expedition to Lady Franklin bay, Grinnell Land. 2v. 1888.....qr919.8 G82i

Author commanded the government expedition sent out in 1881. All but seven of the party perished from cold and starvation on the homeward journey, the survivors being rescued at Cape Sabine in June 1884 by a relief expedition under the command of Winfield Scott Schley.

Three years of Arctic service; an account of the Lady Franklin bay expedition of 1881–84. 2v. 1886.....919.8 G82

"The style of the narrative is excellent, easy and unpretentious...The discussion of the causes which led to the misfortunes of the party is brief, and, in all essentials, is in harmony with the views...generally entertained by Arctic experts who have a knowledge of the facts." Nation, 1886.

HALL, Charles Francis.

Narrative of the North polar expedition, U. S. ship Polaris; ed. by C. H. Davis. 1876.....qr919.8 H17

"Becoming interested in the fate of Sir John Franklin, he devoted himself for years to the study of Arctic matters, and made two expeditions fitted out by private subscription, and in 1871 sailed on the 'Polaris' in command of an expedition fitted out by the U. S. government, but died in October of that year." Allibone's Dictionary of authors.

JACKSON, Frederick George.
A thousand days in the Arctic. 1899.....919.8 J12
Mr. Jackson sailed from the Thames in July 1894, in command of an expedition which he successfully conducted for three consecutive years. His object was to make a thorough scientific investigation of the newly discovered Franz-Joseph-Land. The account of his work, carried on under the most difficult conditions amid the perils of three Arctic winters, forms a fascinating narrative of cheerful courage and perseverance. One of the most interesting episodes is the meeting of Jackson and Nansen on the ice-fields of Franz-Joseph-Land. The book is illustrated with original photographs and has an appendix summarizing the scientific results of the expedition.

JOHANSEN, Frederik Hjalmar.
With Nansen in the North; a record of the Fram expedition in 1893–96; tr. fr. the Norwegian by H. L. Brækstad. 1899. .....919.8 J35
"Johansen was the only companion of Nansen in the attempt to reach the North Pole after leaving the 'Fram,' and his is the only corroborative evidence to the narrative which Nansen gave the world in his great book...He does not possess Dr. Nansen's really great powers of narrative...He is just a simple wayfarer, recording the events from day to day, dwelling very much on trivialities, but always readable and interesting." Saturday review, 1899.

KANE, Elisha Kent.
Arctic explorations; the second Grinnell expedition in search of Sir John Franklin, 1853–55. 1868.....919.8 K12a
The same. 2v. 1856.....r919.8 K12
"This second voyage of Kane's greatly enlarged the world's knowledge of the Etah Esquimaux, and added to geography the most northern lands of that day, while the scientific observations were more accurate and valuable than those of any preceding polar expedition." Appletons' cyclopædia of American biography.
U. S. Grinnell expedition in search of Sir John Franklin; a personal narrative. 1854.....919.8 K12

KEELY, Robert Neff, & Davis, G. G.
In Arctic seas; the voyage of the "Kite" with the Peary expedition. 1892.....919.8 K15
"Divided into two parts, of which the first comprises the narrative of the expedition sent in 1891 to convey Lieut. Peary and his party to the Northwestern Coast of Greenland, while the second contains an account of the second voyage of the same vessel in 1892, when she was sent to bring the party home again." Nation, 1892.

LACHAMBRE, Henri, & Machuron, Alexis.
Andrée's balloon expedition in search of the North pole. 1898. .....919.8 L12
Written by Andrée's assistants in the preparation, equipment and departure of the balloon. It describes the construction of the balloon, the vain attempt made in 1896 to start for the pole, and the successful departure in 1897. This is preceded by a biographical sketch of Andrée. The book is fully illustrated.

McCLINTOCK, Sir Francis Leopold.

In the Arctic seas; a narrative of the discovery of the fate of Sir John Franklin and his companions. 1859.....919.8 M13

Also published with the title "Fate of Sir John Franklin."

The same. 1875. .....r919.8 M13

Author commanded the expedition which left England in the "Fox" in 1857.

MacCORMICK, Robert.

Voyages of discovery in the Arctic and Antarctic seas and round the world. 2v. 1884.....qr919.8 M14

In 1827 the author accompanied Parry in his attempt to reach the North pole and in 1839 was appointed surgeon and naturalist on the expedition of Sir James Ross to the Antarctic seas. In 1852 he conducted a search for Sir John Franklin.

MELVILLE, George Wallace.

In the Lena delta; a narrative of the search for De Long and his companions, followed by an account of the Greely relief expedition and a proposed method of reaching the North pole. 1892.....919.8 M59

NANSEN, Fridtjof.

Farthest north; the record of a voyage of exploration of the Fram, 1893–1896 and of a 15 months' sleigh journey by Nansen and Johansen, with an appendix by Otto Sverdrup. 2v. 1897. .....919.8 N12

Went north from Norway, skirting the north coasts of Europe and Asia, put into the polar pack ice near the New Siberia islands and finally reached the latitude 86° 4′ over the ice.

"A hasty transcript from the author's journals...but...a faithful, modest, frank and straightforward history of one of the most remarkable arctic explorations ever made." Nation, 1897.

Illustrations and maps.

First crossing of Greenland. 1896.....919.8 N12f

Narrative of the journey made in 1888.

NORDENSKIÖLD, Adolf Erik, baron.

Voyage of the Vega round Asia and Europe; tr. by Alexander Leslie. 1883. .....919.8 N43

Northward over the "great ice;" a narrative of life and work along the shores and upon the interior ice-cap of northern Greenland in 1886 and 1891–1897. 2v. 1898..919.8 P35

"This book may fitly stand beside Nansen's record of the voyage of the 'Fram.' The efforts it describes are no less daring and no less original, and if the results obtained are neither so important nor so striking, the human interest is greater...The whole story is told with manly simplicity and self-restraint." Saturday review, 1898.

Illustrations and maps.

RICHARDSON, Sir John, 1787–1865.

Arctic searching expedition; a journal of a boat-voyage through Rupert's Land and the Arctic sea in search of Sir John Franklin, with an appendix on the physical geography of North America. 1852.....919.8 R41

"Owing to his excellent arrangements for food and conveyance during Franklin's second expedition and this search expedition, not only was there no loss of life, but there was not even any privation such as temporarily to endanger the health of the men. His 'Journal'...was a 'model of the journal of a scientific traveller...abounding in varied information in relation to the geology of the country passed through, its natural productions, and inhabitants.'" Dictionary of national biography.

ROSS, Sir John.

Narrative of a second voyage in search of a north-west passage, and of a residence in the Arctic regions during 1829–1833, including the reports of Capt. J. C. Ross and the discovery of the northern magnetic pole. 2v. 1835. .....qr919.8 R73

Sir John Ross (1777–1856) was an English rear-admiral and Arctic explorer.

"The results of the voyage, remarkable for the length of time spent in the ice, were the survey of the peninsula since known as Boothia, of a great part of King William Land, of the Gulf of Boothia, and the presumptive determination that the sought-for passage did not lie in that direction; and also the discovery of the magnetic pole by Ross's nephew, Lieutenant James Clark Ross, while carrying out a series of extensive sledge journeys." Dictionary of national biography.

Antarctic regions

BORCHGREVINK, Carsten Ezeberg.

First on the Antarctic continent; an account of the British Antarctic expedition, 1898–1900. 1901..... 919.9 B63

"Sir George Newnes's expedition went and returned; and here, from the pen of its Commander, is an account of its faring...Of the results of their work, the location of the magnetic pole is of extreme importance...Also, to the mind of the Commander was proved 'the existence of bi-polarity.'" Academy, 1901.

BULL, H. J.

Cruise of the Antarctic to the South polar regions. 1896..919.9 B87

Primary object of the expedition was to prove whether the right whale or the sperm whale could be successfully hunted off south Victoria Land. Secondarily, the author wished to effect a landing on the South polar continent. This he accomplished, although the expedition was commercially a failure. It is a readable tale of adventure. Adapted from Dial, 1896.

COOK, Frederick Albert.

Through the first Antarctic night, 1898–1899; a narrative of the voyage of the "Belgica" among newly discovered lands and over an unknown sea about the South pole. 1900.....919.9 C77

"The Belgian Antarctic expedition had its origin in the interest and energy of Lieut. Adrien de Gerlache...The party under the command of De Gerlache was composed of Belgians, Norwegians, Russians, a Rumanian, and an American, Dr. Cook, the surgeon, anthropologist, and author of this volume, who had had some Arctic experience with Peary...The meteorological, magnetic, and hydrographic results of the expedition will prove of extreme importance in connection with the physics of the globe and the preparations for future exploration... To the Antarctic experiences Dr. Cook adds some interesting references to the aborigines of the Fuegian region, and a multitude of excellent illustrations, chiefly from photographs." Nation, 1900.

FRICKER, Karl.

Antarctic regions. 1900. .....919.9 F94

List of important books, articles and maps, p.283–286.

"History of Antarctic exploration is dealt with fully but closes with an account of the voyage of the Antarctic in 1894–5...The chapter dealing with the ice is particularly interesting, for the problems awaiting solution are clearly pointed out. The illustrations are good." Athenæum, 1900.

MURDOCH, W. G. Burn.

From Edinburgh to the Antarctic; notes and sketches during the Dundee Antarctic expedition of 1892–93. 1894. .....919.9 M97

"This writer, one of the most celebrated of antiquity, lived in the first century of our era. The work that has immortalized his name, and made him a favorite with wise men and promising youth, is the lives of forty-six Greeks and Romans. These lives he wrote in pairs, portraying one Greek and one Roman, and then drawing a comparison between them...Among the most delightful sketches ever written. As an ultimate and conclusive authority they cannot be accepted. But they are able to inspire, to charm, and to instruct. They take the reader into the heroic stir of Roman and Grecian life." C. K. Adams.

London letters and some others. 2v. 1891.....920 S631

Author was London correspondent of the "New York tribune."

"Nearly the whole of the first volume [is filled] with notices of eminent personages whom he has met—commencing...with Prince Bismarck and Count Herbert Bismarck, the German Emperor, Léon Gambetta, Louis Blanc, Lord Beaconsfield, and others of similarly varied distinction—and ending with Browning, Lord Lytton, Renan, Gustave Doré, Carlo Pellegrini the caricaturist, and Mr. Watts the painter... About a hundred pages are devoted to two of Mr. Gladstone's 'Midlothian Campaigns,' and to a discussion of his politics. 'Notes on Social Life,' including an elaborate description of the ways of London society...sketches of 'English Talk and Talkers,' and 'The American Girl in England,' are followed by 'Notes on Parliament,' and descriptions of various 'Pageants' (a 'Royal Review,' the Queen's Jubilee, the opening of the 'People's Palace,' etc.) which the author has witnessed; and the whole concludes with miscellaneous sketches, all more or less entertaining." Critic, 1890.

"Might have been called 'A Group of Perfect Worldlings.' It consists of an Introduction and studies of nine men...who devoted themselves, 'with that perfect consistency which marks only the greatest men,' to the unique cultivation of themselves...We need hardly say that, coming from Mr. Whibley, the analysis of the lives of those splendid worldlings is unmoral. They are his choice. In his ironical, detached way he sympathizes with them, but that is his affair. We are only concerned to say that he has done his work with art, with humour, and with a cheerful spirit." Academy, 1900.

Biography of the signers of the Declaration of independence, and of Washington and Patrick Henry. 1839.....r923 J49

LONGUEVILLE, Thomas.

Falklands. 1897.....923 L84

Throws a strong side-light on the period of the Romanist revival in England under James I and Charles I. The first Viscount Falkland was lord deputy in Ireland and played a part by no means insignificant in the history of his time. His son, an ardent royalist, was a scholar, philosopher and poet. The charm and value of the book lie in its treatment of what might be considered unimportant details. While not a great contribution to historical literature, the volume brings together, in convenient and attractive form, much that has hitherto been scattered and more or less inaccessible.

ROTHSCHILD, Ferdinand James, baron de.

Contents: The middle ages.—The 16th century.—Henri IV.—Louis XIII and Richelieu.—Mazarin.—The reign of Louis XIV.—The reign of Louis XV.—Louis XVI and Marie Antoinette.—The revolution.

"Anecdotes and personal incidents...arranged for the most part chronologically, but without regard to historical proportion or perspective. The chief fault of the book...lies in the incorrect estimates of men and deeds given by anecdotes chosen with reference to their dramatic interest." Nation, 1896.

WIEL, Mrs Alethea Jane (Lawley).

Romance of the house of Savoy, 1003–1519. 2v. 1898 .... 923.1 W68

The history of the present royal family of Italy is full of romantic incidents, and the author has dealt chiefly with these, enlarging on those personages who, by the picturesqueness of their lives, appeal most to the imagination. She tells many interesting anecdotes and altogether much more of the personal experiences than of the political lives of her characters. There is an introductory chapter giving a concise history of the family from the earliest times to the present day. Illustrated with portraits, views of historic buildings, etc.

"Author writes from the point of view of the political historian, as well as of the general observer and man of letters. Washington, Adams, Jefferson and Madison could have been but shadowy personalities. With the later presidents he was, however, more familiar. His opportunities brought him in contact with many of our noted men, and he was present on occasions of national importance which he is able to describe with the enthusiasm of an eye-witness." Current literature.

"The defects of the work are nearly allied to its merits. They are to be found chiefly in the strong partialities and animosities of the author; and, while these characteristics impart spirit to his pages, they detract very considerably from their real value. Lord Campbell was an energetic hater, and he never hesitated to give expression to his animosities. The value of his writings, therefore, is in the general impressions and the entertainment they afford, rather than in the correctness of the information they give." C. K. Adams.

Lives of the most eminent painters, sculptors and architects; tr. by Mrs Jonathan Foster. 6v. 1891–94 ..... 927 V22 v.6 is a commentary by J. P. Richter.
"These biographies...are the groundwork of our knowledge of the great Italian artists of the XV. and XVI. centuries...[The book] is extremely interesting, full of ancedote and picturesque narrative, and gives brilliant pictures of life in Italy during the epoch. The author's statements of fact have often been found erroneous, and are frequently corrected in the notes of this translation." Russell Sturgis.

BROWN, Mrs Lillie (West), (pseud. Amy Leslie).
Some players; personal sketches. 1899.....927.9 B79
Reprinted from the "Chicago daily news."
Sketches of most of the well-known actors, actresses and opera singers of the day, full of anecdote and gossip. The following quotation is a fair sample of the author's style: "Her voice was soft as chartreuse and had a glisten in it like the shine upon pearls...Youth hung all about her as an infant clings to its mother's skirts. It flecked her strange eyes with depths aglow in brown topaz...She is as yearless as the stars." Many photographic illustrations and facsimile letters.

Maclise portrait gallery of illustrious literary characters, with memoirs. 1898 ..... 928 B31

This admirable series of 81 portraits and groups, mostly full length sketches, originally published in "Fraser's magazine," preserves the familiar aspect of many men still famous, and of others who played a great part 60 years ago, though they are now comparatively forgotten. Of these drawings Dante Gabriel Rossetti says: "I suppose no such series of the portraits of celebrated persons of any epoch, produced by an eye and hand of so much insight and power, and realized with such a view to the actual impression of the sitter exists anywhere, and the period illustrated possessed abundant claims to a worthy personal record. Pre-eminent here, among literary celebrities, are Goethe, Walter Scott, Coleridge, Wordsworth, Charles Lamb and Thomas Carlyle. Each produces the impression of absolute trustworthiness as in a photograph."

ABAILARD, Pierre, & Héloïse.
Abelard and Heloise; a mediæval romance, with the letters of Heloise; ed. by Abby Sage Richardson. 1895..... 92 A116r
Letters of Abelard & Héloise, with a particular account of their lives and misfortunes by John Hughes. 1806..... 92 A116
First English translation. Contains besides the five letters of Abailard and Héloïse, one from Abailard to Philintus, a friend, also poems by Pope and Mrs Madan.
Lettres; tr. par E. Oddoul, précédées d'un essai historique par M. et Mme Guizot. 1839 ..... qr92 A116
Illustrated by J. Gigoux.
Love letters of Abelard and Héloise. 1901. (Temple classics.) 92 A116l
The love story of the illustrious Abailard and Héloïse is told in these six letters, which were written in Latin about the year 1128, 10 years after the lovers had separated, Abailard to become a monk and Héloïse a nun. Though both were famous in their day, Abailard as a philosopher and logician, Héloïse for her learning, it is by these incomparable letters alone that they live to-day.
ABAILARD, Pierre.
McCabe, Joseph. Peter Abélard. 1901 ..... 92 A116m
"It is less with the tragic romance with which Abelard's name is principally associated than with the career of the philosopher, the theologian, and the ascetic that Mr. McCabe is concerned." Academy, 1901.
ABDURRAHMAN, Khan.
Wheeler, Stephen. Ameer Abdur Rahman. 1895. (Public men of to-day.) 92 A136w
Life of the ruler of Afghanistan, who was proclaimed ameer in 1880.
ABERDEEN, George Hamilton Gordon, earl of.
Gordon, Sir Arthur Hamilton. Earl of Aberdeen. 1893. (Prime ministers of Queen Victoria.) 92 A143g
British statesman of the early 19th century. In 1814, he signed the Treaty of Paris as one of the representatives of Great Britain and was premier in 1852–55, his ministry being formed by a coalition of Whigs and Peelites.
"There was little in his public career to dazzle the spectator, or to command instant or excessive admiration; and neither his mental powers nor rare personal charm can now be fairly appreciated, except by those who, like the author of this book, lived in close personal intercourse with him, and have had access to the mass of his correspondence, public and private." Dial, 1893.

ABERNETHY, John.

Macilwain, George. Memoirs of John Abernethy, with a view of his lectures, writings and character. 1853.....92 A146m

Abernethy (1764–1831) had in his lifetime the highest reputation as a surgeon, anatomist and physiologist, and exercised great influence on his profession.

ABINGTON, Mrs Frances (Barton).

Life of Mrs Abington, celebrated comic actress, with full accounts of her various performances in the theatres of London and Dublin, also notes upon the history of the Irish stage and notices, anecdotes and criticisms of her theatrical contemporaries, by the editor of the "Life of Quin." 1888.....q92 A149

Mrs Abington (1737–1815) was the daughter of a private soldier in the Guards. From the position of a flower-girl she rose to eminence on the stage and enjoyed a successful career of 43 years. She was the original representative of 30 characters, the most famous being her crowning triumph, Lady Teazle.

ABRANTÈS, Laure (Permon) Junot, duchesse d'. See JUNOT, Laure (Permon), duchesse d'Abrantès.

ADAMS, Mrs Abigail (Smith).

Letters. 2v. 1840.....92 A2112

Memoir, by C. F. Adams, v.1, p.13–84.

These letters of Abigail Adams, wife of John Adams, second president of the United States, give a valuable picture of the times, and glimpses of many stirring events. The collection contains letters to her husband during the Revolution and letters to her family, when she was with Mr Adams in Paris, London, Philadelphia and Washington.

ADAMS, Charles Francis, 1807–86.

The same. 1900. (American statesmen.).....r92 A211a

Mr Adams's public life covered a period of only 13 years and was almost entirely connected with events of the Civil war. In this biography by his son we have clearly defined the character and value of his services as minister to England and member of the Geneva tribunal.

ADAMS, John, 1735–1826, & Cunningham, William, of Fitchburg, Mass.

Correspondence, beginning in 1803 and ending in 1812. 1823. .....qr92 A214

Written by the ex-president to a relative, shortly after being defeated for re-election. They were under the seal of the strictest confidence and dealt with the chief actors and events in the latter part of his public life. They were vehement, abusive and unjust. Mr C. F. Adams says that an heir of Cunningham gave them to the opponents of John Quincy Adams to be used against him when he was a candidate for the presidency. It was a great mistake upon Adams's part that he wrote them, and a grave misfortune that they were published, even though dishonorably and many years afterward.

ADAMS, John, 1735–1826.

Adams, Charles Francis, 1807–86. Life of John Adams; begun by John Q. Adams. 2v. in 1. 1871.....92 A214a

John Adams, second president of the United States, was one of the leaders of the patriot party in Massachusetts before the Revolution, signer of the Declaration of independence and prominent in political life till 1801. This biography is a republication of the one first published only in connection with his collected works in 1856, and therefore comparatively inaccessible.

Morse, John Torrey. John Adams. 1893. (American statesmen.) 92 A214m

The same. 1899. (American statesmen.) r92 A214m

"We have John Adams the man and patriot, in all his rugged honesty, full of courage in great emergencies when others fell away, pugnacious, wise, when his judgment was not clouded by passion, a statesman without tact, vain and conceited, yet always a patriot, possessing the traits found in most of the world's great heroes, yet not reaching the stature of a hero. It is a truthful portrait." Dial, 1885.

ADAMS, John, 1772–1863.

Brown, Mrs Mary Elizabeth (Adams), & Mrs Helen Gilman (Noyes). Story of John Adams, a New England schoolmaster. 1900 ..... 92 A2143b

Dr John Adams was well known as an educator, being principal of Phillips academy, Andover, Mass., 1810–32.

ADAMS, John Quincy.

Memoirs; comprising portions of his diary from 1795 to 1848; ed. by C. F. Adams. 12v. 1874–77 ..... r92 A2142

"Volumes of surpassing interest on the personal and political life of one of the noblest and most accomplished of our public men. The most striking and interesting peculiarity of the diary is the fulness of the author's reflections and comments on the men and on the events among which he lived." C. K. Adams.

Morse, John Torrey. John Quincy Adams. 1895. (American statesmen.) 92 A2142m

The same. 1899. (American statesmen.) r92 A2142m

"That Mr. Morse's conclusions will be those of posterity, we have very little doubt, and he has set an admirable example to his coadjutors in respect of interesting narrative, just proportion and judicial candor. If entire patriotism, incorruptibility, political fairness, prescience, initiative and high physical and moral courage are the marks of statesmanship it would be difficult to point to any of his contemporaries or successors who possessed them in an equal degree with Mr. Adams." Nation, 1882.

Quincy, Josiah, 1772–1864. Memoir of the life of John Quincy Adams. 1859 ..... 92 A2142q

"The light attempted to be thrown on his course has been derived from personal acquaintance, from his public works, and from authentic unpublished materials. The chief endeavor has been to render him the expositor of his own motives, principles, and character, without fear or favor,—in the spirit neither of criticism or eulogy." Prefatory note.

ADAMS, Samuel.

Hosmer, James Kendall. Samuel Adams. 1893. (American statesmen.) 92 A217h

The same. 1899. (American statesmen.) r92 A217h1

A study of the New England town meeting with Adams in the foreground.

"He was possessed with the instinct of agitation: led the people, not the leaders; cared not for place, but only for power; showed a mastery of means, a self containment, a capacity for timely and telling speech, that marked him a statesman, though he loved the rough ways of a people's government, and preferred the fierce democracy of the town meeting to the sober dignity of senates." Woodrow Wilson's George Washington.

"Interesting and appreciative Life of Adams—one which fairly sets forth the man, his work, and his times." Nation, 1885.

Wells, William Vincent. Life and public services of Samuel Adams, with extracts from his correspondence, state papers and political essays. 3v. 1865 ..... r92 A217w

"One of the most valuable contributions to our knowledge of the Revolutionary period. It was not written so much for the purpose of constructing a fascinating narrative as to give a sober account of the great events in which Samuel Adams took so conspicuous a part. The early years of his life are therefore rapidly passed over, and the principal part of the work is devoted to his Revolutionary services." C. K. Adams.

ADDISON, Joseph.

Courthope, William John. Addison. [1884.] (English men of letters.) 92 A225c

"It is praise enough to say of a writer, that in a high department of literature, in which many eminent writers have distinguished themselves he has had no equal; and this may, with strict justice, be said of Addison...He is entitled to be considered not only as the greatest of the English essayists, but as the forerunner of the great English novelists ...His best essays approach near to absolute perfection; nor is their excellence more wonderful than their variety." Macaulay's Essay on Addison.

AGASSIZ, Louis.

Agassiz, Mrs Elizabeth (Cary). Louis Agassiz; his life and correspondence. 1893 ..... 92 A262a

This biography by his wife gives pictures of Agassiz's early life in Switzerland, tells of his friendships with Cuvier, Humboldt and other distinguished scientists, of his scientific work, particularly in geology and ichthyology, of his work at Harvard including the founding of the Agassiz museum. The enthusiasm which he always kindled in others and his rare personal charm are felt throughout the book.

Gould, Alice Bache. Louis Agassiz. 1901. (Beacon biographies of eminent Americans.) 92 A262g

Bibliography, p.149–154.

Short sketch, giving the main facts of his career and quite a vivid idea of his personality.

Marcou, Jules. Life, letters and works of Louis Agassiz. 2v. 1896 ..... 92 A262m Author was one of the European naturalists who came to America with Agassiz in 1846, and he was his friend for nearly 30 years.

"Particularly remarkable for raking up old personalities and forgotten scientific quarrels." Nation, 1896.

AGNEW, David Hayes.

Adams, Jedidiah Howe. History of the life of D. Hayes Agnew. 1892 ..... q92 A273a

Dr Agnew (1818–92) was an eminent American surgeon and from 1871 to 1889 professor of surgery in the University of Pennsylvania.

AIRY, Sir George Biddell.

Autobiography; ed. by Wilfrid Airy. 1896 ..... 92 A298

List of printed papers and books by Sir G. B. Airy, p.369–404.

Airy (1801–92) was astronomer royal for 46 years, and this autobiography deals less with his private life than with his scientific work, which was varied and extensive.

AKBAR, emperor of India.

Malleson, George Bruce. Akbar and the rise of the Mughal empire. 1896. (Rulers of India.) 92 A313m

Akbar, the real founder of the Mughal, or Mogul, empire in India, was a contemporary of Queen Elizabeth of England. He was specially famed as a civil administrator, striving to reconcile the various races under his rule and bringing about many reforms. He seems to have been in some ways distinctly modern, particularly in regard to religious toleration.

ALBANY, Louise Marie Caroline von Stolberg-Gedern, countess of.

Paget, Violet, (pseud. Vernon Lee). Countess of Albany. 1897. (Famous women.) 92 A326p

"List of authorities consulted," in the preface.

"The great figure of her book is...Alfieri...By this figure, so strange yet so grand even in its contradictions, stands another more perfect as a contrast, a foil to it, than any novelist could have imagined. If there be in history one man more than another for whom friends should mourn that the privilege of an early death was denied to him, that man is the Young Pretender, Charles Edward. Vernon Lee... does not spare the adjectives to describe him in the days when he had 'let himself become a disgrace to the very memory of the men who had died for him.' Such he was when married by French intrigues to Louise of Stolberg...We have named her the last of the three because her place in the book is least, though as Countess of Albany she gives her name to it." Nation, 1884.

ALBEMARLE, George Monk, duke of. See MONK, George, duke of Albemarle.

ALBERT, prince consort of England.

Grey, Charles, 1804–70. Early years of the prince consort; comp. under the direction of the queen. 1867.....r92 A333g

Author was for some years Prince Albert's private secretary.
This memoir extends to 1840 only.
Binder's title reads "Queen Victoria's memoirs of the prince consort; his early years."

Martin, Sir Theodore. Life of the prince consort. 1882..q92 A333m

Written at the request of Queen Victoria.
"Throughout the work courtly reticence has been reconciled with independent judgment, and sincere appreciation has never expressed itself in the language of flattery." Saturday review, 1880.

ALBUQUERQUE, Affonso de.

Stephens, Henry Morse. Albuquerque. 1892. (Rulers of India.) 92 A345s

ALCOTT, Louisa May.

Cheney, Mrs Ednah Dow (Littlehale), ed. Louisa May Alcott; her life, letters and journals. 1892.....92 A355c

The same. 1902.....j92 A355c

Daughter of A. Bronson Alcott and author of "Little women" and other popular books for young people.
"It is an unstudied, almost fragmentary memoir which Mrs. Cheney has edited with wise reserve and good taste." Atlantic monthly, 1890.

ALCUIN.

West, Andrew Fleming. Alcuin and the rise of the Christian schools. 1892. (Great educators.).....92 A356w

"Books on Alcuin," p.197–198.
Alcuin was educated at York, and settled on the continent in 782, on the invitation and under the protection of Charlemagne. He was master of the school of the palace and served as general superintendent of Charlemagne's schemes of ecclesiastical and educational reform.
"Combines careful scholarly investigation with popularity." George Trumbull Ladd.

ALEXANDER I, czar of Russia.

Choiseul-Gouffier, comtesse de. Historical memoirs of Alexander I and the court of Russia; tr. fr. the original French by M. B. Patterson. 1900.....92 A3743c

"Translation...of the book...produced in 1828, three years after the Czar's death...The comtesse...had the advantage of knowing the Czar well, but her writing is frothy and vain where her own contact with the Russian court is to be described, and her moralizing is of the most vapid kind." Nation, 1900.

ALEXANDER II, czar of Russia.

[Joyneville, C.] Life of Alexander II, emperor of all the Russias. 1883.....92 A3741j

Author lived for a long time in Russia and on the personal history of the czar he is well informed and his account is interesting. His narrative of the political history of the reign is written from the strongly Russian standpoint.

ALEXANDER III, czar of Russia.

Lowe, Charles. Alexander III of Russia. 1895.....92 A3742l

Clear, interesting and fairly impartial memoir, though it is written rather from the British standpoint, and the author's sympathies are plainly not with Russia. The first chapter contains an excellent summary of the history of Alexander's ancestors from Catharine II, and there are interesting accounts of certain great ceremonies which the author witnessed.

ALEXANDER THE GREAT.

Abbott, Jacob. History of Alexander the Great. 1876....92 A374a

This history of the famous Macedonian king and conqueror was written 50 years ago and in its style is quite different from the present approved manner of writing biography for the young, but, in common with the other biographies and histories by the same author, it was exceedingly popular in its day, and is still much read.

Dodge, Theodore Ayrault. Alexander; a history of the origin and growth of the art of war, to the battle of Ipsus, B. C. 301, with a detailed account of the campaigns of the great Macedonian. 1890. (Great captains.).....92 A374d

The best ancient and modern authorities have been consulted to make up a complete history of Alexander's wars, and the author has taken great pains to explain and describe the equipments and tactics of the Greeks and Persians. Illustrated with many charts, maps, topographical sketches and woodcuts of armor.

Hogarth, David George. Philip and Alexander of Macedon; two essays in biography. 1897.....92 P4951h

"Author speaks to the cultivated public rather than to the scholar...He mentions only the telling facts, pursues only the main line of events; and, thus avoiding detail, gives us a remarkably perspicuous narrative of the rise of Philip's kingdom and Alexander's empire." Nation, 1897.

Wheeler, Benjamin Ide. Alexander the Great; the merging of East and West in universal history. 1900. (Heroes of the nations.).....92 A374w

"A history of the period as well as of the man...Tells the story of Alexander's aims and achievements with considerable detail and admirable clearness." Nation, 1900.

ALFIERI, Vittorio, conte.

Autobiography, with an essay by W. D. Howells. 1877. (Autobiographic series.).....92 A387

Famous Italian tragic poet and dramatist of the 18th century.

"Work of intense interest, and perhaps the most thoroughly sincere among celebrated books of its order of literature. It depicts a man continually under the influence of pride and discontent, but whom pride and discontent stimulate to lofty endeavour and noble actions... This psychological interest is relieved and enhanced by the details of his numerous adventures, his extensive travels, and his love affairs, three of which were memorable." Garnett's Italian literature.

ALFRED THE GREAT, king of England.

Abbott, Jacob. History of King Alfred. 1877.....92 A392a

Besant, Sir Walter. Story of King Alfred. 1901. (Library of useful stories.).....92 A392be

Good short history of the career of Alfred and the position of England in the 9th century.

Bowker, Alfred, ed. Alfred the Great. 1899.....92 A392b

Contents: Introduction, by Sir Walter Besant.—Alfred as king, by Frederic Harrison.—Alfred as a religious man and an educationalist, by G. F. Browne.—Alfred as a warrior, by Charles Oman.—Alfred as a geographer, by Sir Clements Markham.—Alfred as a writer, by John Earle.—English law before the Norman conquest, by Sir Frederick Pollock.—Alfred and the arts, by W. J. Loftie.

Conybeare, Edward. Alfred in the chroniclers. 1900.....92 A392c

"Purpose is to put before unlearned readers in their own language all those passages of our early historians which can possibly rank as sources for either the real or the legendary history of King Alfred ...An introduction, giving an account of Alfred's life and work, is prefixed, and the book is accompanied by a map of England in the 9th century...Unfortunately the workmanship is far from being altogether scholarly...Considering the popular object of the book, its defects are not likely to do much harm, and for many readers it may be both instructive and entertaining." Athenæum, 1900.

Draper, Warwick Herbert. Alfred the Great. 1901.....92 A392d
Bibliography, p.137–140.
Biographical sketch, followed by seven studies of different aspects of Alfred's life and work.

Giles, John Allen. Life and times of Alfred the Great. 1854. .....r92 A392g
Gives Alfred's will and several other documents in Saxon, and makes much use of old chronicles and histories, but is now regarded as more curious than valuable.

Hughes, Thomas. Alfred the Great. 1891.....92 A392h
"A book with a direct, practical purpose, not merely the biography of a great man. He does not profess to be an original explorer in the history of those times...[he] aims to turn the lessons of history to the account of the highest and most pressing needs of his own generation." Nation, 1870.

Author has made a special point of presenting the social and religious conditions of the age, and in order to increase "the general interest and lifelikeness of the narrative" includes many familiar, but entirely traditional events.

Pauli, Reinhold. Life of Alfred the Great; tr. fr. the German, to which is appended Alfred's Anglo-Saxon version of Orosius, with a literal English translation and an Anglo-Saxon alphabet and glossary by B. Thorpe. 1893.....92 A392p
Though written 50 years ago it still has a high reputation because of its thorough research, the fidelity of its spirit and the accuracy of its critical analysis.

ALLEN, Ethan.

De Puy, Henry Walter. Ethan Allen and the Green mountain heroes of '76. 1853.....r92 A425d Noted American revolutionary commander (1737–89), colonel of the "Green mountain boys." This biography is one of the standard works on the subject.

Hall, Henry. Ethan Allen. 1892.....92 A425h
A popular history of the hero of Ticonderoga.

ALLEN, Grant.

Clodd, Edward. Grant Allen; a memoir. 1900.....92 A4252c
Bibliography of the writings of Grant Allen published in book form, p.213–222.
"Grant Allen's life was charged with tragic interest...He had to live by his pen, and he soon learned that living by his pen, in the regions he was specially equipped for—namely, science and philosophy—meant starvation. Then he tried his hand at every branch of literature, and displayed versatility which was truly marvellous. He achieved success...But success came too late...He had been constantly thinking, planning and scheming to produce wares to catch the literary market, and this ceaseless mental activity and worry wore him out, and cut short his life at a comparatively early age." Academy, 1900.

ALLEN, Thomas.

United States—Congress. Memorial addresses on the life and character of Thomas Allen (a representative from Missouri) delivered in the House of representatives and in the Senate, 47th cong., 1st session. 1884.....qr92 A431u

ALLEN, William, 1710–80.

Extracts from Allen's letter book; selected and arranged by L. B. Walker, with an appendix containing pamphlets in the controversy with Franklin. 1897. (Burd papers.) r92 A432
Allen was chief justice of Pennsylvania, 1750–74. He was an extensive land owner in Pennsylvania, and Allentown, which was laid out on a portion of his land, was named for him. These letters, covering the period 1753–70, relate mostly to personal matters.

ALLEYN, Edward.

Alleyn papers. 1853. (Shakespeare society. Publications, v.8.) r820.8 S52 v.8

Alleyn (1566–1626) was an English actor, founder of Dulwich college. He was associated with Henslowe in his management of the Rose and Fortune theatres.

Collier, John Payne. Memoirs of Edward Alleyn. 1853. (Shakespeare society. Publications, v.8.) r820.8 S52 v.8

ALLSTON, Washington.

Flagg, Jared Bradley. Life and letters of Washington Allston. 1893 ..... qr92 A442f

This life of the eminent American painter (1779–1843) is compiled from notes, letters and memoranda gathered by R. H. Dana in preparation for a memoir, which however he never wrote. Allston's work shows high imaginative power and his ability as a colorist gained him the name of the "American Titian."

ALMA-TADEMA, Sir Laurence. See Artists, p.1254.

ALTDORFER, Albrecht. See Artists, p.1262.

AMADEUS, duke of Aosta.

Whitehouse, Henry Remsen. Sacrifice of a throne; an account of the life of Amadeus, duke of Aosta, sometime king of Spain. 1897 ..... 92 A481w

Second son of Victor Emmanuel II, was elected king of Spain in 1870. After a brief and unpopular reign he abdicated in 1873 and returned to Italy, where in 1890 he died.

AMHERST, William Pitt, earl.

AMICIS, Edmondo de.

Ricordi d'infanzia e di scuola; seguiti da Bambole e marionette, Gente minima, Piccoli studenti, Adolescenti, Due di spade e due di cuori. 1901 ..... 92 A5162

"Signor de Amicis is the most candid of autobiographers—he writes with an irony that subtly tells against himself, of his ambitions, his frequent discomfitures, his love of praise, his susceptibilities, his impetuosity, and finally of all the circumstances that decided his career as a man of letters." Saturday review, 1901.

Short stories and sketches fill the last half of the volume.

AMIEL, Henri Frédéric.

Fragments d'un journal intime. 2v. in 1. 1897 ..... 92 A516f

Journal intime; tr. by Mrs Humphry Ward. 1893 ..... 92 A516

"Amiel has been much compared with Obermann and Maurice de Guérin, but he is far nearer to us than either...There was in Amiel that deeper seriousness which we characterize by the word Puritan. It is for that type of religious mind, of which there are very many among English speaking peoples, even though they disavow the name, that the book will have the strongest attraction." Nation, 1886.

AMMEN, Daniel.

The old navy and the new; memoirs. 1898 ..... 92 A518

Life in the United States navy from the time the author entered the service as a midshipman of 16 to his resignation as admiral in 1877. Contains much of interest concerning the evolution of war-ships, and the naval contests of the Civil war.

ANDERSEN, Hans Christian.

Story of my life. 1871 ..... 92 A544

"The absolute candor with which Andersen lays bare his soul, the complete intentional or unintentional self-revelation, gives a psychological value to the book which no mere literary graces could bestow...

Andersen remained, until the day of his death, a child. His innocence was more than virginal; his unworldliness simply inconceivable...He conceived of his life as a fairy-tale...The feeling of the marvellous pervades the book from beginning to end." Boyesen's Essays on Scandinavian literature.

The autobiography brings the narrative down to 1867. An account of his later years will be found in Bain's "Hans Christian Andersen," 92 A544b.

Bain, Robert Nisbet. Hans Christian Andersen. 1895....92 A544b

"He retells the story, soberly, carefully, critically, perhaps with a little less than full fellow-feeling for the wayward, dæmonic, half-irrational, half-inspired element in Andersen's character, but certainly with great fulness of knowledge not only as regards the facts of Andersen's own life, and the books by him and about him, but also as regards Danish literature generally." Academy, 1896.

ANDERSON, George Bonbright.

Anderson, William C. In memory of George Bonbright Anderson, who departed this life Oct. 4, 1896. 1897..r92 A546a

Pennsylvania physician, 1853–96.

ANDERSON, Mary, afterward Mme de Navarro.

A few memories. 1896.....92 A548

Mary Anderson played with much success such parts as Juliet, Perdita, Galatea, Rosalind, etc. from 1875 to 1889, when she retired from the stage.

"As a contribution to theatrical literature her volume is of very small importance, but as a bit of autobiography it is exceedingly interesting ...From first to last...there is not one note of affectation or insincerity...The real interest and charm lie in the story of her life outside the theatre...of the friendship of many of the most distinguished men and women of the day." Nation, 1896.

ANDRÉ, Maj. John.

Lossing, Benson John. Two spies: Nathan Hale and John André. 1892.....92 H161l

The same. 1903.....j92 H161l

"Two Revolutionary sketches, turning about the dates 1776 and 1780. The one is based on Stuart's Hale and the other on Sargeant's André. The author makes a strong presentation of André's courage...The merit of the book lies in the illustrations drawn from nature by the author." Larned's Literature of American history.

ANDREA DEL SARTO. See Artists, p.1276.

ANDREW, St. apostle.

ANDREWES, Lancelot, bp.

Wood, Lady Mary Susan Felicie. Story of a saintly bishop's life; Lancelot Andrewes, bishop of Winchester, 1555–1626. 1898.....92 A564w

Andrewes was eminent as a prelate of the Church of England, as a preacher and as a writer. His "Manual of private devotion" is especially well known and widely used. In this short memoir the object has been to give a picture of his personal life and character rather than to enter on doctrinal questions.

ANNE BOLEYN, queen of Henry VIII.

Friedmann, Paul. Anne Boleyn; a chapter of English history, 1527–1536. 2v. 1884.....92 A613f

Author has not only studied all the English state papers bearing on the subject, but has made exhaustive investigations on the continent.

"Result is that he has been able to tell the tale of Anne Boleyn's ascendancy with a fulness, a clearness, and a graphic minuteness of detail with which it has not yet been treated in any English history." Academy, 1884.

ANSELM, St. abp. of Canterbury.

Rigg, James Macmullen. St. Anselm of Canterbury. 1896. .....92 A618r

"The first English biography which assigns due prominence to Anselm's minor works...It should be read by those who care to know Anselm rather as a literary man, a thinker and a theologian than as a statesman." Athenæum, 1897.

Rule, Martin. Life and times of St. Anselm, archbishop of Canterbury. 2v. 1883.....92 A618ru

"Contains a good deal of useful matter, the fruit of long and careful labour, but marred by irrelevant digressions and a cumbrous style." Dictionary of national biography.

"St. Anselm [archbishop 1093–1109] is the most universally attractive figure in the history of mediæval Christendom...That which distinguishes St. Anselm above all his contemporaries is that he still retains, and must permanently retain, a hold upon the respect and attention of men. This is the result of the unique many-sidedness of his character and work." Saturday review, 1883.

ANTHONY of PADUA, St.

Bell, Mrs Nancy R. Elizabeth (Meugens), (pseud. N. d'Anvers). Saint Antony of Padua. 1901.....92 A6282b

AQUINAS, Thomas, St. See THOMAS AQUINAS, St.

ARBLAY, Mme Frances (Burney) d'.

Diary and letters, with notes by W. C. Ward. 7v. 1854....92 A665

Fanny Burney's social advantages were great and the years of intercourse with brilliant people gave her unusual knowledge of the world. Not long after the publication of "Cecilia" she accepted a position at the court as keeper of the robes to Queen Charlotte. Her "Diary and letters" gives us one of the best historical pictures of that time, the everyday life at court, King George III's increasing insanity, and her own story of discomfort in uncongenial companionship.

"As a diarist Miss Burney is with Pepys and Evelyn, as a letter-writer with Walpole and Chesterfield. And unlike all of these, except Horace, she is a novelist as well." Saintsbury's Essays in English literature.

Seeley, Leonard Benton. Fanny Burney and her friends; select passages from her diary and other writings. 1890. .....92 A665s Passages from her memoir of her father, her diary and her letters to Crisp, with a connecting thread of narrative. Illustrated with portraits.

ARNDT, Ernst Moritz.

Life and adventures; comp. fr. the German, with a preface by J. R. Seeley. 1879.....92 A747

"These memoirs...may serve as a sort of Erckmann-Chatrian novel for Germany, showing us the side of the Napoleonic age which history for the most part overlooks, and at the same time they have the advantage over every novel that they are true, and also that they make us acquainted with an interesting and a celebrated man." J. R. Seeley, in preface.

ARNOLD, Benedict.

Arnold, Isaac Newton. Life of Benedict Arnold; his patriotism and his treason. 1880.....92 A752a

"Life of the celebrated general of the 18th century (1741–1801), whose treason is one of the Revolutionary episodes...The sources of information...are, in part, family papers. As the book is frankly an attempt to overcome the 'universal prejudice' against Arnold, it loses somewhat in impartial treatment, though the desire of the author to be just and fair is everywhere evident." Larned's Literature of American history.

ARNOLD, Matthew.

Letters, 1848–1888. 2v. 1896.....92 A757

"His friendly, chatty, confidential letters combine the simplicity of a child with all the mental and imaginative resources of a scholar, a poet, a philosopher, and a man of the world." Forum, 1896.

Saintsbury, George. Matthew Arnold. 1899. (Modern English writers.).....92 A757s

Chiefly a critical study of Arnold's literary work.

ARNOLD, Thomas, 1795–1842.

Fitch, Sir Joshua Girling. Thomas and Matthew Arnold and their influence on English education. 1897. (Great educators.) 92 A759f

The author of this biography was a colleague of Matthew Arnold in educational work, and he aims to present those characteristics of both father and son which are of special interest to teachers.

Stanley, Arthur Penrhyn, dean. Life and correspondence of Thomas Arnold. 2v. in 1. 1892.....92 A759s

There is only so much narrative as will enable the reader to take up the letters with a right understanding of the writer's opinions at different periods, and so far as possible his plans and opinions are given in his own words. Dean Stanley was chosen by Dr Arnold's family for the work, and has availed himself of the contributions of others who might have had better opportunities of knowing Dr Arnold, especially in early life. His own acquaintance with his subject began when Stanley was a pupil at Rugby, and extended with increasing intimacy until Dr Arnold's death in 1842, and it is to the latter's work as master of Rugby, with which his name is most closely associated in the general mind, that most space is given.

ARNOLD, Thomas, 1823–1900.

Passages in a wandering life. 1900.....92 A7592

"Account of his mental and spiritual wanderings is much more interesting than that of his corporeal ones. When he goes back to a generation of great men now dead—when he tells us how he went into the Catholic church—and out and in again—we are delighted, but his journeyings in New Zealand, Tasmania, and Sweden and Italy are hardly worth writing about. Of his father, Dr. Arnold, he tells us little that is new—there cannot be much left to tell—but his friends at Fox How, and his boyish recollections of Wordsworth, Southey, Professor Wilson, and Hartley Coleridge, are well worth reading." Spectator, 1900.

ARTEVELDE, Jacob van.

AZARIAS, Brother, (Patrick Francis Mullany).

Smith, John Talbot. Brother Azarias; the life story of an American monk. 1897.....92 A992s

An Irish-American, member of the Roman Catholic order of Christian brothers, whose lives are devoted to teaching. He was superior of the Rock Hill college at Ellicott City, Md. for several years and spent the last four years of his life, 1889-93, in the De La Salle institute, New York. He was the author of various books on philosophy, literature and education.

AZEGLIO, Massimo Tapparelli, marchese d'.

I miei ricordi. 1895.....92 A993

"The life of a man who was soldier, artist, diplomatist, novelist, and statesman; whose earliest reminiscences were of Alfieri and the Countess of Albany, and who lived to be introduced to the present heir-apparent of the British throne; who, born in the highest social circle, mingled by choice and by profession with members of every class, and who exercised no small influence upon the destinies of his native Italy, can hardly fail to present some points of interest." Quarterly review, 1867.

"This character of individuality, which impressed its stamp on his whole life, is charmingly revealed in every sentence of the memoirs which he has left behind him; so that, more than any of his previous writings, their homeliness and wit and wisdom justify the epithet which I once before ventured to give him when I described him as 'the Giusti of Italian prose.' Journal of a young artist, 1860–1884; tr. by M. J. Serrano. 1889.....92 B291

"It is not alone the outspoken wit, longing, and opinions of a girl writing for her own heart, and poising for her public at the same moment, but the self-revelation of a gifted and forceful nature, working itself out through successive phases of a life which, concentrated into a few short years, leaves an impression almost complete in its distinctness." Atlantic monthly, 1889.

Last confessions, and Correspondence with Guy de Maupassant. 1901.....92 B291l

"Interest is the same as that which gave the first diaries their popularity; but the present volume is more painful, covering as it does the last year of that brilliant, ambitious and restless creature...We see Marie making fashions, but no friends; criticizing society, pining for real expert praise of her pictures, flirting with Guy de Maupassant in a series of letters under a mask of anonymity; and over all...the restless energy, so soon faded, of the consumptive." Athenæum, 1901.

BASS, Edward, bp.

Addison, Daniel Dulany. Life and times of Edward Bass, first bishop of Massachusetts. 1897.....92 B295a

Account of the establishment of the Episcopal church in Puritan Massachusetts; the ecclesiastical causes of the Revolution; the history of the parishes during the war, and the consecration and influence of the first bishop.

BATCHELOR, Charles William.

Incidents in my life, with a family genealogy. 1887.....r92 B311

Mr Batchelor (1823–96) was born in Steubenville, Ohio, but lived much of his life in Pittsburgh. He was at one time captain of the "Allegheny" on the Pittsburgh and Cincinnati steamboat line, held interests in other steamboat lines, and from 1861 to 1865 was surveyor of the port at Pittsburgh. He was a prominent Mason and received the highest degree that can be conferred by that order.

BAUER, Karoline Philippine Auguste.

Posthumous memoirs; fr. the German. 2v. 1884.....92 B325

The author, a German actress, gives us a strange picture of court life and intrigues in the middle of the 19th century.

BAYARD, Pierre du Terrail, chevalier de.

Mailles, Jacques de, called Le loyal serviteur. History of Bayard, the good chevalier sans peur et sans reproche; tr. into English from the French of Loredan Larchey. 1883. .....q92 B333m Author was Bayard's secretary. His account, published in 1527, is the source of much of the information concerning Bayard. Illustrated with drawings and reproductions of old prints.

"Chivalry, deprived of fantastic extravagance, is perfectly mirrored in the character of Bayard, (1476–1524). He combined the merits of a skilful tactician with the romantic heroism, piety and magnanimity of the ideal knight-errant."

BAZZI, Giovanni Antonio, called Sodoma. See Artists, p.1283.

BEACONSFIELD, Benjamin Disraeli, earl of.

Froude, James Anthony. Lord Beaconsfield. 1893. (Prime ministers of Queen Victoria.).....92 B342f

"Three fifths of it are occupied with the early history and struggles of Mr. Disraeli down to the fall of Sir Robert Peel...The romantic interest attaching to the beginning of his marvellous career is so great that we should not blame his biographer for devoting only the lesser of the two portions of the book to the succeeding thirty-five years had that remainder been entirely given to the life and actions of the leader and reconstructor of the Tory party." Athenæum, 1890.

Gorst, Harold Edward. Earl of Beaconsfield. 1900. (Victorian era series.).....92 B342g

"An excellent life...from the public point of view." Athenæum, 1900.

BEATRICE d'ESTE, duchess of Milan.

Cartwright, Julia Mary, afterward Mrs Ady. Beatrice d'Este, duchess of Milan, 1475–1497; a study of the renaissance. 1899.....92 B3453c

"Authorities," p.9–11.
"Not restricted to the incidents of family relations and court society. It shows in a hundred ways how thoroughly Renaissance life was steeped in classicism, it investigates the political aims of Ludovico, it enters upon the relations of Venice with the northern states of Italy and it brings the French across the Alps...Her knowledge of documents and skilful use of detail could be used to advantage on the same line for a long time to come." Nation, 1900.

BEAUHARNAIS, Eugène de, prince.

Pulitzer, Albert. Romance of Prince Eugène. 2v. 1895..92 B348p
Considers the Napoleonic era from the standpoint of Eugène, Napoleon's adopted son, called for his courage, purity and nobility the "modern Bayard." His military and political career is traced, together with the story of his marriage and family life. Contains many letters of interest.

BENSON, Edward White, abp. of Canterbury.

Benson, Arthur Christopher. Life of Edward White Benson, archbishop of Canterbury. 1901.....92 B443b

Abridged from the first two-volume issue.

"Many circumstances combined to invest the fourteen years of his Primacy [1882–96] with exceptional importance...The...book is an important contribution to the ecclesiastical history of this century...It is also extremely good reading, and contains more than the ordinary proportion of racy and humorous anecdotes...We lay down these volumes...with a greatly enhanced opinion of the late Primate's ability, a juster estimate of his great work for the Church of England, and a warm affection for his interesting and complex personality." Saturday review, 1900.

The same. 1899. (American statesmen.).....r92 B4453r1

"Benton [1782–1858] is worth studying both as a type and individual. Mr. Roosevelt has most correctly shown that he is a representative of the West in its early generation, as distinguished at once from the East and the South...In his account of the strife of parties during the administrations of Jackson, Van Buren, and Tyler, the author has aimed to combine a reasonable regard for the demands, motives and passions of the time with the coolness of a philosophic historian." Nation, 1888.

BÉRANGER, Pierre Jean de.

Memoirs, written by himself. 1858.....92 B448

Gives the principal events of his poetic and political life.

"In all his works, in lyrics of levity, of politics, of worldly reflection,—Béranger...has given us an idea of the essential French character, such as we fancy it must be, but can never for ourselves hope to see that it is." Bagehot's Literary studies.

BERKELEY, George.

Fraser, Alexander Campbell. Berkeley. 1894.....92 B455f

Berkeley (1684–1753) was one of the most profound and original of English philosophers. He lived for several years near Newport, R. I. and gave a strong stimulus to philosophical and classical studies in America. This small biography presents Berkeley's philosophy in connection with his personal history.

Fraser, Alexander Campbell. Life and letters of George Berkeley. 1871.....92 B455f1

The same. 1871.....r92 B455f1

Collects all ascertainable information with large selections from Berkeley's papers, including diaries of his travels.

BERLIOZ, Hector.

Autobiography. 2v. 1894.....92 B4553

"A necessary help to a study of the eccentric French genius, but as a literary work woefully deficient in that it has no index and few references to dates." H. E. Krehbiel.

BERNARD, St. abbot of Clairvaux.

Morison, James Cotter. Life and times of St. Bernard, abbot of Clairvaux. 1889.....92 B456m

Bernard exercised great influence on the intellectual and spiritual life of his time and was one of the controlling forces of ecclesiastical politics of Europe. His was the strongest influence in prevailing upon France and England to recognize Innocent II as pope in opposition to the rival claimant, and his preaching is largely responsible for the second crusade.

"A book which was praised by Mark Pattison, Matthew Arnold, and Cardinal Manning. It shows great historical knowledge and a keen interest in the mediæval church." Dictionary of national biography.

BERNARD, Claude.

Foster, Sir Michael. Claude Bernard. 1899. (Masters of medicine.).....92 B4562f

"No one, perhaps, is better fitted to give an account of the French master of modern physiology than Sir Michael Foster, himself the representative physiologist of England, and the founder of the Cambridge school. But Sir Michael has hardly done justice to himself or his subject...The early chapters are hastily and rather carelessly written ...There is a good portrait of Claude Bernard...and a sufficient index." Literature, 1899.

BERNHARDT, Sarah.

Huret, Jules. Sarah Bernhardt; tr. by G. A. Raper. 1899..92 B457h

Chiefly an accumulation of dates, facts and events purporting to have been taken from the actress's own lips.

"The best things in this book are the illustrations and two pages and a half of the preface by M. Rostand." Spectator, 1899.

BERRY, Marie Caroline de Bourbon, duchesse de.

Imbert de Saint-Amand, Arthur Léon, baron. Duchess of Berry and the court of Charles X. 1894.....92 B459s

Second volume of the series. Presents a picture of the intrigues of the French court and the causes which finally led to the revolution of 1830.

Imbert de Saint-Amand, Arthur Léon, baron. Duchess of Berry and the court of Louis XVIII. 1892.....92 B459sa

The duchess of Berry (1798–1870) was the wife of Charles Ferdinand, duke of Berry and mother to the comte de Chambord. This, the first of a series of three volumes on the duchess of Berry, covers her girlhood and brief married life.

Imbert de Saint-Amand, Arthur Léon, baron. Duchess of Berry and the revolution of 1830. 1893.....92 B459sai

Third and final volume on the duchess of Berry. Describes abdication and flight of Charles X and accession of Louis Philippe.

BERRY, Mary.

Extracts of her journals and correspondence, from 1783 to 1852. 3v. 1865.....92 B459l

Biographical sketch of Miss Berry, v.1, p.13–41.

For over 70 years Mary Berry and her sister Agnes were constantly in society both at home and abroad and, having peculiar social talents and literary tastes and pursuits, they knew well the most distinguished people of that long period. Horace Walpole was an intimate friend and Miss Berry's first literary task was editing his works.

BERZELIUS, Johan Jakob, baron, & Schönbein, C. F.

Letters, 1836–1847; ed. by G. W. A. Kahlbaum, tr. by F. V. Darbishire and N. V. Sidgwick. 1900.....92 B465

Berzelius (1779–1847) enriched and developed chemistry to an extent not exceeded by any other man. Perhaps his greatest contributions to chemistry were his development of the atomic theory, his electrochemical theory, and his dualistic system. Schönbein (1799–1868) is chiefly known as the discoverer of ozone and gun-cotton. The letters are chiefly devoted to ozone, gun-cotton and theoretical subjects.

BESANT, Sir Walter.

Autobiography. 1902.....92 B466

Dobson, Austin. Thomas Bewick and his pupils. 1884...92 B4692d

Appeared, in an abridged form, in the "Century magazine," v.24, 1882.

"Besides being an engraver, he was, in his own way, an artist of remarkable capacity as a faithful interpreter of animal life, and a genuine humourist of a sub-Hogarthian type...As an engraver Bewick has been justly styled the restorer of wood engraving in England. It is to the impulse which it received from his individual genius that its revival as an art must be ascribed." Dictionary of national biography.

BÈZE, Théodore de.

Baird, Henry Martyn. Theodore Beza, counsellor of the French reformation, 1519–1605. 1899.....92 B469b

Bibliography, p.17–21.

"Of the heroes of the Reformation Theodore Beza is by no means the least attractive. His course of activity was long and brilliant. He presided over the Reformed Church in the French-speaking countries through a protracted series of years, its recognized counsellor and leader in times of peril both to Church and to State. The friend of Calvin, he was also the friend and adviser of Henry IV until within five years of that monarch's end." Preface.

BIDDLE, Charles.

Autobiography, 1745–1821. 1883.....r92 B475

Born in Philadelphia in 1745, he followed the sea in early life, later he was vice-president of the Supreme executive council of Pennsylvania and held other offices. He was a friend of Franklin and Burr, and the book contains hitherto unpublished letters from Burr and others. He was the father of Nicholas Biddle, the financier, of Richard Biddle of Pittsburgh, and of James Biddle, the distinguished naval officer.

BIENVILLE, Jean Baptiste Lemoine, sieur de.

King, Grace. Jean Baptiste le Moyne, sieur de Bienville, [in English]. 1893. (Makers of America.).....92 B476k

"Among the makers of America, Bienville was by no means the least. He was one of the party who first discovered the mouth of the Mississippi from the south in 1699, 17 years after La Salle had reached that point from the north...19 years after he first saw the Mississippi, Bienville founded New Orleans...Found faithful in many trusts and equal to every emergency, he rose step by step to the Governorship of Louisiana, and continued in public service there for 25 years before returning to France." Nation, 1893.

BIRNEY, James Gillespie.

Birney, William. James G. Birney and his times; the genesis of the Republican party, with some account of abolition movements in the South before 1828. 1890..92 B491b

"Anti-slavery books before 1831," p.382–388.

Although Birney (1792–1857) was born in Kentucky and lived half his life in the South, he was always in favor of the emancipation of the slaves, and for years devoted himself entirely to that work. He was the candidate of the "Liberty" party for president in 1840 and 1844.

BISMARCK-SCHÖNHAUSEN, Otto Eduard Leopold, fürst von.

Bismarck, the man & the statesman; reflections and reminiscences written after his retirement from office. 2v. 1899. .....92 B497bi

Valuable for sidelight, particularly to students of political history, who care little for the lighter matters of personality and anecdote.

Love letters of Bismarck; letters to his fiancée and wife, 1846–1889. 1901.....92 B497lv

"Reveals Bismarck in an entirely new light. The self-portraiture shows a forcible tenderness that will surprise such as associate only shrewd insight and bull-dog tenacity with the statesman...This volume is a part of history." Saturday review, 1901.

Table-talk. 1895.....92 B497

Based on Herr von Poschinger's five volumes of Bismarck's table-talk, compiled from a great variety of sources, private communications, etc., and covering his life from boyhood to his retirement in 1890.

Andler, Charles. Le prince de Bismarck. 1899.....92 B497a

"Sources," p.395–400.

General sketch of Bismarck, his character and policy.

"Author knows the history of the period, is familiar with German life, and evidently has read all the voluminous Bismarck literature that is worth reading. He writes with creditable control of his national bias." Nation, 1899.

Busch, Moritz. Bismarck; some secret pages of his history. 2v. 1898.....92 B497bus

The author entered the German foreign office in 1870 and from that time was a special follower and great admirer of Bismarck. After the latter's retirement, Dr Busch was still his frequent and intimate guest. The foundation of this book is a diary covering 25 years of official and private intercourse with the great chancellor. Its publication was authorized by Bismarck. It is a most complete and frank record of a great man's career written by a devoted adherent.

Busch, Moritz. Bismarck und sein werk; beiträge zur inneren geschichte der letzen jahre bis 1896, nach tagebuchsblättern. 1898.....92 B497bu

Small collection of extracts from Busch's diary and from public and private papers to which Bismarck gave him access.

Busch, Moritz. Our chancellor. 2v. in 1. 1884.....92 B497b

Not in any sense a biography of Bismarck, but a series of essays on his character and statesmanship, beginning with "the chancellor's profession of faith and moral code of statesmanship" and going on to discuss separate aspects of his public work, especially his relations with Austria, Russia and France. Comes down to 1883.

Görlach, Wilhelm. Fürst Bismarck; eine lebensbeschreibung. 1885.....92 B497g

Short sketch for younger readers showing the influence he exerted on the formation of the Germany of to-day.

Headlam, James Wycliffe. Bismarck and the foundation of the German empire. 1899. (Heroes of the nations.).....92 B497he Popular general view of his life and character.

"The novelty of Mr. Headlam's work lies in his treatment of the career of Bismarck in his later labors as chancellor of the German Empire." Dial, 1900.

Hoche, Jules. The real Bismarck. 1898.....92 B497h

Also published with the title "Bismarck at home."

The real Bismarck, according to M. Hoche, is first of all a humorist, which explains his apparent inconsistencies and exaggerations, also the "chameleon-like" charm of his personality. The book is largely a compilation of anecdotes from newspapers and the older Bismarck literature.

BISMARCK-SCHÖNHAUSEN, Otto Eduard Leopold, fürst von—continued.

Jacks, William. Life of Prince Bismarck. 1899.....92 B497j
Popular, somewhat superficial and very enthusiastic biography.

Jahnke, Hermann. Fürst Bismarck; sein leben und wirken. [1899.] 92 B497ja Comes down to his retirement in 1890. Many portraits and other illustrations.

Klaczko, Julian. Two chancellors; Gortchakof and Bismarck. 1876.....92 G689k
Reviews the diplomatic history of Europe, 1855–71, and sketches the careers of Gortchakof and Bismarck then (1873) chancellors respectively of Russia and the German empire and the most friendly allies.

Kohl, Horst. Fürst Bismarck; regesten zu einer wissenschaftlichen biographie des ersten deutschen reichskanzlers. 2v. 1891–92.....qr92 B497k
v.1. 1815–1871.
v.2. 1871–1890.
Valuable storehouse of the necessary data for a biography, arranged by years.

Lord, John. Two German giants: Frederic the Great and Bismarck, with a character sketch of Bismarck by Bayard Taylor, and Bismarck's great speech on the enlargement of the German army in 1888. 1894.....92 F895l Short character sketches. Also included in his "Beacon lights of history."

Lowe, Charles. Prince Bismarck. 1896.....92 B497lo
"Since the appearance of my large two-volume work, 'Prince Bismarck: An Historical Biography,' ten years ago, much fresh material on my subject has come to light; and the substance of this up-to-date material—sometimes corrective, sometimes supplementary—I have incorporated in the present sketch." Preface.

Lowe, Charles. Prince Bismarck; a historical biography. 2v. 1895.....92 B497l
"Mr. Lowe has studied the sources of information at present available with great care; has arranged and presented the results of his investigation with no little art and skill; and has written not merely a very readable book, but a very creditable history of Bismarck and his times." Nation, 1886.

Poschinger, Heinrich von, comp. Conversations with Prince Bismarck; English edition ed. by Sidney Whitman. 1900.....92 B497p
"Herr von Poschinger's official position afforded him unique opportunities for collecting authentic details and many entertaining anecdotes about the Iron Chancellor. Mr. Whitman has made selections for English purposes from five bulky volumes." Saturday review, 1900.

Smith, Munroe. Bismarck and German unity; a historical outline. 1898.....92 B497s
"Bismarck literature," p.95–99.
Covers the entire ground of Bismarck's career and the political influences which surrounded him. As a companion volume to Dr Busch's larger work, it will be found not only useful, but very entertaining, and one who has not the time for the larger work will find the present volume sufficient to give a clear and rational view of the career of the great statesman. Originally published in the New York "Evening post" immediately after Bismarck's death.

Stearns, Frank Preston. Life of Prince Otto von Bismarck. 1899.....92 B497st
Study of his life and character and of his place in history.

BLACKIE, John Stuart.

Stoddart, Anna M. John Stuart Blackie; a biography. 2v. 1895. .....92 B515s
The author is a warm admirer of the famous Scotchman whom she had special facilities for knowing in all moods and under all circumstances; but this biography is an impartial one, doing full justice to him and at the same time not concealing his limitations and inconsistencies.

BLACKWOOD, William.

Oliphant, Mrs Margaret Oliphant (Wilson). Annals of a publishing house; William Blackwood and his sons, their magazine and friends. 3v. 1897–98.....92 B5170

v.1 and 2, which are all that Mrs Oliphant lived to complete, bring the history of the Blackwood firm down to 1861 and are valuable for the sidelights they throw on the literary history of the period. Of them the London "Athenæum" says: "They form a most interesting record of the doings of a famous publishing house, which has always stood high, not only for the many notable books it has produced, but for the integrity and liberality which have distinguished its dealings with author and public." v.3, "John Blackwood," is by his daughter, Mrs Porter.

BLAINE, James Gillespie.

Hamilton, Gail, (pseud. of Mary Abigail Dodge). Biography of James G. Blaine. 1895.....92 B522h

"This is not in reality a biography at all; it is the history of a family, written by a kinswoman who was practically an inmate of the household...Mr. Blaine has often been compared with Henry Clay, but this biography shows how small was the likeness between them. Both were energetic, magnetic leaders, speakers of the House, secretaries of state, repeatedly disappointed candidates for the presidency. But Clay was a great figure, and filled a great place; while of Blaine the best-intentioned biographer makes out a man genial, kindly, eager, shrewd, renowned, but not extraordinary." A. B. Hart, in American historical review, 1897.

BLAKE, Admiral Robert.

Dixon, William Hepworth. Robert Blake, admiral and general at sea; based on family and state papers. 1852..92 B527d

Blake was among the first to join the parliamentary forces in 1642 and after a notable career on shore was appointed one of the commanders of the fleet, and it was at sea that his greatest reputation was gained. "More even than by his glory and by his success the memory of Blake is dear to the English people by the traditions of his chivalrous character and of his unselfish patriotism." Dictionary of national biography.

Hannay, David. Admiral Blake. 1886. (English worthies.) 92 B527h

"He does not unduly glorify his hero. The sea fights are made intelligible to the non-professional reader and there is also an interesting chapter on the navy of the commonwealth." English historical review, 1888.

BLAKE, William.

Garnett, Richard. William Blake, painter and poet. 1895. (Portfolio monographs.).....qr92 B528g

William Blake (1757–1827) must always be one of the most interesting figures in art. His position is exceptional, for his fame as a poet has fully rivaled his fame as a painter. The present volume considers both his literary and artistic work.

Swinburne, Algernon Charles. William Blake, with illustrations from Blake's designs in facsimile. 1868.....r92 B528s

The same. 1906.....92 B528s

Does not contain illustrations.

"Mr. Swinburne shows himself master of his purpose, which is to set forth the ideas of Blake in religion, morality and design." Athenæum, 1868.

BLANCHARD, Claude.

Journal, 1780–1783; tr. by William Duane and ed. by Thomas Balch. 1876.....r92 B532

Blanchard was sent to America in 1780 as commissary-in-chief of the French forces under Gen. Rochambeau. While his Journal gives but few military details it contains much that is interesting concerning the organization and discipline of the French forces, and some glimpses of American society.

BLESSINGTON, Margaret (Power) Gardiner, countess of.

Molloy, Joseph Fitzgerald. Most gorgeous Lady Blessington. 2v. 1896.....92 B548m

Lady Blessington was a noted English beauty and wit, a writer and a leader of fashion.

"A curious, sad and interesting life, a picture of literary society...and a collection of anecdotes about its members...Lord Byron especially is a wonderful portrait in a few pages...Poor Lady Blessington is throughout more natural than any of her courtiers; she remains the beautiful, charming, sensitive, clever, good-natured, unaffected and unlucky Margaret Power to the end." Nation, 1896.

BLISS, Philip Paul.

Whittle, D. W. Memoirs of Philip P. Bliss. 1877.....92 B553w

Philip Paul Bliss (1838–76) was a well-known evangelist, and a popular composer and singer of sacred songs.

BLOOMFIELD, Georgiana (Liddell), baroness.

Reminiscences of court and diplomatic life. 2v. 1883....92 B562

Baroness Bloomfield before her marriage was maid of honor to Queen Victoria, and for nearly 30 years after that lived at St. Petersburg, Berlin and Vienna, when Lord Bloomfield was ambassador at those courts. During those years she also traveled extensively on the continent and met most of the great social and political personages of the time.

BLUEBEARD. See RETZ, Gilles de Laval, baron de.

BOCCACCIO, Giovanni.

Symonds, John Addington. Giovanni Boccaccio as man and author. 1895.....92 B576s

"The literature of modern as distinguished from mediæval Europe began with three Italian poets—Dante, Petrarch and Boccaccio [1313–75]... We have to estimate Boccaccio, not only as the author of the 'Decameron,' not only as the poet who controlled the course of Italian literature in its main currents for three hundred years, but also as the founder of Greek studies and Petrarch's ablest lieutenant in the pioneering work of the Revival." Symonds's Boccaccio.

BONAPARTE, Mme Elizabeth (Patterson).

BOOTH, Edwin.

Copeland, Charles Townsend. Edwin Booth. 1901. (Beacon biographies of eminent Americans.).....92 B632c

Bibliography, p.157–159.

"Compact and comprehensive...A most intelligent and sympathetic appreciation of the actor and the man in which cordial recognition of his genius and his virtues is mingled with judicious criticism." Nation, 1902.

Grossmann, Mrs Edwina (Booth). Edwin Booth; recollections by his daughter and letters to her and to his friends. 1894.....92 B632g

These recollections of the great actor by his only child are most interesting, bringing out the side of Mr Booth which was seen only by his family and friends.

Winter, William. Life and art of Edwin Booth. 1893.....92 B632

Appreciative biography, somewhat lacking in details but valuable for its studies of the actor's chief impersonations; many interesting portraits.

BOOTHBY, Charles.

A prisoner of France; the memoirs, diary and correspondence of Charles Boothby, during his last campaign, [1809–1810]. 1898.....92 B633

Charles Boothby (1786–1846), captain in the Royal British engineers, while recovering from a serious wound received during the campaign in the Peninsula in 1809, fell into the hands of the French and was detained as prisoner of war. His memoirs tell the story of his captivity and of the treatment accorded him by a courteous enemy.

Under England's flag, 1804–1809; memoirs, diary and correspondence; comp. by M. S. B. & C. E. B. 1900.....92 B633u

"Sincere and straightforward description of campaigning in the two Sicilies and the Peninsula, with passages concerning Sir John Moore's expedition to Sweden...'A Prisoner of France'...[describes] the later acts of Capt. Boothby in the Peninsula war." Nation, 1901.

Thompson, Edward Healy. Life of S. Charles Borromeo. 92 B6391t

Italian cardinal and archbishop of Milan in the 16th century. He accomplished great reforms in the church in his large diocese, taking special interest in the education of persons intended for holy orders. This account was first published in 1858.

BORROW, George.

Knapp, William Ireland. Life, writings and correspondence of George Borrow, (1803–1881); based on official and other authentic sources. 2v. 1899.....92 B639k

Chronological bibliography of the writings of George Borrow, v.2, p.343–375.

The author of "The Bible in Spain" and "Lavengro" has for the first time a full and authentic biography. After his death in 1881 Professor Knapp, late of Yale, made a collection of his printed books, the magazines that contained his early fugitive pieces, and the articles that discussed him and his works. Eventually he also secured his papers, the correspondence of half a century and more, his manuscripts, and the scattered remains of his library. From this mass of authentic records it now became possible for the first time, to give a full and reliable account of his origin, his early struggles and employments, his later triumphs, his withdrawal from the "trumpery society of London," and also to explain his disinclination to furnish correct data for his personal history.

BOSWELL, James.

Leask, William Keith. James Boswell. 1896. (Famous Scots series.).....92 B645l

Short but satisfactory account of Johnson's famous biographer.

BOWLES, Samuel.

Merriam, George Spring. Life and times of Samuel Bowles. 2v. 1885.....92 B662m

Mr Bowles (1826–78) was editor of the "Springfield republican."

"The first interest of the general public in the career of Samuel Bowles arises from the fact that he was an eminent journalist...his editorial work covered the period from the annexation of Texas to the close of reconstruction under President Hayes...In the struggle which ended in the overthrow of slavery, he was a spectator and actor." Preface.

BOWNE, Mrs Eliza (Southgate).

A girl's life eighty years ago; selections from [her] letters. 1888. .....92 B663

Biography, by Clarence Cook, p.3–6.

The same. 1903.....j92 B663

These letters date from 1797 to 1809, forming a record of the life of an American beauty and girl of fashion during that period. They are of interest for their contemporaneous records, their literary merit and the portrait they present of a lovable girl with a striking and individual character.

BOWYER, William.

Nichols, John. Biographical and literary anecdotes of William Bowyer and his friends. 1782.....qr92 B664n

Bowyer (1699–1777) was an English printer; Nichols was his apprentice and later, his partner. These reminiscences, covering Bowyer's long career as a printer, contain much information regarding the publications which came from his press, anecdotes of his friends, and other literary material.

BOYCE, Mrs Jane (Harker).

Ikirt, Mary Holmes. In memoriam Mrs Jane Harker Boyce. [1898?].....r92 B666i

BOYD, Andrew Kennedy Hutchinson.

Last years of St. Andrews, 1890 to 1895. 1896.....92 B667l

St. Andrews and elsewhere. 1894.....92 B667s

Continuation of Dr Boyd's reminiscences, devoted to "Men and matters ecclesiastical" and "One's real life in the latter years."

Twenty-five years of St. Andrews, 1865 to 1890. 2v. 1892..92 B667

Dr Boyd, author of the well-known "Recreations of a country parson," was minister in the famous old Scottish university town, coming into personal contact with the many distinguished people who every year find their way to that interesting place.

BRACKENRIDGE, Henry Marie.

Recollections of persons and places in the west. 1868....r92 B677

With newspaper clippings and annotations by Judge Veech.

Mr Brackenridge was born in Pittsburgh, and his book includes recollections of the early days of that city as well as of Baltimore, St. Louis and the middle west in the first quarter of the 19th century.

BRADFORD, Andrew.

Jones, Horatio Gates. Andrew Bradford; an address delivered at the meeting of the Historical society of Pennsylvania, Feb. 9th, 1869. 1869.....qr92 B681j

Bradford was the only printer in Pennsylvania from 1712 to 1723. In 1719 he began the publication of the first newspaper printed in the middle states, the "American weekly mercury." It was at his printing office that Benjamin Franklin found employment on arriving in Philadelphia.

BRADSTREET, Mrs Anne (Dudley).

Campbell, Mrs Helen. Anne Bradstreet and her time. 1891.....92 B685c

Mrs Bradstreet (1612–72), wife of one of the early colonial governors of Massachusetts, was a poet whose work was much praised by her contemporaries. This volume contains extracts from her poems, and some prose meditations which are more interesting to the modern mind than the poetry.

BRADY, Cyrus Townsend.

Recollections of a missionary in the great West. 1900.....92 B686

Anecdotes of an Episcopal missionary's hard work in five Western states and territories.

BRAHE, Tycho.

Dreyer, John Louis Emil. Tycho Brahe; a picture of scientific life and work in the 16th century. 1890.....92 B688d

Aims not only to "narrate the various incidents in the life of the great astronomer, in some detail, but also to describe his relations with contemporary men of science, and review his scientific labours in their connection with those of previous astronomers."

Author is himself an astronomer and director of Armagh observatory since 1882.

BRAHMS, Johannes.

Dietrich, Albert Hermann, & Widmann, J. V. Recollections of Johannes Brahms; tr. by D. E. Hecht. 1899..92 B6882d

"Professor Dietrich...was on most intimate terms with Brahms during the years immediately following the latter's introduction to the public. The letters carry us...from the year 1853 up to 1874; whereas Dr. J. V. Widmann, an eminent Swiss littérateur, is enabled to give us some details of the later years of the musician's life (1886–97)." Translator's preface.

BRAINERD, David.

Memoirs of David Brainerd, missionary to the Indians on the borders of New-York, New-Jersey and Pennsylvania; chiefly taken from his own diary, by Jonathan Edwards; including his journal, now for the first time incorporated with the rest of his diary in a regular chronological series by S. E. Dwight. 1822.....r92 B689

BRECK, Samuel.

Recollections, with passages from his note-books (1771–

1862); ed. by H. E. Scudder. 1877.....92 B722

Samuel Breck (1771–1862) was a merchant in Philadelphia, a member of the Pennsylvania legislature and of Congress.

"Mr. Breck made no pretensions to literary power, but he was a man of catholic tastes and general interests. In this book the reader hears his chat, and will be helped by it to get that contemporaneous position which is so needful if one would see American life and manners from time to time during the first century of the Republic." Preface.

BREITMANN, Hans, pseud. See LELAND, Charles Godfrey.

BRETON, Jules.

Life of an artist; an autobiography; tr. by M. J. Serrano. 1892. .....92 B734

A large part of this autobiography of the great French painter is given to impressions of his childhood; much more to reminiscences of the famous artists with whom he was brought in contact, and criticisms of their work; but the most valuable part of the book consists of extracts from his notebooks, giving his art doctrines and opinions.

BRIGHT, John.

Robertson, William, of Rochdale. Life and times of John Bright. 1889.....92 B749r

Gives an interesting account of the condition of the English people under the corn laws and of Mr Bright's share in bringing about their repeal.

Smith, George Barnett. Life and speeches of John Bright. 2v. 1881.....92 B749s

Very full account of the public career and speeches of the well-known British statesman, whom the author considers "the greatest Liberal orator of the 19th century."

Vince, Charles Anthony. John Bright. 1898. (Victorian era series.).....92 B749v

A study of Mr Bright's political life rather than a general biography. Being himself in active political life in Birmingham, Mr Vince can well estimate the effect of Bright's influence and example in that city.

BRINKERHOFF, Roeliff.

Recollections of a lifetime. 1900.....92 B752

During the eventful years of the last half-century the author was active and prominent in many ways, as educator, lawyer, editor, soldier, statesman and philanthropist. In 1861, when the war broke out, he entered the army, and for five years was an officer in the Quartermaster's department, at the front, and at important stations west and east, and when the war closed he was on duty at Washington. Among his close friends were Salmon P. Chase, James G. Blaine, General Garfield and General R. B. Hayes, all of whom occupy a prominent place in these recollections.

List of books consulted, p.11–14.

"Extends only over the last few years of Broadfoot's career, commencing in 1841, when he was thirty-four years of age, and ending with his death at the battle of Firozshah in 1845...A gallant soldier, who fought hard, endured much, and died bravely." Athenæum, 1889.

BRODIE, Sir Benjamin Collins.

Holmes, Timothy. Sir Benjamin Collins Brodie. 1898. (Masters of medicine.).....92 B763h

Distinguished English surgeon (1783–1862), president of the Royal college of surgeons (1844) and also of the Royal society (1858–61).

BROGLIE, Achille Léonce Victor Charles, duc de.

Personal recollections. 2v. 1887.....r92 B765

"This life of his was so mixed up with public affairs from beginning to end that it is in fact part of the history of France, and from the early years of the century to 1832, the point reached by the Recollections, one could hardly read any book giving a better idea of the course of public events...To many people the most interesting part of the Duc de Broglie's book will be his wonderfully spirited account of the Revolution of 1830 of which he was an eyewitness." Spectator, 1887.

BRONTË, Charlotte, afterward Mrs Nicholls, (pseud. Currer Bell).

Birrell, Augustine. Life of Charlotte Brontë. 1887. (Great writers.).....92 B7712b

"Avoiding the amiable prolixity of Mrs. Gaskell and the sententious dogmatism of Mr. Reid, Mr. Birrell has availed himself of all the material before the public, has brought to light a hitherto unpublished chapter in the career of Patrick Brontë, and has offered upon Charlotte Brontë's novels some critical remarks which are characterized by clearness of perception and sound common sense. The book is small in compass, but it covers the field thoroughly; and for its freshness of observation, admirable perspicacity, and charm of style, it is a contribution to critical biography of no slight importance." Literary world, 1887.

Gaskell, Mrs Elizabeth Cleghorn (Stevenson). Life of Charlotte Brontë. 1895.....92 B7712g

The same, with introduction by C. K. Shorter. 1900.....92 B7712g2

Haworth edition.

"Charlotte Brontë was so far fortunate...that her biography was written by the one woman among her contemporaries who had the most genuine fitness for her task." Clement K. Shorter, in preface.

Harland, Marion, (pseud. of Mrs Mary Virginia (Hawes) Terhune). Charlotte Brontë at home. 1899. (Literary hearthstones.).....92 B7712h

"In compiling her narrative of the domestic life of the eldest of the Brontë sisters, Mrs. Terhune has drawn on Mr. Shorter's work, from which was omitted nothing of material importance concerning the daily life at Haworth parsonage...Dwells minutely on the details of Charlotte Brontë's daily existence."

MacKay, Angus Mason. The Brontës, fact and fiction. 1897. .....92 B771m

Consists of two essays, one written to disprove Dr William Wright's theories concerning the Brontës in Ireland. The other is entitled "Fresh light on Brontë biography," and deals mainly with Charlotte Brontë's experience in Brussels and its effect on her character and writings.

Reid, Sir Thomas Wemyss. Charlotte Brontë. 1877.....92 B7712r

One of the first biographies of Charlotte Brontë to be written after Mrs Gaskell's, it contains some material not available earlier, and deals with circumstances with which Mrs Gaskell could not, writing as she did during the lifetime of Miss Brontë's father.

Shorter, Clement King. Charlotte Brontë and her circle. 1896. .....92 B7712s

" 'This is not a biography, but a bundle of correspondence,' writes Mr. Shorter...The book...owes its value mainly to the material put at the editor's disposal by the Rev. Arthur Bell Nicholls, husband of Charlotte Brontë...by Miss Ellen Nussey, and by the family of the late Mr. W. S. Williams...In these pages Charlotte, and Emily, and Anne appear to live again—more ordinary mortals, perhaps, than those limned by Mrs. Gaskell; not less interesting, perhaps more lovable." Nation, 1896.

Wright, William, D.D. The Brontës in Ireland; or, Facts stranger than fiction. 1894.....92 B7712w

An account of the family down to the time when Charlotte Brontë's father left Ireland in 1802.

1889. (Famous women.) 92 B771r
List of authorities, p.7–8.
Sister of Charlotte Brontë and author of "Wuthering Heights," etc.
"The story of her short life, and the delineation of her character and writings, are accomplished with admirable skill by her present biographer. The narrative is infinitely pathetic, with few and faint points of brightness to relieve its sombre color. But it adds a new light to our comprehension of the circumstances environing the inmates of Haworth parsonage." Dial, 1883.

BROOKE, Sir James, rajah of Sarawak.

St. John, Sir Spenser. Rajah Brooke; the Englishman as ruler of an Eastern state. 1899. (Builders of greater Britain.) 92 B772s "Short biography of Sir James Brooke, rajah of Sarawak, Borneo, 1842–63. Contains an account of Brooke's attempts to regenerate the Malays, of relations with Chinese and with pirates, illustrating British policy in southeastern Asia." W. Dawson Johnston.

BROOKS, Phillips, bp.

Allen, Alexander Viets Griswold. Life and letters of Phillips Brooks. 2v. 1900 ..... 92 B774a
"Dr. Allen sees the soul behind the man, and enables his reader to share something of his sight. It is this power of vision which gives to this life of Phillips Brooks its peculiar value. And if there was ever a man whose inner life was hard to discern, it was Phillips Brooks; he hid it behind an impenetrable reserve...Nevertheless, Dr. Allen has succeeded in piercing behind this reserve...There is no process of vivisection; no abnormal interest excited in a keen dissection of motives...The impression of Phillips Brooks's real personality steals upon you while you read, as the personality of one of the portraits of Chase or Sargent while you look." Lyman Abbott.

Howe, Mark Antony De Wolfe. Phillips Brooks. 1899. (Beacon biographies of eminent Americans.) 92 B774h
Bibliography, p.116–120.
Good short essay on the distinguished preacher.

BROUGHAM, Henry Peter, baron Brougham and Vaux.

Life and times, written by himself. 3v. 1871–72 ..... 92 B779
Celebrated British statesman, orator, jurist and scientist. He was one of the founders of the "Edinburgh review" in 1802, lord chancellor of England 1830–34.
"Life and Times must...be read with caution, and its statements compared with other authorities; it is chiefly valuable for the letters it contains." Dictionary of national biography.

Holst, Hermann von. John Brown. 1888.....92 B791h

"Of interest as a study of John Brown's career by a foreign historian who was making a profound study of the influence of slavery on American politics." Larned's Literature of American history.

Sanborn, Franklin Benjamin. Life and letters of John Brown. 1891.....92 B791s

The same. 1891.....r92 B791s

"The most elaborate life of John Brown, and the fullest collection of his letters and papers...The editor, himself an actor in some of the earlier scenes, is a hero-worshipper, and goes to some lengths in attempting to explain and justify the Pottawatomie massacre." Larned's Literature of American history.

BROWN, John Gemmill.

Fiftieth anniversary of his membership in the presbytery of Monongahela, Seventh United Presbyterian church, Pittsburg, Dec. 22, 1896. [Anonymous.] 1896.....r92 B791f

Dr Brown, a native of Pittsburgh, was for 25 years pastor of the Third United Presbyterian church, founder of the Western Pennsylvania institution for the instruction of the deaf and dumb, and for several years its superintendent.

BROWN, Oliver Madox.

Ingram, John H. Oliver Madox Brown, 1855–1874. 1883..92 B793i

Oliver Madox Brown was the son of Ford Madox Brown, the eminent artist, but though he painted several notable pictures his gifts were rather in the direction of letters.

"Leaving Chatterton out of the question, it would be difficult to recall any other English man of letters who, dying at so early an age (he was not yet twenty), left behind him such remarkable, if fragmentary work." Athenæum, 1883.

BROWN, Thomas Edward.

Letters; ed. with introductory memoir by S. T. Irwin. 2v. 1900. .....92 B797

"Letters, apart from their original private use, may be of value...as revealing in obscure writers a personality worth knowing, and otherwise missed by the public. Mr. Brown's letters belong to this... class, for he had no renown except in a small way as a minor poet... He was not fond of the serious vein—in these letters. He preferred dash and sparkle, and talk about Flaubert, or Scott, or his friend Hall Caine, or any of a thousand literary topics, or the hills of Man and its peasants, or...the affairs of his friends." Nation, 1900.

BROWNING, Mrs Elizabeth (Barrett).

Letters; ed. with biographical additions by F. G. Kenyon. 2v. 1897.....92 B818

"Mr. Kenyon says: 'It is essentially her character, not her genius, that is presented to the reader in these letters.' But it is her intellectual character equally with her moral, and this, if not essential to her genius, is to that allied. It is her character as a poet; it shows her relation to her work." Nation, 1898.

BROWNING, Robert, & Mrs Elizabeth (Barrett).

Letters, 1845–1846. 2v. 1899.....92 B819

These are all the letters that ever passed between Mr and Mrs Browning, and date from some time before their first meeting down to their departure together for the continent a week after their marriage. Before Mr Browning's death he destroyed all his correspondence except these letters, which he left to his son to do with as he liked.

Bibliography, apx. p.1–22.

The larger part of the volume is criticism of Browning's work.

Waugh, Arthur. Robert Browning. 1900. (Westminster biographies.).....92 B819w

Bibliography, p.153–155.

A brief biography aiming to give a faithful picture of the personal character and social surroundings of Browning; also to indicate his place in the literary movement of his times. "The primary object is," says the author, "to lead the reader to the poems themselves."

BRUCE, James.

Head, Sir Francis Bond. Life of Bruce, the African traveller. 1830.....r92 B825h

James Bruce (1730–94) was one of the earliest African explorers, investigating successively Syria, the Nile valley and Abyssinia, 1768–73.

"He will always remain the poet and his work the epic of African travel." Dictionary of national biography.

BRUMMELL, George Bryan, called beau.

Barbey d'Aurevilly, Jules. Of dandyism and of George Brummell. 1897.....92 B834b

George, generally known as "Beau" Brummell was for years the absolute ruler of fashion in London, the prince of Wales (later George IV) being his subject in this domain.

"It is his [d'Aurevilly's] peculiar glory to have written the epic of Dandyism and of Brummel. This masterpiece is more intimately his own than the best of his romances, the fiercest of his criticisms. For not only in his life, but in his art dandyism was a constant obsession ...and this immortal treatise is the best commentary on his works as on his career." Whibley's Pageantry of life.

BRUNO, Giordano.

Louis, Gustav. Giordano Bruno; seine weltanschauung und lebensauffassung. 1900.....92 B836l

"Litteraturnachweis," p.137–143.

Eminent Italian philosopher, 1548–1600. His teachings were opposed to the current philosophic tenets and religious dogmas. From his writtings a mass of testimony was collected sufficient to convict him of heresy, and he was burned at the stake by order of the Roman Inquisition.

"Dr. Louis' pamphlet was timed for the tercentenary of that event. It is extremely well written and well arranged, giving in a moderate compass all the essential facts of Bruno's life and thought, as well as a brief review of his influence on posterity and of the bibliography connected with his name." Saturday review, 1900.

Slattery, Charles Lewis. Felix Reville Brunot, 1820-1898, a civilian in the war for the Union, president of the first Board of Indian commissioners. 1901.....92 B8362s

"He [Mr Brunot] was a forerunner of Mr. Carnegie in Pittsburgh, a principal founder and benefactor of the Mercantile Library...During the Civil War he was an ardent and active patriot. His interest in the sick and wounded soldiers took him to the front, where he was arrested as an army surgeon and taken to Libby Prison...Mr. Brunot's service on the Board of Indian Commissioners was highly honorable, and Dean Slattery does not exaggerate his influence on Indian affairs." Nation, 1901.

Godwin, Parke. Biography of William Cullen Bryant. 2v. 1883.....92 B842g

This exhaustive biography by Mr Bryant's son-in-law must always be interesting and valuable to those who want all possible information about the poet.

BUCHANAN, George, 1506–82.

Wallace, Robert, 1831–99. George Buchanan; completed by J. C. Smith. 1899. (Famous Scots series.).....92 B8491w

Scottish historian, scholar and Latin poet, at one time classical tutor to Mary, queen of Scots, and preceptor to her son James. He was an adherent of the regent Murray in the civil war.

"The estimate of Buchanan's character and genius is, on the whole, quite admirable." Spectator, 1900.

BUCHANAN, James.

Curtis, George Ticknor. Life of James Buchanan, 15th president of the United States. 2v. 1883.....92 B849c

Very laudatory account of the president who, to Mr Curtis's thinking, has been almost universally misjudged.

BUCKLE, Henry Thomas.

Huth, Alfred Henry. Life and writings of Henry Thomas Buckle. 1880.....92 B856h

Special bibliography, p.483–496.

Mr Huth's parents were intimate friends of the author of the famous "History of civilization in England," and he himself as a boy of eleven accompanied Buckle on his last journey to the East.

Marshal Bugeaud was one of Napoleon's veterans, who during a great career served France both in peace and war. His most brilliant service was in Africa, where he saved Algeria for France at a serious crisis. This biography has been compiled from family documents, and is well translated.

BULL, Ole.

Bull, Mrs Sara Chapman (Thorpe). Ole Bull; a memoir. 1883.....r92 B874b

Contains also Ole Bull's "Violin notes" and A. B. Crosby's "Anatomy of the violinist."

A Norwegian violinist (1810–80) of great technical skill. He had also much knowledge of the construction of the violin, and his "Violin notes" contains interesting information about its history and manufacture, and the famous Italian violin makers. It also includes an excellent analysis of Paganini's playing. Ole Bull made frequent concert tours in the United States and spent much of the last part of his life here.

BULLER, Sir Redvers Henry.

Jerrold, Walter. Sir Redvers H. Buller; the story of his life and campaigns. 1900.....92 B875j BUNSEN, Christian Karl Josias, freiherr von.

Bunsen, Frances (Waddington), freiherrin von, comp. Memoir of Baron Bunsen. 2v. 1868.....92 B8842b

Distinguished German scholar and diplomatist, author of various philosophical and religious works.

"Baroness Bunsen gives to the world two large volumes which more than justify her husband's confidence in her ability to produce a record of his achievements in literature and politics, of his friendships with good and learned men, and of the many joys of his domestic life. The only exception that can be made to her work is, that it is on too large a scale." Athenæum, 1868.

BUNSEN, Frances (Waddington), freiherrin von.

Hare, Augustus John Cuthbert. Life and letters of Frances, baroness Bunsen. 2v. in 1.....92 B884h

"As author of the life of her husband [Memoir of Baron Bunsen] her literary ability has been fully acknowledged, but it was only among her private friends that her extraordinary talent and her wonderful knowledge of the various public events of the time could be appreciated." Dictionary of national biography.

BURD, Edward.

Selections from his letters, 1763–1828; ed. by L. B. Walker. 1899. (Burd papers.) r92 B893

Edward Burd (1751–1833) served as major during the Revolution and was captured by the British in the battle of Long Island. He was prothonotary of the Supreme court of Pennsylvania from 1778 to 1805. The letters are of great interest in connection with Pennsylvania local history.

BURGES, Sir James Bland.

Selections from his letters and correspondence, with notices of his life; ed. by James Hutton. 1885 ..... r92 B897

"Burges was not so influential a statesman nor was he so great a poet as he thought himself, but he was associated with many famous men durthe last quarter of the 18th century and afterwards, and the mass of correspondence which he left behind him contained quite enough material for an interesting volume." Athenæum, 1885.

BURKE, Edmund.

Correspondence, 1744–1797; ed. by Earl Fitzwilliam and Sir Richard Bourke. 4v. 1844 ..... r92 B916

A large, well-arranged collection of letters. One of the editors was distantly related to the family of Edmund Burke and has supplied the notes to the letters from his personal information.

Morley, John. Burke. [1879.] (English men of letters.). 92 B916m

BURLEIGH, William Cecil, baron.

Hume, Martin Andrew Sharp. The great Lord Burghley; a study in Elizabethan statecraft. 1898 ..... 92 B921h

"As one of the painstaking editors of the Record Office calendars of Spanish State Papers Major Hume was familiar with much of the material requisite for this life. He also had access to other manuscripts bearing on the Elizabethan period in the Calendars of the Hatfield Papers. The book throws useful light on some points of Elizabethan policy, and brings out clearly, and with many fresh and welcome illustrations, the chief political movements of the times and Cecil's share in guiding and controlling them." Literature, 1898.

Recollections of her own childhood by the author of "Little Lord Fauntleroy," and "That lass o' Lowrie's."

BURNEY, Charles.

Arblay, Mme Frances (Burney) d'. Memoirs of Dr Burney. 1833 ..... r92 B936a

Charles Burney (1726–1814), Fanny's father, is distinguished as the author of a valuable history of music.

"The book is disfigured by an elaborate affectation of style and is singularly vague in dates; but it contains much interesting matter and many fragments of letters and diaries, full of vivacious description." Dictionary of national biography.

BURNS, Robert, & Dunlop, Mrs F. A. (Wallace).

Correspondence, with elucidations by William Wallace. 2v. 1898 ..... 92 B939

These volumes contain 96 letters that passed between Burns and Mrs Dunlop in the course of their 10 years' friendship, during the last decade of the life of Burns.

BURROUGH, Edward.

Memoir of the life and religious labors of Edward Burrough, minister of the gospel of the Society of Friends. [Anonymous.] 1890 ..... 92 B946

An English minister of the Society of Friends, 1634–62. His numerous works were formerly held in high esteem among the Quakers.

BURTON, Isabel (Arundell), lady.

Romance of Isabel, lady Burton; the story of her life told in part by herself and in part by W. H. Wilkins. 1898...92 B952

Lady Burton was the wife of Sir Richard Burton, the famous orientalist and explorer.

BURTON, Sir Richard Francis.

Burton, Isabel (Arundell), lady. Life of Captain Sir Richard F. Burton. 1898 ..... 92 B953b

Burton was a traveler, orientalist, and writer of bold and original personality, whose life was full of picturesque incident. One of his most interesting adventures was a pilgrimage in disguise to Mecca, described by him in his "Personal narrative of a pilgrimage to Al-Madinah and Meccah."

"Fault of Lady Burton's presentment is that it is adulatory to the point of absurdity...Full of characteristic anecdotes and opinions about every variety of subject, political, social, religious, spiritualistic, linguistic, and what not...Had they been well written they would have formed one of the most remarkable biographies of the day." Athenæum, 1893.

Stisted, Georgiana M. True life of Sir Richard F. Burton. 1897. ..... 92 B953s

Author was a niece of Burton and wrote this to supply a popular biography, but she has little literary skill and she makes an unnecessary attack on Lady Burton.

BUSHNELL, Horace.

Munger, Theodore Thornton. Horace Bushnell, preacher and theologian. 1899.....92 B964m

"Published writings," p.11–14.

"He brings to Dr. Bushnell a reverent admiration, but his attitude toward his thought is never that of the advocate or apologist. It is calmly and kindly judicious...There is no attempt to represent Bushnell as a theological finality. His was the work of liberation, breaking up the 'cake of custom' which had thickened and hardened over the New England orthodox mind."

BUSS, Frances Mary.

v.3. Jan. 1814–Nov. 1816.
v.4. Nov. 1816–Mar. 1820.
v.5. Apr. 1820–Oct. 1821.
v.6. Jan. 1822–Apr. 1824.

"Sources of the text," v.6, p.459–492.

v.6 contains an index to the set.

Contains much new biographical detail and many letters inaccessible to previous biographers and editors.

"Byron's letters appeal on three special grounds to all lovers of English literature. They offer the most suggestive commentary on his poetry; they give the truest portrait of the man; they possess, at their best, in their ease, freshness and racy vigour, a very high literary value." Preface.

Letters, 1804–1813; ed. by W. E. Henley. 1897.....92 B998

v.1 of an edition of Byron's works which was to have been completed in 12 volumes, but was left unfinished at the time of the editor's death in 1903.

"These Letters Mr. Henley has annotated as never, surely, were letters annotated before. The Notes provide simply a complete series of little biographies of everyone mentioned in the letters; miniature biographies with such vital selection, such concise completion without dryasdustness, such interest in little, as no other writer but Mr. Henley could compass." Academy, 1896.

CABOT, John.

Beazley, Charles Raymond. John and Sebastian Cabot; the discovery of North America. 1898. (Builders of greater Britain.).....92 C1142b

"Cabot literature," p.265–305.

"The most useful, and the most readable, volume upon the Cabots, for the purposes of the general reader. Like every other book devoted to the explorers, it is largely filled up with the original documents, which Mr. Beazley interprets with much care, conservatism and common sense." Larned's Literature of American history.

Harrisse, Henry. John Cabot, the discoverer of North America, and Sebastian his son, 1496–1557. 1896....r92 C1142h

"An expansion, in English, of the narrative and argumentative portions of Harrisse's Jean et Sébastien Cabot...The French volume contains the most correct text Mr. Harrisse could secure of every important document which throws light upon the Cabots, and is the recognized source for reference to these texts. The English volume is a 'laboratory manual, in which the student finds revealed each step of the processes through which the material of history has been forced, in order that it might be made to render up the truth which was contained within it.' The same. 1831.....r92 C114b

With annotations by Isaac Craig.

"One of the earliest American works of serious historical scholarship, and important in the history of historical study and writing in America. A powerful argument advocating the achievements of the son as more important than those of the father; the source from which nearly every article upon Cabot, during the succeeding forty years derived both its inspiration and facts. Many of these facts, and most of the conclusions based upon them, have been overthrown by the discovery of documents unknown to Mr. Biddle." Larned's Literature of American history.

Fowler, William Warde. Julius Cæsar and the foundation of the Roman imperial system. 1892. (Heroes of the nations.) 92 C119f Embodies results of recent investigations, and preserves an excellent perspective in dealing with Cæsar's character and in estimating his influence.

Froude, James Anthony. Cæsar. 1894.....92 C119fr
A careful study of "the conversion of the Roman republic into a military empire." Froude, though didactic, is always readable, and the student will from this book obtain a good outline picture of Roman life and conditions at the time of Cæsar.
"A brilliant and fascinating piece of historical writing, but tainted with Carlylean hero-worship." Larned's History for ready reference.

"It cannot be denied that this is a history of some importance, in spite of the questionable object for which it was written. The author himself declares that it was prepared 'for the purpose of proving that when Providence raises up such men as Cæsar, Charlemagne, and Napoleon, it is to trace out to peoples the path they ought to follow; to stamp with the seal of their genius a new era; and to accomplish in a few years the work of many centuries.' Holst, Hermann von. John C. Calhoun. 1894. (American statesmen.) 92 C132h

The same. 1899. (American statesmen.).....r92 C132h
Calhoun was in public life from 1811 to his death in 1850 and as member of Congress, secretary of state, vice-president and United States senator he played an important part in the history of the country.

Deals chiefly with public relations; valuable as history of the slavery question rather than as personal biography.

Jenkins, John Stilwell. Life of Calhoun. 1851.....92 C132j

Style is rhetorical, and the author is warm in his praise of Calhoun. Some extracts of speeches and letters are given, and there is a clear statement of Calhoun's position in regard to nullification.

CAMOENS, Luis de.

Adamson, John. Memoirs of the life and writings of Luis de Camoens. 2v. 1820.....r92 C154a v.1. Memoirs of Luis de Camoens.—Notices concerning the Rimas, or smaller poems of Camoens.

v.2. Essay on the Lusiad of Camoens; translated from the Portuguese of Dom Jozé Maria de Souza.—Some account of the translations of the Lusiad, with notices concerning the translators.—Some account concerning the editions of the works of Camoens.

The most celebrated of Portuguese poets, whose greatest work, the "Lusiad," first printed in 1572, commemorates the exploits of Vasco da Gama and other Portuguese heroes. Of his poems Madame de Staël says, "The national glory of the Portuguese is there illustrated under all the forms that imagination can devise. The versification is so charming and stately that even the common people know them by heart and sing them with delight."

CAMPBELL, Colin, baron Clyde.

Burne, Sir Owen Tudor. Clyde and Strathnairn. 1891. (Rulers of India.).....92 C157b

Lord Clyde distinguished himself in the Crimean war, but his most famous and brilliant achievement was the relief of Lucknow during the Sepoy rebellion of 1857–58.

Forbes, Archibald. Colin Campbell, lord Clyde. 1895. (English men of action.).....92 C157f

Well-written short account of Lord Clyde's military career.

Shadwell, Lawrence. Life of Colin Campbell, lord Clyde. 2v. 1881.....92 C157s

Author was for a long time in Lord Clyde's regiment and on his staff and, while one might wish to hear more of Lord Clyde's early life, the book is always interesting and valuable.

CAMPBELL, Thomas.

Hadden, James Cuthbert. Thomas Campbell. 1899. (Famous Scots series.).....92 C161h

"His remarks, taken separately, are just, but he dwells overmuch on Campbell's weaknesses, and the criticism of his poetry, although sensible, is not particularly acute...As we have demurred to much that Mr. Hadden says, it is only fair to add that his monograph is painstaking and accurate." Athenæum, 1900.

CAMPION, Edmund.

Simpson, Richard. Edmund Campion; a biography. 1867..92 C164s

Bibliography, p.347–359.

Campion was an English Jesuit and scholar, one of the most prominent of the Jesuit missionaries in England, condemned on a charge of high treason and executed at Tyburn, 1581.

"The...biography by Richard Simpson [is] an admirable and exhaustive work...It contains much valuable information on points connected with the religious history of the 16th century." Dictionary of national biography.

CANNING, Charles John, earl.

Cunningham, Sir Henry Stewart. Earl Canning. 1892. (Rulers of India.).....92 C1733c

CANNING, Charlotte (Stuart), countess.

Hare, Augustus John Cuthbert. Story of two noble lives; being memorials of Charlotte, countess Canning and Louisa, marchioness of Waterford. 3v. 1893.....92 C173h

"The work begins in the third quarter of the eighteenth century...Lady Hardwicke and Lady Stuart de Rothesay, the grandmother and mother of the two beautiful women designated by the title, contribute two... collections of prefatory letters. Lady Hardwicke's husband was Lord Lieutenant of Ireland from 1801 to 1806, and she gives some amusing sketches of Dublin society of that time. Lady Stuart de Rothesay's letters are dated from the English Embassy at Paris, and are rich in reminiscences of men and events...Her daughters, Lady Canning and Lady Waterford, belonged to the second quarter of the century. Mr. Hare gives interesting details of their childhood in France and England and of their marriages. Lady Canning's married life was spent in India during the eventful period of the mutiny, her journal being full of the thrilling scenes there enacted...Lady Waterford spent her long widowhood among her husband's tenants in Ireland. With many domestic details are anecdotes and recollections of some famous people."

CANNING, George.

Hill, Frank Harrison. George Canning. 1887. (English worthies.) 92 C1732h

Famous English statesman, orator and prime minister, 1770–1827. A compact and impartial biography, drawn in large measure from the lives, letters and speeches of statesmen of the time, and quoting freely from the squibs, lampoons and public prints of Canning's day.

CARLYLE, Mrs Jane Baillie (Welsh).

Letters and memorials; ed. by J. A. Froude. 2v. in 1. 1894..92 C2141

The same. 2v. 1883.....r92 C2141

"A pathetic and instructive record of the private history of a woman who will henceforth be remembered and honoured, not only or chiefly because she was the wife of a man of genius, but on account of her own virtues and talents...The humour and the pungent wit, the delicious naïveté, and the power of expressing spontaneous thoughts, grave and gay, in choice language...make at least a hundred...letters worth preserving as choice specimens of letter-writing apart altogether from their personal interest." Athenæum, 1883.

CARLYLE, Thomas.

Early letters, 1814–1826; ed. by C. E. Norton. 1886.....92 C214e

"Mr. Norton is one of the many outsiders to whom 'the view of Mr. Carlyle's character presented in Mr. Froude's biography has not approved itself,' and he endeavors to correct that view by printing selections from the letters written by Carlyle himself." Athenæum, 1886.

Letters of Carlyle to his youngest sister; ed. by C. T. Copeland. 1899.....92 C214l

The letters printed in this volume were mainly written by Thomas Carlyle to his youngest sister, Mrs Robert Hanning, who died in Toronto Dec. 13, 1897. Other members of the family are represented in the correspondence; there are a few letters—these perhaps the most interesting—from Carlyle to his mother; a few, also, from the mother to her oldest and to her youngest child. The collection extends from 1832 to 1890. Mr Copeland's introductory essay is on "Carlyle as a letter-writer."

CARLYLE, Thomas, & Emerson, R. W.

Correspondence. 2v. 1888.....92 C214

"Not so much a correspondence in any true intellectual sense as a deliberate exchange of monologues...Emerson's nature, on the whole, comes out of this correspondence the more disinterested, saner, and wiser, though not the stronger and grander of the two." Spectator, 1883.

CARLYLE, Thomas.

Froude, James Anthony. Thomas Carlyle; a history of the first forty years of his life. 2v. in 1. 1882.....92 C214f

The same. 2v. 1896.....92 C214f2

Froude was Carlyle's intimate friend and literary executor, but his biography has been bitterly criticized for its ruthless frankness, and its accuracy denied by those in a position to know the facts.

Garnett, Richard. Life of Thomas Carlyle. 1887. (Great writers.) 92 C214g

Bibliography, apx. p.1–28.

"Mr. Garnett has given a singularly good account of Carlyle, man and work...We do not know that anything important...in Carlyle's biography is here omitted, while his successive works meet with criticism which is more or less sympathetic and discriminating. Mr. Garnett is most emphatically right in insisting on the altogether incalculable importance of Carlyle as an ethical influence on the last half of the nineteenth century." Saturday review, 1887.

Macpherson, Hector Carsewell. Thomas Carlyle. 1897. (Famous Scots series.).....92 C214m

"Regarded...as a study based on Froude's work—supplemented and tempered by the much more genial reminiscences of...Professor Masson—Mr. Macpherson's book is...admirable." Academy, 1896.

Nichol, John. Thomas Carlyle. 1892. (English men of letters.).....92 C214n

"Has distinct merits as a narrative, a few passages of sound criticism, and at the end a refreshingly vigorous recognition of the great position of Carlyle." Saturday review, 1892.

Wilson, David. Mr Froude and Carlyle. 1898.....92 C214w

A defense of Carlyle, introductory to a proposed biography.

CARNEGIE, Andrew.

Cunningham, Andrew S. ed. A busy week; Mr Andrew Carnegie at Dumfermline, Kirkcaldy, Dumfries, Portmahomack. 1899.....r92 C216c

Collection of newspaper notices about the functions connected with the opening of a technical school, a library and the laying of the corner stones of two libraries. Illustrated.

CARPENTER, Mary.

Carpenter, Joseph Estlin. Life and work of Mary Carpenter. 1881.....92 C223c

Mary Carpenter (1807–77) was one of the founders of reformatory and industrial schools in England. She was also much interested in the education of the women of India.

"The book might have had a keener interest if it had been more varied in its treatment; but in Mary Carpenter herself we shall look in vain for variety. Her strength lay in a single purpose, carried out through a long life with single-minded persistence." Saturday review, 1880.

CARROLL, Charles, of Carrollton.

Rowland, Kate Mason. Life of Charles Carroll of Carrollton, 1737–1832, with his correspondence and public papers. 2v. 1898.....92 C233r

Bibliography, v.1, p.17–18.

"Although associated with almost every public event from 1770 to 1800

Carroll habitually destroyed his correspondence. Hence this, his only worthy biography [1902], finds its material largely in official records, publications of the Maryland Historical Society, the journal of William Maclay, and a few unpublished family letters. It is a mixture of his public and private life, but especially a Carroll family book." Larned's Literature of American history.

CARROLL, Lewis, (pseud. of Charles Lutwidge Dodgson).

Bowman. Isa. Story of Lewis Carroll; told for young people by the real Alice in Wonderland, with a diary and numerous facsimile letters. 1900.....92 C2332b

Miss Bowman was one of the child actresses who impersonated Alice on the stage and came to know the author in that way. Illustrated.

Collingwood, Stuart Dodgson. Life and letters of Lewis Carroll. 1898.....92 C2332c

Bibliography, p.431–443.

Interesting biography of the Oxford don who lectured on mathematics and created the immortal Alice. The author quotes many entertaining letters to and from children, of whom Lewis Carroll was very fond, and gives some interesting details about "Alice in Wonderland," "Through the looking-glass" and "Sylvie and Bruno." Illustrated by sketches and remarkably fine photographs by Lewis Carroll.

CARSON, Christopher.

Abbott, John Stevens Cabot. Christopher Carson, known as Kit Carson. 1898.....92 C2342a

The same. 1901.....j92 C2342a

Young people's biography of one of the most picturesque figures of early Western history, trapper, guide and friend of the Indians.

CARSTARES, William.

Story, Robert Herbert. William Carstares, a character and career of the revolutionary epoch, 1649–1715. 1874..92 C234s

"William [III] had...one Scottish advisor, who deserved and possessed more influence than any of the ostensible ministers. This was Carstairs, one of the most remarkable men of that age. He united great scholastic attainments with great aptitude for civil business, and the firm faith and ardent zeal of a martyr with the shrewdness and suppleness of a consummate politician." Macaulay's History of England.

CARY, Alice.

Hudson, Mrs Mary (Clemmer) Ames. Memorial of Alice and Phœbe Cary, with some of their later poems. 1873..92 C245h Familiar, personal account of the two American poets by an intimate friend.

CASANOVA de SEINGALT, Giovanni Jacopo.

Escapes of Casanova and Latude from prison; ed. by P. Villars. 1892. (Adventure series.).....92 M444

Masers de Latude (1728–1805), whose "Memoirs" are here given in full, was one of the celebrated prisoners of the Bastile and in confinement for 35 years before he finally made his escape. Casanova, one of the most noted adventurers of the 18th century, was imprisoned in Venice for political reasons. The graphic story of his escape, here translated from his remarkable "Memoirs" gained him great celebrity.

Mémoires, écrits par lui-même. 6v. in 3.....92 C248

CASAS, Bartolomé de las, bp. of Chiapa.

Helps, Sir Arthur. Life of Las Casas, "the apostle of the Indies." 1896.....92 C249h

The same. 1868.....r92 C249h

"In this work, reproduced with additions from the author's 'Spanish Conquest,' Mr. Helps has refuted the charge that Las Casas, in his anxiety to relieve the Indians from the slavery imposed upon them by the Spaniards, first suggested the institution of African slavery." Sabin's Dictionary of books relating to America.

CASS, Lewis.

McLaughlin, Andrew Cunningham. Lewis Cass. 1892. (American statesmen.) 92 C258m

The same. 1899. (American statesmen.) r92 C258m

Like the other biographies in this series, this is more of a political than a personal history, and Cass has been studied as a representative of the old Northwest and as a power in the development of that section and in the growth of its political life.

CASTELAR, Emilio.

Hannay, David. Don Emilio Castelar. [1896.] (Public men of to-day.) 92 C266h

Good sketch of the distinguished Spanish statesman, orator and author (1832–99), and of Spanish politics in the later 19th century.

CELLINI, Benvenuto.

Life; newly tr. into English by J. A. Symonds. 1899 ..... 92 C315l

Contains an introduction by Symonds which gives a good character sketch of Cellini.

"Those who have made themselves thoroughly familiar with Cellini's Memoirs possess the substance of that many-sided epoch [the 16th century] in the form of an epitome. It is the first book which a student of the Italian Renaissance should handle in order to obtain the right direction for his more minute researches...From the pages of this book the Genius of the Renaissance, incarnate in a single personality, leans forth and speaks to us. He was the first goldsmith of his time, an adequate sculptor, a restless traveller, an indefatigable workman, a Bohemian of the purest water, a turbulent bravo, a courtier and companion of princes; finally, a Florentine who used his native idiom with incomparable vivacity of style." J. A. Symonds.

"One of the most interesting and valuable autobiographies ever written. The author was contemporaneous with Raphael and Michael Angelo, and was the most skilful worker in metals in that age of artists. It was while he was engaged in the varied labors of his craft that he dictated this fascinating work. The variety of its incidents, the minuteness of its descriptions, the pictures of the people, and of the manners of the time, and, above all, the view it affords of the life of one of the most powerful characters of the age, give it at once the charm of romance and the value of a record of contemporaneous events." C. K. Adams.

Memoirs; tr. by Thomas Roscoe. 1901.....92 C315

Longueville, Thomas. Chisel, pen & poignard; or, Benvenuto Cellini; his times and his contemporaries. 1899..92 C315lt

By the author of "The life of Sir Kenelm Digby."

Interesting and amusing but very condensed account, dealing only slightly with his art.

CERVANTES SAAVEDRA, Miguel de.

Kelly, James Fitzmaurice-. Life of Cervantes. 1892....92 C334k

Bibliography of the works of Cervantes, p.321–384.

Mr Fitzmaurice-Kelly has a great enthusiasm for the author of Don Quixote, and criticizes his writings with literary judgment, but his book will be more interesting to the student of Spanish literature than to the general reader.

Mayans y Siscar, Gregorio. Life of Michael de Cervantes Saavedra; tr. fr. the Spanish by Mr Ozell. 1738....qr92 C334m Contains a number of prints illustrating Don Quixote.

One of the four biographies of the famous Spanish novelist, author of Don Quixote, mentioned in Ticknor's "History of Spanish literature." He characterizes it as a "work of learning, and the first proper attempt to collect materials for a life of Cervantes, but ill-arranged and ill-written, and of little value now, except for some of its incidental discussions."

Oliphant, Mrs Margaret Oliphant (Wilson). Cervantes. [1880.] 92 C334o

"The biographical part has all the charm and dramatic colour of a novel ...The purely literary and critical portion is less happy." Saturday review, 1881.

Watts, Henry Edward. Life of Miguel de Cervantes. 1891. (Great writers.).....92 C334w

Bibliography, apx. p.1–23.

A rearrangement of a larger work by the same author, omitting much matter intended for Spanish students, and adding criticism and literary history more interesting to the general reader.

CHALMERS, Thomas.

Blaikie, William Garden. Thomas Chalmers. 1896. (Famous Scots series.).....92 C353b

"Looking at the influence of Chalmers on the religious thought and life of Scotland generally, we may say that he let in daylight and fresh air on the evangelical enclosures of the church...With broad, statesmanlike view he was seen to have apprehended the evils of modern society, to have detected the remedy, and girded himself, in all his strength, to apply it." Dictionary of national biography.

CHAMBERLAIN, Joseph.

Jeyes, Samuel Henry. Right Hon. Joseph Chamberlain. (Public men of to-day.) 92 C355j Brief account of the public career of "the best abused man in England," to quote Mr Chamberlain's own description of his position in public life.

The last chapter, "Mr Chamberlain the imperialist," includes a brief account of Dr Jameson's expedition in the Transvaal.

CHAMBERS, George.

Sharpe, John McDowell. Memoir of George Chambers of Chambersburg. 1873 ..... r92 C355s

Read before the Historical society of Pennsylvania, Feb. 17th, 1873.

Eminent Pennsylvania jurist, member of the convention that formed the present constitution of Pennsylvania, was made a judge of the supreme court of his state in 1851. A manuscript history of a considerable portion of Pennsylvania, which he had written for the Pennsylvania historical society was destroyed when the Confederates burned Chambersburg in 1864.

CHAMPLAIN, Samuel de.

Sedgwick, Henry Dwight. Samuel de Champlain. 1902 .. 92 C358s

Being written for young people the biography does not refer to original sources or discuss at length questions of policy. It dwells particularly on Champlain's life in France and presents his nobility of character.

Hodgkin, Thomas. Charles the Great. 1897. (Foreign statesmen.) 92 C374h

The author prefaces his history of Charlemagne by a study of his predecessors and the conditions of the time, and in the last chapter gives a brief summary of the effect of his rule on the political condition of Europe, on literature, on laws and on the western church.

Mombert, Jacob Isidor. History of Charles the Great. 1888. .....92 C374m

"As a record of events...an admirable piece of work. Scarcely a single fact has escaped his notice, and he has entered far more minutely into several of the affairs of Charles's reign than any other historian who has written in English...He has not attempted to define the place which his hero holds in the history of the world, or to trace the effects of his conquests and general policy on the fortunes of the peoples included in his Empire." Saturday review, 1889.

"Disraeli's point of view is that of a High Tory, and it is probably the most powerful plea ever made in behalf of Charles I. But, notwithstanding the ardor of its advocacy, it is temperate in language and dignified in tone. The greatest value of the volumes is not so much in the new evidence brought to light, though new evidence is not wanting, as in the ingenuity with which known facts are woven into the argument and made to support his cause." *C. English poet, famous for his precocity and for his literary impostures, committed suicide in 1770 at the age of 17.
"There is little, if anything, of permanent value in his writings. In one way, however, he showed an acuteness which may, perhaps, be fairly called marvellous. He showed an instinctive knowledge—remarkable in one so young—of the kind of intellectual food for which a demand was springing up in the country. His forgeries illustrate, as they no doubt stimulated, the growing taste for ancient literature." Stephen's English thought in the eighteenth century.

CHILD, Mrs Lydia Maria (Francis).

Letters. 1882.....92 C436

Biographical introduction, by J. G. Whittier, p.5–25.

Mrs Child (1802–80) was a novelist and edited the first monthly periodical for children published in the United States, but her great work was in connection with the antislavery movement, her writings contributing in no slight degree to the formation of public sentiment on that subject.

CHOATE, Rufus.

Brown, Samuel Gilman. Life of Rufus Choate. 1891.....92 C448b

A distinguished American lawyer (1799–1859), especially noted for his power as an orator. The memoir contains extracts from his speeches, journals and letters, but the author was unable to include any of his addresses to a jury, for which he was perhaps most famous.

The same; tr. in full by John Broadhouse. [1899.].....92 C456l2
"It is a misnomer to call Liszt's poetical, almost hysterical essay a 'Life' of Chopin. Its biographical material is meagre and faulty, but the book is valuable as a study of Chopin's art by a fellow-artist and friend." H. E. Krehbiel.

CHORLEY, Henry Fothergill.
Recent art and society, as described in his autobiography and memoirs; comp. fr. the edition of H. G. Hewlett by C. H. Jones. 1874. (Amateur series.).....92 C457
Chorley was from 1833 to 1866 musical critic for the "Athenæum," numbering among his friends Dickens, Miss Mitford, Lady Blessington, Mr and Mrs Browning, Mendelssohn, Moscheles, Grote and other well-known men and women of the time. He was the author of various interesting books on music and of several novels and dramas which were not successful.

CHRIST. See Christology, p.165.

CHRISTINA, queen of Sweden.
Bain, Francis William. Christina, queen of Sweden. 1890..92 C461b
Authorities, p.7–9.
Christina was the daughter of Gustavus Adolphus, whom she succeeded in 1632, abdicating the throne in favor of her cousin, Charles Gustavus, in 1654. After embracing the Catholic faith, she settled in Rome, where she became the patron of men of letters and science. The book makes no attempt to chronicle the history of Sweden.

CHURCH, Richard William.
Life and letters; ed. by M. C. Church. 1897.....92 C468
List of the author's writings, p.423–424.
Church (1815–90) was a historian, critic and, from 1871 to his death, dean of St. Paul's. He has been called "perhaps the most impressive preacher of his generation; the only one who suggested to his hearers the presence of a prophetic gift." This biography consists chiefly of his letters.

CICERO, Marcus Tullius.
Davidson, James Leigh Strachan-. Cicero and the fall of the Roman republic. 1891. (Heroes of the nations.)..92 C475d
"The author has thought for himself, and draws his own picture of Cicero and his times without making either a servile copy from other authorities or a fantastic caricature in defiance of them...Especially worthy of commendation is the clear statement of the relations of the different orders in the later Commonwealths." Nation, 1894.

Trollope, Anthony. Life of Cicero. 2v. [1881.].....92 C475t

"An exceedingly vivid portrayal of the life of the great orator. No one of the numerous biographers of Cicero has succeeded so completely in transplanting him and his surroundings into our own days... While Mommsen, Froude, Merivale, and others have looked at the condition and the necessities of the State, and have censured Cicero for not comprehending the nature of the situation, Trollope had studied the problem with a view to ascertaining and showing how it must have appeared to Cicero himself. Thus the volumes become very largely a personal rather than a political life." C. K. Adams.

The same. 1896. (Public men of to-day.).....r92 C582w

The object of the series is to present "a study of the career of some conspicuous personage in each nationality," and to the author (an Englishman) it seemed in 1896, when the book was written, that there was no American then living who had played so distinguished a part, and at the same time had so strong a personality, as the then president of the United States.

CLINTON, De Witt.

Campbell, William W. Life and writings of De Witt Clinton. 1849.....92 C595c

"The most important part of the book is the Private canal journey, 1810, which is the diary of a journey through New York between Schenectady and Buffalo, and contains considerable historic and economic information gathered while the country was still in a primitive state. Helpful data will be found here in regard to wages, prices, value of land and local products. Clinton was afterwards an ardent supporter of the construction of the Erie Canal." Larned's Literature of American history.

COBBE, Frances Power.

Life, by herself. 2v. 1895.....92 C632

Gives a picture of the position of woman in the world to-day as contrasted with that of 70 years ago.

"Miss Cobbe's life has been a useful, interesting and important one, and she has told her story of it better, on the whole, than any other biographer could do it." Nation, 1894.

COBBETT, William.

Waters, Robert. How to get on in the world, as demonstrated by the life and language of William Cobbett, to which is added Cobbett's English grammar with notes. 1883.....92 C6322w Cobbett (1762–1835) was an English essayist, politician and agriculturist.

"Cobbett if not an attractive character, is a very interesting one, and the active part taken by him in all the public events and controversies of an important period makes him well worth knowing to all who are students of that period. For this purpose Mr. Waters's life is well suited...He has had the good sense, too, to let Cobbett tell his own story for the most part, an easy thing in so voluminous and egotistical a writer, and a very desirable thing in a writer so racy and entertaining." Nation, 1883.

COFFIN, Charles Carleton.

Griffis, William Elliot. Charles Carleton Coffin, war correspondent, traveller, author and statesman. 1898....92 C662g

Well-known, particularly in New England, as correspondent for many years, beginning early in the Civil war, of the "Boston journal."

COFFIN, Levi.

Reminiscences; history of the labors of a lifetime in behalf of the slave, with stories of fugitives who gained their freedom through his instrumentality. 1880.....r92 C663

"Coffin was a member of the Society of Friends; resided in youth in North Carolina; and removed in early manhood (1822) to Indiana. Successful in business he devoted time and money to the help of escaping slaves,—several thousand, it is estimated in number. Because of his activity he was termed by some the president of the underground railroad. This volume...is a simple but thrilling record of the escapes with which the author was associated. It is one of the few books on the subject, and...is likely to remain a principal authority." Larned's Literature of American history.

COLERIDGE, Mrs Sara Henry (Coleridge).

Memoirs and letters; ed. by her daughter. 1875.....92 C6882
Mrs Coleridge (1802–52) was the daughter of the poet Coleridge, and herself a poet.
"The unanimous testimony of her friends represents her as an almost perfect woman, uniting masculine strength of intellect to feminine grace and charm. This favourable judgment is confirmed in both its branches by the correspondence published by her daughter in 1873, though a considerable part of it is occupied with references to contemporary theological controversies." Dictionary of national biography.

COLES, Abraham.

Coles, Jonathan Ackerman, ed. Abraham Coles; biographical sketch, memorial tributes, selections from his works. 1892.....92 C689c

Best letters; ed. by A. B. McMahan. 1893.....92 C849

The letters extend from 1765 to 1794, were written chiefly to Lady Hesketh, Mr Joseph Hill, Rev. William Unwin and Rev. John Newton, and show the poet at his best and happiest.

Letters; ed. with introduction by W. Benham. 1899.....92 C849l

"Two men of mark in English literature, Southey and Alexander Smith, have called Cowper 'the best of English letter-writers,' and few will be found to challenge this opinion. The charm of Cowper's letters, like that of his poetry, lies first of all in his naturalness and sincerity. He writes simply because he had something to say, or because he loves his correspondent, and has no idea of posing for effect...His letters, then, are the simple statement of whatever he has in his mind; written in pure and beautiful English; full of the information and refined taste of a well-read man; overflowing now with humour, now with deep religious feeling." Introduction.

Stillman, William James. Francesco Crispi, insurgent, exile, revolutionist and statesman. 1899.....92 C884s

Author was special correspondent of the London Times from 1876 to 1898. Crispi is pictured as one of the greatest of Italian statesmen, second only to Cavour among the makers of Italy.

"We take leave of this work with a feeling that few critics have the right to meet Mr. Stillman on a ground, every inch of which he knows so well, and yet, at the same time, with a doubt whether Signor Crispi is the great Italian hero he appears in these pages." Spectator, 1899.

The same. 1895 ..... r92 C892c

The same. 1899 ..... r92 C892c2

Finding the existing historical treatment of Cromwell typified by the extreme severity of Hume, or the equally unfair hero-worship of Carlyle, Mr Church began a serious study of the man and his time, and the result is this book, which he does not consider a biography, but "as an adequate narrative which aims to present, with sufficient detail, the formation of the Commonwealth and its strange paradox of the permanent establishment of civil and religious liberty through a Dictator who respected no law, in working out England's salvation, but the law of necessity; and this for a nation whose fortunes are happily and inseparably linked with the forms of popular monarchy."

Firth, Charles Harding. Oliver Cromwell and the rule of the Puritans in England. 1900. (Heroes of the nations.) 92 C892f

While based on an article contributed by the author to the "Dictionary of national biography" in 1888, this life embodies the result of later researches and of recently discovered documents such as the Clarke papers. The battle plans have been specially drawn for this volume by B. V. Darbishire and in two cases differ considerably from those generally accepted as correct.

Gardiner, Samuel Rawson. Oliver Cromwell. 1899 .... qr92 C892g

"A cautious, moderate and unpartisan estimate...A truly marvellous picture of Cromwell." Spectator, 1899.

"From a literary point of view, Mr. Gardiner has never done anything so good. As an artistic whole, the arrangement, the subordination of details to the general effect, the breadth and skill of the treatment, are worthy of a great historian." Literature, 1899.

Beautifully illustrated with reproductions of portraits, busts, medals, seals and miniatures pertaining to Cromwell and his family.

Morley, John. Oliver Cromwell. 1900 ..... 92 C892m

Appeared in the "Century magazine," v.59–60, Nov. 1899–Oct. 1900.

"Not a biography, but an 'appreciation' of the Protector...Mr. Morley ...unites the character of the man of letters...with the character of a statesman who has played a leading part in English public life...The book does not...explain the paradox of Puritanism...It does not give a picture of Cromwell, but it suggests peculiarities in his character which go far to explain his failure in every attempt to construct a system which should outlast his own life." Nation, 1901.

Paterson, Arthur Henry. Oliver Cromwell; his life and character. 1899 ..... 92 C892pa

"The object of this book is to give a narrative of the personal life, aims, and motives of this great Englishman; any history of the time has been studiously avoided. Cromwell, and Cromwell alone, with what Cromwell did, and tried to do, and was—this is the theme." Preface.

"Of no little interest to all lovers of Cromwell, and to all students of the Commonwealth period. It is not a history or Life of Cromwell or his son, but rather a series of reproductions of Cromwell pictures and Cromwell relics with a certain amount of explanatory comment. Sir Richard Tangye appears to have a large and valuable collection of pictures and other objects connected with the Protector, and it is from his own collection that most of these pictures are drawn." Spectator, 1899.

CROMWELL, Richard.

Guizot, François Pierre Guillaume. History of Richard Cromwell and the restoration of Charles II. 2v. 1856..92 C8922g

"A philosophical study rather than a history...Chief value lies in the mass of illustrative letters printed in the Appendices. Considerably more than half the work is filled with these letters, drawn from foreign archives, and some of them are of extreme importance...Cardinal Mazarin was one of the coolest and cleverest of the many spectators of events in England, and the letters of his diplomatic agent, M. de Bordeaux, are deeply interesting." Athenæum, 1856.

CROWE, Sir Joseph Archer.

Reminiscences of thirty-five years of my life. 1895.....92 C896

An account of his life to the time when he entered the public service, and a most interesting life it was, passed by turns in London, on the continent, in India. He was war correspondent on the Danube in '54, in the Crimea, in Bombay during the mutiny, in the Franco-Austrian war in '59. Not the least interesting part of the book is his account of the circumstances under which he wrote in collaboration with Cavalcaselle the history of the early Flemish painters.

CROZIER, John Beattie.

My inner life; a chapter in personal evolution and autobiography. 1898.....92 C8962

"Mr. Crozier is known to English readers as one of the most versatile and original thinkers of the day, and there is nothing which he is disposed to say which is not, at least, interesting and suggestive. This work...is a curious blend of biography, incident, and inward growth, together with much acute criticism on the history of philosophy, and on some of the leading writers of our time. The object of the work is to reveal the various forces which played on an exceedingly active and serious mind." Spectator, 1899.

1823. ..... qr92 A214

Written by the ex-president to a relative shortly after being defeated for re-election. They were under the seal of the strictest confidence and dealt with the chief actors and events in the latter part of his public life. They were vehement, abusive and unjust. Mr C. F. Adams says that an heir of Cunningham gave them to the opponents of John Quincy Adams to be used against him when he was a candidate for the presidency. It was a great mistake upon Adams's part that he wrote them and a grave misfortune that they were published, even though dishonorably and many years afterward.

The author being himself a political journalist his comment and criticism on Mr Curtis's connection with "Harper's weekly," with civil service reform, with state and national politics is particularly valuable, while his judgments of the purely literary work are frank and discriminating. Of Mr Curtis's more personal and private life Mr Cary has written briefly, but with excellent taste.

"Taking his book as a whole, those must have known Mr. Curtis extremely long and well whose good opinion of him is not enhanced by this entirely simple and sincere portrayal of his character and career." Nation, 1895.

CUTHBERTSON, John.

Biographical sketch of John Cuthbertson, the first Reformed Presbyterian minister in America, 1751–1791. [Anonymous.] 1878.....92 C948b

For many years after coming over from Scotland in 1751, Mr Cuthbertson did missionary duty in various parts of Pennsylvania, though his principal congregations were at Octoraro, Lancaster county, and Lower Chanceford, York county. The facts of this work are taken from his diary and from details given by old people in the places where he worked.

CUTLER, Ephraim.

Life and times; prepared from his journals and correspondence. 1890.....r92 C949l

Contains a biographical sketch of W. P. Cutler.

Ephraim Cutler (1767–1853) was the son of Manasseh Cutler of the "Ohio company" and naturally turned westward with the other early emigrants. He rendered important service in the convention that framed the Ohio state constitution, and in the territorial legislature, and led the hard life of a frontiersman. The book contains also a short memoir of Jervis Cutler, one of Putnam's band of pioneers who began the settlement of Ohio in 1788.

Of the biography by Boccaccio, Scartazzini in his "Companion to Dante" says: "Though doubtless well intended and a fine monument of literature, valuable too, indeed indispensable, for the historic study of Dante, [it] has to be used with the greatest caution." The same author says of Bruni's work: "One of the most important among the old biographies of Dante, and his statements always deserve to be taken into consideration."

Browning, Oscar. Dante; his life and writings. 1891....92 D237b
Expanded from an article in the "Encyclopædia Britannica." Gives a short account of Dante's life and work without detailed criticisms. Useful as an introduction to the study of Dante.

Plumptre, Edward Hayes, dean. Life of Dante; ed. by A. J. Butler. 1900.....92 D237p
New edition of the work which appeared in 1886, the editor having pruned, he says, "a little of the somewhat exuberant conjecture in which the Dean, after the fashion of an earlier school of biographers, was apt to indulge." In spite of this tendency, the book has both value and interest and the advantage of compactness, covering less than 250 small pages of good-sized print.

Toynbee, Paget. Dante Alighieri. 1900.....92 D237t
"For the general reader; controversial points are for the most part avoided...Mr. Toynbee...has given a certain originality...to his handling of the well-worn subject by making his little book very largely an avowed compilation." Athenæum, 1901.

Ward, Mrs May (Alden). Dante; a sketch of his life and works. 1887.....92 D237w
Bibliography, p.287–294.
Good introduction to the study of Dante.

DANTON, Georges Jacques.

Beesly, Augustus Henry. Life of Danton. 1899.....92 D238be

Authorities, p.7–8.

"Distinctly apologetic from beginning to end...He shows a wide familiarity with French researches, but he has apparently paid little attention to the documentary sources of information." Dial, 1899.

Belloc, Hilaire. Danton; a study. 1899.....92 D238b

The first biography in English of the great French revolutionary leader, founded on original documents. Mr Belloc, late scholar of Balliol college, Oxford, deals only with known facts—facts that may be proved; he has painted a vivid and true picture of Danton and described the character of the period in which he was a central figure. An appendix supplements the narrative, embodying much collateral information.

DARWIN, Charles.

Charles Darwin; his life told in an autobiographical chapter and in a selected series of his published letters; ed. by Francis Darwin. 1893.....92 D268d

Virtually an abbreviation of the "Life and letters" in which the more scientific part of those volumes is omitted, although during certain periods of Mr Darwin's life when the scientific and the personal elements were alike interesting both parts have been retained. For instance, the part of the story relating to the writing of the "Origin of species" has been told in full.

"List of works by C. Darwin," v.2, p.533–541.

"The book is at once a biography, an autobiography, and the history of a great idea...The man and his work are so presented as never to be dissociated." Spectator, 1887.

Allen, Grant. Charles Darwin. 1893. (English worthies.)..92 D268a

Small, popularly written book, dealing "rather with Darwin's position as a thinker and worker than with the biographical details of his private life."

Bettany, George Thomas. Life of Charles Darwin. 1887. (Great writers.).....92 D268b

Bibliography, apx. p.1–31.

Somewhat slight and uncritical sketch.

Popular; useful for readers in general and especially for the young.

DARWIN, Erasmus.

Krause, Ernst, (pseud. Carus Sterne). Erasmus Darwin, with a preliminary notice by Charles Darwin. 1880..92 D2681k

"The permanent interest in his writings depends on his exposition of the form of evolutionism afterwards expounded by Lamarck. He caught a glimpse of many observations and principles, afterwards turned to account by his grandson, Charles Darwin; but, though a great observer and an acute thinker, he missed the characteristic doctrine which made the success of his grandson's scheme." Dictionary of national biography.

DAUBIGNY, Charles François. See Artists, p.1271.

DAUDET, Alphonse.

Trente ans de Paris; à travers ma vie et mes livres. [1888.].....92 D284

"To read Trente Ans de Paris is not reading in the ordinary sense of the word. It is spending a couple of hours with Daudet, who takes the reader out of himself, shows him Paris, and describes his own life there with that mixture of pathos and humour which is so characteristic of the great French artist." Nineteenth century, 1890.

Daudet, Léon. Alphonse Daudet, to which is added The Daudet family, "Mon frère et moi," by Ernest Daudet. 1898. .....92 D284d

This memoir of the great French writer by his son, shows Daudet's charming personality and the general trend of his thought, and throws much light on his literary aims and methods. An appendix contains a conversation "concerning the imagination" between father and son and an interesting account of their early life by Daudet's brother.

DAVIS, Charles Henry, 1807–77.

Davis, Charles Henry, b. 1845. Life of Charles Henry Davis, rear admiral, 1807–1877. 1899.....92 D316d

Valuable for its account of the early days of the United States navy and the naval side of the Civil war. Perhaps Davis's greatest achievement was the establishment in 1849 of the "American ephemeris and nautical almanac," a work which will always remain an enduring monument to his scientific skill. He was also intimately connected with the early work of the United States Coast survey.

DAVIS, Jefferson.

Craven, John J. Prison life of Jefferson Davis. 1866....r92 D319c

"Written by the physician in attendance during the imprisonment in Fortress Monroe from May 25 to December 25, 1865. A kind of diary of the daily life, giving the gist of conversations. Written by a Union man, but sympathetic and forgiving." Larned's Literature of American history.

DAVY, Sir Humphry.

Thorpe, Thomas Edward. Humphry Davy, poet and philosopher. 1896. (Century science series.).....92 D327t

"Probably few persons have hitherto so completely realized as will the readers of this book the poetic element in Davy's character, and the large share it had in determining his choice of associates, as well as the extent to which it appears to account for the quality of some of his scientific work, and the vivacity and ardour with which he pursued his discoveries." Nature, 1897.

DAWSON, Sir John William.

Fifty years of work in Canada, scientific and educational; autobiographical notes; ed. by Rankine Dawson. 1901..92 D332

"Sir William Dawson's notes are mostly concerned with his educational work...The success of the schemes he had so much at heart—McGill University, the Royal Society of Canada, and the higher education of women—takes up several chapters, and his visits to England and a few references to his geological work the rest." Spectator, 1901.

DEAN, Philotus.

DELANY, Mrs Mary (Granville).

Autobiography and correspondence, with interesting reminiscences of George III and Queen Charlotte. 3v. 1861..92 D389

Mrs Delany was a great favorite of George III and the royal family, and had many interesting friends, but is best known from her connection with Fanny Burney. Part of the letters describe life in Ireland, 1743–68.

Symonds, E. M. (pseud. George Paston), comp. Mrs Delany (Mary Granville); a memoir, 1700–1788. 1900.....92 D389s

"There is every reason why, in her reincarnation in one volume, abridged and intelligently edited, so vivacious a lady should win a new lease of life. Her lively journal of the court and social life of a century so dull is worth reading, if only for the light it throws on the minor antiquities of dress and manners, and for the curious pieces of gossip that only a clever woman knows how to retail." Nation, 1900.

Short biographical and critical study.

DERBY, Edward Geoffrey Smith Stanley, earl of.

Saintsbury, George. Earl of Derby. 1892. (Prime ministers of Queen Victoria.).....92 D443s

British Tory statesman of the middle 19th century, premier in 1852, 1858–59 and 1866–68.

"A forcible, compact, yet, space considered, fairly thorough review, from the Tory standpoint, of Lord Derby's public career, with the due infusion of characteristic anecdote and personal detail...He sketches rapidly and sympathetically...the salient events of Lord Derby's political life, his part in fighting the Reform Question, his attitude towards the Corn Law agitation, his first, second and third ministries...Lord Derby's connection with the turf is not forgotten." Dial, 1892.

DESCARTES, René.

Mahaffy, John Pentland. Descartes. 1894.....92 D456m

Account of his life with an estimate of his writings.

DES ÉCHEROLLES, Alexandrine.

Side lights on the Reign of terror; memoirs; tr. fr. the French by M. C. Balfour. 1900.....92 D458

"It is a tale of personal vicissitude, wholly devoid of political character or literary association, and dependent for its success on the ingredients of peril and unexpected escape...The siege of Lyons is an episode of some moment in the history of the Revolution, and it fills the chief place among the historical events which are described by Mlle. des Écherolles. After the troops of the Convention had entered the conquered city M. des Écherolles was condemned, and escaped only after he had survived some remarkable dangers...Her reminiscences create a pleasant impression by their simplicity of tone, while the amount of domestic detail which they furnish places them in the class of historical materials." Nation, 1900.

DESMOULINS, Camille.

Claretie, Arsène Arnaud, called Jules. Camille Desmoulins and his wife; passages from the history of the Dantonists. 1876.....r92 D468c

"No man in himself ever personified the people better than did Camille Desmoulins [1760–94]...He not only aped the people, he was the people himself. His newspapers cried in the public streets, and their sarcasm, bandied from mouth to mouth, has not been swept away with the other impurities of the day...It was the popular chorus which led the people to their most important movements." Lamartine's Girondists.

DE SOTO, Hernando. See SOTO, Hernando de.

DE VERE, Aubrey Thomas.

Recollections. 1897.....92 D487

Contains a chapter on Cardinal Newman and one on Cardinal Manning.

" 'Recollections' and 'Autobiographies' are very different things; and this book belongs to the former class, not to the latter. We have seen persons and places which have amused or interested us, and it occurs to us that if accurately described they might amuse or interest others also; but this is a very different thing from writing one's biography, with which the world has little concern." Preface.

DEWEES, Samuel.

DIANE de POITIERS.

Hay, Marie. Madame Dame Dianne de Poytiers, la grande seneschale de Normandie, duchesse de Valentinois; a monograph. 1900.....qr92 D537h

A brief and interesting biography of this famous woman of the French court, who lived during the first half of the 16th century (1499–1566) and who exercised so great an influence on court and king (Henry II).

Among the numerous and fine illustrations those of the 16th century bookbindings are perhaps the most interesting.

DIBDIN, Thomas John.

Reminiscences. 2v. in 1. 1828.....r92 D541

English actor and dramatist (1771–1841).

"Though necessarily egotistical and devoted to theatrical recollections, [are] lively and amusing, full of interesting anecdotes of old companions." Dictionary of national biography.

DIDEROT, Denis.

Morley, John. Diderot and the encyclopædists. 2v. 1886–91. .....92 D562m

"The biography of the chief founder and conductor of the Encyclopædia is not, in Mr. Morley's hands, a mere peg on which to hang a dissertation, but is set before us as an example of what Encyclopædists were. Treated in this way, the life of Diderot has a value which it could not have otherwise." Saturday review, 1878.

DIGBY, Sir Kenelm.

Longueville, Thomas. Life of Sir Kenelm Digby, by one of his descendants. 1896.....92 D577l

"Were it for nothing else than the picturesqueness and versatility of the man, Kenelm Digby would have been a notable figure at the court of King Charles. He had laid it out for himself to combine the roles in life of the philosopher, the fine gentleman, and the man of affairs, and he attacked his difficult problem with astonishing audacity, and on the whole, astonishing success...His life is pretty reading and we are in debt to the descendant signing himself, T. L., who has put it together for us." Academy, 1896.

DINGELSTEDT, Franz von.

Münchener bilderbogen. 1879.....92 D613

DOLET, Étienne.

Christie, Richard Copley. Étienne Dolet, the martyr of the renaissance, 1508–1546. 1899.....92 D694c

List of books written or published by Dolet, p.513–553.

First edition appeared in 1880.

"Such memory of Dolet as survives is the exclusive possession of the bibliophile or the scholar. To the former he is known as one of those erudite printers who have placed Lyons in typographical art by the side of Venice or Florence, or in subsequent times Amsterdam. The latter has gleaned some scanty particulars concerning one who was the friend and the publisher of Marot and Rabelais, the pupil of Villanovanus, the ally of Bonaventure Despériers, the opponent of Erasmus, and the antagonist of Scaliger...It is pleasant to think that an Englishman has been the first to drag to light such particulars concerning Dolet as may yet be found, and to supply a biography that must rank as adequate." Athenæum, 1880.

DOMINIC, St. called de Guzman.

Herkless, John. Francis and Dominic and the mendicant orders. 1901. (World's epoch-makers.).....92 F866h

Gosse, Edmund William. Life and letters of John Donne, dean of St. Paul's. 2v. 1899.....92 D728g

"Mr. Gosse's subtle and solid study of John Donne justifies expectation ...It is a brilliant portrait: it is also a laborious and exact work of literary history...Apart from Walton...Mr. Gosse has found his chief mine of biographical matter in Donne's own works—the poems, so far as they can be dated, and the letters...These [letters] have been digested, set as far as possible in chronological order, and incorporated in the text of the compiler's narrative." Athenæum, 1899.

Jessopp, Augustus. John Donne, sometime dean of St. Paul's, 1621–1631. 1897.....92 D728je

"It will not have been Dr. Jessopp's fault if the world does not begin to understand Donne's greatness as a preacher and a Churchman... Dr. Jessopp is an enthusiast, a Donne worshipper; but even if he does not always persuade us to take quite his view, he never fails to make his subject attractive." Spectator, 1897.

DOUGLAS, Stephen Arnold.

Brown, William Garrott. Stephen Arnold Douglas. 1902..92 D759b

"Notable as a recognition of the great part that Douglas really played ...The criticism that suggests itself respects the scope rather than the form of the book. It is too mature for younger readers and too meager for older ones." American historical review, 1903.

Sheahan, James W. Life of Stephen A. Douglas. 1860....92 D759s

Extremely eulogistic sketch written to secure for him the presidential nomination of 1860.

DOUGLASS, Frederick.

Life and times, written by himself. 1893.....92 D761

"Highly interesting and instructive narrative. The account of slavery as it appeared to a slave is invaluable, and no other single source gives us such a strong and effective picture." Larned's Literature of American history.

DREW, Mrs Louisa (Lane).

Autobiographical sketch, with an introduction by her son, John Drew, and biographical notes by Douglas Taylor. 1899.....92 D821

"Little more than a bare outline of Mrs. Drew's professional career, with dates of her different engagements, the names of the characters in which she appeared, and the briefest references to the many distinguished players with whom she was associated at different times... Nevertheless, the book is worth reading as an illustration of the sort of apprenticeship which the really skilled actors of the past were compelled to serve, and is rendered additionally attractive by a number of excellent portraits." Nation, 1899.

DREXEL, Anthony Joseph.

Drexel institute, Philadelphia. Service in memory of Anthony J. Drexel, founder of Drexel institute, held Jan. 20, 1894. 1896.....92 D822d

The memorial address was by Bishop Potter.

DREYFUS, Alfred.

Five years of my life, 1894–1899. 1901.....92 D823f

Covers the time of his captivity on Devil's island.

"Almost entirely confined to extracts from the letters of Capt. Dreyfus to his wife and of Madame Dreyfus to her husband...Carefully excludes everything which bears upon what is known as 'the case' itself." Athenæum, 1901.

Letters of Captain Dreyfus to his wife. 1899.....92 D823

Cover the period from Dec. 5, 1894, to Feb. 14, 1898, and contain the only defense which Dreyfus has made refuting the calumny that his married life was not what it should have been. They are dated from the prisons of Cherche-Midi and La Santé, from Saint Martin de Ré, and from Devil's island. There is an introduction, summing up the Dreyfus case, by Walter Littlefield.

Barlow, George. History of the Dreyfus case, from the arrest of Captain Dreyfus, Oct. 1894 up to the flight of Esterhazy in Sept. 1898. 1899.....92 D823b

The author firmly believes in the innocence of both Dreyfus and Picquart, shows the entire improbability that Dreyfus ever made any confession of guilt, pays a high tribute to M. Zola and condemns the conduct of M. Cavaignac.

Conybeare, Frederick Cornwallis. The Dreyfus case. 1898.....92 D823c

"Authorities," p.7–10.

"Catalogue of Dürer's works," p.220–315.

"The account of the life and works of Dürer occupies only 193 small pages of large print. It is a vigorous and sympathetic biography of a great artist, who was also a worthy man and who lived a somewhat eventful life. It includes long extracts from the journal which Dürer kept during his journey to the Netherlands...For the general reader, not specially occupied with German art or with print collecting, this is the best life of Dürer." Russell Sturgis, 1897.

Thausing, Moriz. Albert Dürer; his life and works. 2v. 1882. .....92 D875t

DWIGHT, John Sullivan.

Cooke, George Willis. John Sullivan Dwight, Brook-Farmer, editor and critic of music; a biography. 1898..92 D977c

"He knew most of the choice spirits of his time, and enjoyed both their esteem and their love. The story of his life is thus deeply rooted in all that was noblest and best in mid-century New England, and the associations evoked by its pages are indeed various. This extra-musical interest is so great that the book will find as many readers among those who do not care for the art...as among those who do." Dial, 1899.

"A very curious and interesting account of the achievements of Joseph C. Dylks, who appeared for the first time, no one knew how or whence, at a meeting of the Ohio Methodists in the open air; he laid claim to extraordinary physical and spiritual powers...The delusion of which it treats, is extraordinary in its nature, and the story is instructive and significant, as an example of the credulity of a comparatively educated and intelligent people." Thomson's Bibliography of Ohio.

EASTLAKE, Elizabeth (Rigby), lady.

Journals and correspondence. 2v. 1895.....92 E184

"Lady Eastlake (1809–93) wrote much about literature and art, and expressed in her journals and letters many opinions on politics. Time has changed many of her judgments; yet they are still worth attention. She was a woman of great ability and much culture; she lived among well-born, clever, and well-informed people." Spectator, 1896.

EASTWICK, Capt. Robert William.

Master mariner; being his life and adventures. 1891. (Adventure series.).....92 E186

Narrative dictated by Eastwick (1772–1865) in his blind old age.

"He went to sea as an apprentice in the whaling trade...had a brief experience of a man-of-war as a pressed man; sailed much in the East Indies, both for the Company and private employers...was a prisoner on board the Forte when she was captured by the Sybille in the famous night action; he made and lost several fortunes in those days of war freights and French privateers, was in several shipwrecks, saw the mutiny of the Irish political convicts at Sydney." Saturday review, 1891.

EBERS, Georg.

Die geschichte meines lebens. 1893.....92 E218g

Story of my life. 1893.....92 E218

Born in Berlin in 1837, Dr Ebers has become well known as a novelist and Egyptologist, both in his own country and among English-speaking people. His autobiography, which closes with the completion of his first novel, gives a touching retrospect of his childhood, an account of his gymnasium and university career, and a description of the famous Keilhau school (founded by Froebel), its methods and ideals. There is much incidental portraiture and entertaining reminiscence.

Concise, popular biography.

EDWARD III, king of England.

Mackinnon, James. History of Edward the Third, (1327–1377). 1900 ..... 92 E3132m
"The history of Edward III. is practically that of England for half a century and embraces that of Scotland, France, the Low Countries, and Spain, in a more limited degree. The work is, therefore, more than a biography; it is a history of an important and dramatic epoch, as influenced and overshadowed by the extraordinary man who was the motive power of the activity of his age." Preface.

EDWARD VII, king of England.

Belloc, Marie Adelaide, afterward Mrs Lowndes. H. R. H. the prince of Wales; an account of his career. 1898.... 92 E3133l

EDWARDS, Matilda Betham-.

Anglo-French reminiscences, 1875–1899. 1900 ..... 92 E3182a
"Has studied France long and sympathetically, and writes well of what she has seen; but her pages are pervaded by a vehement spirit of religious animosity...Her picture of Gambetta, whom she twice heard address a meeting, is striking. But the more interesting things are her detailed accounts of less famous persons, of M. Guépin of Nantes, a colleague in 1830 of Ledru-Rollin and Louis Blanc, a pioneer of democracy among the Bretons...and of Mr. Holden, the English Wesleyan manufacturer of Reims, to whom after the war of 1870 was unanimously voted the Legion of Honour...But the most interesting thing of all in the book is the study of the French soldier." Spectator, 1900.

Reminiscences. 1898.....92 E3182

Recollections of the odd manners and customs in Suffolk during the author's childhood, of the beginnings of her literary career, of her life abroad, particularly in Weimar, where she knew Liszt and the last of the Goethe family. George Eliot she knew well, and there are innumerable amusing anecdotes of other distinguished people.

ELIOT, George, (pseud. of Mrs Mary Ann (Evans) Cross).

Life, as related in her letters and journals; ed. by J. W. Cross. 3v.....92 E476

"Setting aside the introductory chapter, a few closing pages of deep interest, and a rare occasional paragraph, we find George Eliot's life here recorded by herself from her nineteenth year until three days before her death...We are shown George Eliot not as an Olympian, but human...an eager, sensitive, frail, dependent woman...Mr. Cross has done his work...with admirable judgment, fine feeling, and dignified self-subordination to his theme." Academy, 1885.

Beesly, Edward Spencer. Queen Elizabeth. 1892. (Twelve English statesmen.).....92 E485b

We hear little of Elizabeth as a woman or of domestic affairs, most of the book being given to a study of her foreign policy.

ELIZABETH AMÉLIE EUGÉNIE, empress of Austria.

[Owen, Mrs Marguerite (du Plantz) Cunliffe-.] Martyrdom of an empress [Elizabeth of Austria]. 1899.....92 E48520

The writer is violently prejudiced in favor of the empress and blind to the fact that her misguided eulogies but strengthen the conclusion she so earnestly seeks to deny,—that all Elizabeth's troubles were indirectly of her own making. In seeking to vindicate Elizabeth's character she libels the emperor and other distinguished people. Like many other books which would have been better unwritten, this volume throws a good deal of light upon history and, in the main, is doubtless genuine, though often misleading and inaccurate.

Bibliography, p.5–6.

"Elizabeth Farnese took her place on the throne of Spain at the end of the year 1714...Mr. Armstrong's book...is practically a political, or rather, diplomatic study of the times when this woman occupied the attention of all Europe...An original, well-arranged, and well-written monograph on a person, and of a period, which few but specialists are able to focus for themselves. In the introduction, there is a valuable discussion of the sources from which materials have been drawn, including those still unedited." Spectator, 1892.

"His aim is to make clear the political history of the days which saw the rise of the present royal house of Prussia, and to winnow out the truth from the baffling and confused mass of falsehood. In this he succeeds admirably...the portrait of Empress Elizabeth is imbued with all the vivacity and fascination with which her contemporaries credited her." Nation, 1900.

History of the life of Thomas Ellwood; or, An account of his birth, education, etc.; ed. by C. G. Crump. 1900.....92 E538

"Although the passages referring to Milton are the gems of Ellwood's autobiography, the whole is worth reading as a picture of the early Quakers and of the times they lived in." Athenæum, 1900.

Herbert of Cherbury, Edward Herbert, baron. Lives of Lord Herbert of Cherbury and Thomas Ellwood, with essays by W. D. Howells. 1877. (Autobiographic series.) 92 H461

"The autobiography of Lord Herbert is of a style so charming, and of a manner and matter so singularly characteristic of his order, age, and nation, that one might easily believe it written by some skilful student of the period...As you read, you cannot help thinking...that Thackeray himself could not have done it better, if he had been minded to portray a gentleman of the first James's time. Yet this picture, so frank, so boldly colored, so full of the very life of a young English noble, is one of the most remarkable instances of self-portraiture in any language ...A rare sincerity marks the whole memoir, and gives it the grace of an antique simplicity...Herbert, not only as James's ambassador to Louis XIII., but as a sort of soldier of fortune in the Low Countries, and a peaceful traveller in Italy, saw everything that was best worth seeing in the Europe of his day." W. D. Howells, in introduction.

The other autobiography included in this volume is that of a "sturdy Quaker, good and beautiful, with a simple righteousness that comforts and strengthens the soul."

"Prof. Emerton is necessitated by the series of which his volume is one, to treat most fully of Erasmus as related to the Reformation, but he has been led into no one-sided biography. The inclusion of Erasmus among the 'Heroes of the Reformation' he holds to be justified not merely on account of the great scholar's 'heroism of persistent work and cheerful endurance,' but of his immense services in preparing the way for reform by illuminating and unlocking the sources of Christian thought, by insistence 'upon the principle of a sound, sane, reasonable, individual judgment,' and by a sense of the 'essential rightness of what is natural.'" Nation, 1899.

FARADAY, Michael, & Schönbein, C. F.

Letters, 1836–1862, with notes, comments and references to contemporary letters; ed. by G. W. A. Kahlbaum and F. V. Darbishire. 1899.....92 F229

"We have now the whole correspondence brought together chronologically, the letters being left intact as originally written, and made more valuable by a most complete series of explanatory notes giving references to the papers alluded to, as well as short biographical notices of people mentioned in the correspondence. The care and trouble which has been bestowed upon this most essential adjunct to a set of letters containing references to memoirs which for us represent the scientific literature of a former generation, has thus resulted in a distinct contribution to the history of science, and the editors have laid all workers in the domains of physics and chemistry under a debt of obligation." Nature, 1900.

FIRTH, Frank Russell.

Young engineer; memoir of Frank Russell Firth, with a sketch of the life of Otis Everett Allen. 1874 ..... 92 F521y

Short memoir, written for private circulation, with an introduction by Edward Everett Hale, commending as an example the life of the young civil engineer engaged in railway construction in Kansas and Nebraska, 1868–72.

FITHIAN, Philip Vickers.

Journal and letters, 1767–1774; student at Princeton college, 1770–72, tutor at Nomini hall in Virginia, 1773–74; ed. for the Princeton historical association by J. R. Williams. 1900 ..... 92 F554

Fithian was born in 1747 and was a student at Princeton with Burr and Madison and Henry Lee. He gives a graphic account of his life in Virginia as tutor in the household of Robert Carter of Nomini hall during the interesting period just before the Revolution. He was a frequent guest of the Lees of Stratford and Lee hall, the Turbervilles, the Washingtons of Bushfield and other famous families. The notes give much historical and genealogical information about these families.

FITZGERALD, Edward.

Letters to Fanny Kemble, 1871–1883. 1895 ..... 92 F572

More letters; ed. by W. A. Wright. 1901 ..... 92 F572m

These letters belong with the other two volumes of "Letters" and the "Letters to Fanny Kemble." They have the same progressive dates and they cover similar subjects.

The "Letters" will be found in v.1 of his "Letters and literary remains," call number 828 F57 v.1.

"Fitzgerald's letters are...among the best of their kind. They are real letters, written by the most modest of men, with no reputation in his own day and without any suspicion of posthumous honors...they are also candid letters, expressing the actual opinions he had formed on matters of literature and art...above all, they are the letters of a master of style." Spectator, 1902.

Glyde, John. Life of Edward Fitz-Gerald, with an introduction by Edward Clodd. 1900 ..... 92 F572g

Bibliography of the versions and editions of the Rubáiyát of Omar Khayyám, by Edward Fitzgerald, and others, p.341–348; bibliography of articles in reviews and magazines relating to Fitzgerald and Omar, p.349–352.

English poet and translator (1809–83), best known by his rendering of the "Rubáiyát" of Omar Khayyám. His "Letters," published in 1894, tell us in such a charmingly unaffected way just what we want to know of his singularly quiet and uneventful life, that a formal biography is almost needless, but there are some things in Mr Glyde's "Life" which the lovers of the letters may like to note.

FOUCHÉ, Joseph, duc d'Otrante.

Memoirs. 1894.....92 F827

These memoirs of the minister of police under Napoleon, though declared by his family to be forgeries, are undoubtedly founded on genuine documents.

FOWLER, Sir John.

Mackay, Thomas. Life of Sir John Fowler, engineer. 1900. .....92 F848m

"Sir John Fowler must be reckoned one of the grand old men of the Victorian era, for his work began before her Majesty's accession to the throne, and he died the year after the Diamond Jubilee, being then more than 80 years old. He saw the great railway boom and collapse of the later 'forties,' he took the lion's share in the creation of the Metropolitan Railway, and crowned a life's work with the great Firth of Forth bridge in conjunction with Sir Benjamin Baker." Spectator, 1900.

FOX, Caroline.

Memories of old friends; extracts from journals and letters, from 1835 to 1871; ed. by H. N. Pym. 2v. 1882.....92 F8512

Memoir, v.1, p.13–31.

John Stuart Mill and John Sterling were among her intimate friends, and her journal owes its value to her association with many distinguished persons.

"Indicates the gentle, spiritual, and at the same time intellectual and accomplished woman, and it will always be valued as a highly important illustration of the most characteristic thought of the Victorian era." Dictionary of national biography.

FOX, Charles James.

Russell, John, earl. Memorials and correspondence of Charles James Fox. 4v. 1853–57.....92 F851r

The third Lord Holland began the collection of the material, consisting of letters, notices and anecdotes from contemporary journals and other unpublished manuscripts, and of recollections of Fox's contemporaries, but Lord John Russell prepared the work for the press. There is a great amount of valuable and interesting material, but the arrangement is sometimes rather intricate.

Trevelyan, Sir George Otto. Early history of Charles James Fox. [1880.].....92 F851t

"Although this volume purports to be only a history of a small part of the life of a single person, yet its historical importance is such as to entitle it to the student's most careful consideration...It is the best picture that has ever been drawn of the transition from the old methods of statesmanship to the new. The author holds that Fox was the first great statesman of the modern school...It is an admirable specimen of literary workmanship, and its charming pages are as instructive as they are fascinating." C. K. Adams.

The life of Fox, between 1774 and 1782, is so inextricably interwoven with the history of the American revolution that Trevelyan has treated this part of Fox's career in his "American revolution," 973.3 T73.

Hiltl, Georg. Unser Fritz, deutscher kaiser und könig von Preussen. [1890.] 92 F8952h Popular biography, recommended in Germany for school and public libraries.

Poschinger, Frau Margaretha von. Life of the emperor Frederick; ed. fr. the German, with an introduction by Sidney Whitman. 1901 ..... 92 F8952p Frederick III, son of the emperor William I. Includes conversations, letters and personalia of monarchs, soldiers, statesmen and men of letters during the last half of the 19th century.

FREEMAN, Edward Augustus.

Stephens, William Richard Wood, dean. Life and letters of Edward A. Freeman. 2v. 1895 ..... 92 F911s
"What he was, moreover, as host, as guest, as fellow traveller—in each situation distinguished as he was by strong and sometimes grotesque characteristics—it might have interested some to have been told in greater fulness. But as it stands, this biography deserves the very highest praise, as a faithful and sympathetic picture of one of the greatest of English historians—a man much admired, somewhat feared, and too little understood." Academy, 1895.

FRÉMONT, Gen. John Charles.

Schmucker, Samuel Mosheim. Life of Col. John Charles Fremont, and his narrative of explorations and adventures in Kansas, Nebraska, Oregon and California. 1856. ..... r92 F922s Short biography, written for the campaign of 1856. Frémont's narrative occupies most of the book.
"Frémont's journal is written in a graphic style, bearing evidence of literal accuracy in all its statements, and yet in many parts reading like a romance." American journal of science, 1847.

FRENEAU, Philip.

Austin, Mary S. Philip Freneau, the poet of the Revolution; a history of his life and times; ed. by H. K. Vreeland. 1901 ..... 92 F929a

The account of Freneau's life is much encumbered with the general history of the time, and only one chapter is given to him as an author.

FREYTAG, Gustav.

Erinnerungen aus meinem leben, und Gedichte. 1896 .... 92 F945e

Reminiscences of my life; tr. fr. the German by Katharine Chetwynd. 2v. 1890 ..... 92 F945

Admirers of the German author will be interested in what he says of his literary friends, and of "Debit and credit" and his other writings.

FRÖBEL, Friedrich.

Autobiography; tr. and annotated by Emilie Michaelis and H. K. Moore. 1896 ..... 92 F961

Consists of a letter written to the duke of Meiningen in 1827 and one to the philosopher Krause in 1828 in which he tells the story of the perplexities and difficulties of his early life.

"Though of very great value, was not written till Froebel was forty-five years of age, and some allowance must be made for this when we are considering what he says about his earliest years." Bowen's Fröbel.

Bowen, Herbert Courthope. Froebel and education by self-activity. 1893. (Great educators.) 92 F961b

Bibliography, p.197–201.

"A book that is a real addition to Fröbel literature." W. T. Harris, in Bibliography of education.

Marenholtz-Bülow, Bertha, freiin von. Reminiscences of Friedrich Froebel; tr. by Mrs Horace Mann, with a sketch of the life of Froebel by Emily Shirreff. 1892 .. 92 F961m

A graphic account of the last years of Froebel's life; written by the gifted woman through whom he first obtained recognition by the leading educators of Germany.

Snider, Denton Jaques. Life of Frederick Froebel, founder of the kindergarten. 1900 ..... 92 F961s

Fröbel's life, from the standpoint of the author, the well-known lecturer and founder of the Chicago kindergarten college, was from beginning to end an illustration of his own principle of the unfolding of the child.

FROISSART, Jean.

Robinson, Agnes Mary Frances, afterward Mme Darmesteter, afterward Mme Duclaux. Froissart; tr. by E. F. Poynter. 1895 ..... 92 F963r

So little is known of the facts of Froissart's life that it is by no means easy to write the story of it, but Madame Darmesteter has very skilfully used both the old material and some which has been discovered recently. Being herself both historian and poet she is just the one to rightly estimate Froissart, who was so essentially both poet and historian.

FROMENTIN, Eugène.

Gonse, Louis. Eugène Fromentin, peintre et écrivain; ouvrage augmenté de Notes d'un voyage en Égypte, et d'autres notes et morceaux inédits de Fromentin. 1881. ..... q92 F964g

"Although mainly a life of Fromentin, contains long passages of his critical work." Russell Sturgis.

Illustrated.

FROUDE, James Anthony.

Wilson, David. Mr Froude and Carlyle. 1898.....92 C214w

A defense of Carlyle, introductory to a proposed biography.

FRY, Mrs Elizabeth (Gurney).

Pitman, Mrs Emma Raymond. Elizabeth Fry. 1892. (Famous women.).....92 F975p

English philanthropist and minister of the Society of Friends. She was especially noted as a promoter of prison reform in the first half of the 19th century.

"She tells us what Mrs. Fry did (and it was a great work) but not what she was." Nation, 1884.

FULLER, Margaret, afterward marchesa d'Ossoli.

Higginson, Thomas Wentworth. Margaret Fuller Ossoli. 1891. (American men of letters.).....92 F983hi

List of Margaret Fuller's works, p.315–318.

Just, sympathetic and sincere biography of one of the most interesting Americans of her period. Mr Higginson describes her as "a woman whose aims were high and whose services great; one whose intellect was uncommon, whose activity incessant, whose life varied, and whose death dramatic."

Howe, Mrs Julia (Ward). Margaret Fuller. 1883. (Famous women.).....92 F983h

An admirable study. Gives emphasis to culture as the keynote to Margaret Fuller's career.

FULTON, Robert.

Reigart, J. Franklin. Life of Robert Fulton. 1856....r92 F986r

Curious and interesting illustrations, some of them reproducing Fulton's paintings and drawings.

Thurston, Robert Henry. Robert Fulton. 1891. (Makers of America.).....92 F986t

Short biography, including a general sketch of steam-navigation before Fulton and since his time.

GAINE, Hugh.

Journals of Hugh Gaine, printer; ed. by P. L. Ford. 2v. 1902. .....qr92 G139

v.1. Biography and bibliography.

v.2. Journals and letters.

Gaine (1726?–1807) was a Scotch-Irish printer and bookseller. In 1752 he established in New York a weekly publication called the "Mercury." At the close of the Revolutionary war, he discontinued the publication of his paper and confined himself to the printing and bookselling business. His journals here printed cover two years of the French and Indian war, five years of the Revolutionary war and two years of John Adams's presidency. They contain many minute details of interest to both the general and local historian.

GAINSBOROUGH, Thomas.

Fulcher, George Williams. Life of Thomas Gainsborough. 1856. .....92 G141f

Biography with no criticism.

"Represents much careful original research, and is written in a terse scholarly style." Dictionary of national biography.

GALLAND, Pierre Victor. See Artists, p.1271.

GALLATIN, Albert.

Adams, Henry, *b.*1838. Life of Albert Gallatin. 1879..qr92 G149a

With a biographical letter by the author.

"A volume designed to supply historians with some of the materials for the history of a period as yet only imperfectly understood. For the financial history of the years between 1801 and 1829 the volume is of importance only second to that of Gallatin's works. It is not a biography written for popular use, but rather a narrative designed to assist the most thoughtful student." C. K. Adams.

Stevens, John Austin. Albert Gallatin. 1892. (American statesmen.) 92 G149s

The same. 1899. (American statesmen.) r92 G149s1

Carefully prepared biography of the man who chiefly influenced United States financial policy during the first 30 years of national history.

GALLENGA, Antonio, (pseud. Luigi Mariotti).

Episodes of my second life. 2v. 1884 ..... 92 G152

v.1. American experiences.
v.2. English experiences.

The author emigrated from Italy to America in 1836. From this important step, he dates the episodes of his life in a strange land.

GALLITZIN, Demetrius Augustine, prince.

Heyden, Thomas. Memoir on the life and character of Prince Demetrius A. de Gallitzin. 1869 ..... 92 G154h Gallitzin (1770–1841) was an early missionary of the Roman Catholic church in Pennsylvania, and founder of Loretto.

GAMBETTA, Léon Michel.

Marzials, Sir Frank Thomas. Life of Léon Gambetta. 1890. (Statesmen series.) 92 G163m

Short sketch of the French orator and statesman (1838–82).

GARDINER, William.

Music and friends. 3v. 1838–53 ..... r92 G179

English manufacturer and amateur of music (1770–1853), who did much to introduce the works of Beethoven, Mozart and Haydn to the English public, and had many friends among leading musicians. His recollections give a lively account of life in his native town of Leicester, his career and his friends.

GARFIELD, James Abram.

Blaine, James Gillespie. James A. Garfield; memorial address, Feb. 27, 1882. 1882 ..... qr92 G184b

Short sketch of the career of the twentieth president of the United States.

GARIBALDI, Gen. Giuseppe.

Autobiography; tr. by A. Werner. 3v. 1889 ..... 92 G185

The same; ed. by Alexandre Dumas, tr. by William Robson. 3v. 1889 ..... r92 G185

"Throughout his eventful and romantic career, Garibaldi had years of comparative inaction, at least as respects public life...During those years he wrote the first part of his Memoirs, comprising his youth, his joining the Mazzinian uprising in Piedmont, his exile to South America, his ten years' guerilla warfare in that country, and the prominent part he took in the Italian revolution of 1848–49. This he did not publish at the time; but, after the eventful epochs of the Franco-Italian war against Austria, the Sicilian uprising against the Bourbons of Naples led by him and his one thousand red-shirted volunteers...and, finally, the Franco-Prussian war...Garibaldi, on retiring to his island home at Caprera, corrected and modified the first portion, and wrote the remainder without books or documents, or any assistance save his own memory...Space will not allow us to comment on Mme. Mario's Supplement [v.3 of the 1889 edition], except to say that it...is...the most thorough and authoritative addition to Garibaldi's memoirs that has yet been published." Nation, 1889.

Life written by himself, with sketches of his companions in arms; tr. by Theodore Dwight. 1859 ..... 92 G185l

Includes his life to the end of the revolution of 1848–49.

GARRICK, David.

Davies, Thomas, 1712–85. Memoirs of the life of David

Garrick, with anecdotes of his theatrical contemporaries, the whole forming a history of the stage. 2v. 1784..r92 G194d

By a friend and contemporary of Garrick. Source of much of the information concerning him.

Fitzgerald, Percy. Life of David Garrick. 2v. 1868....92 G194f

Contains much interesting and valuable information, but is badly arranged.

GARRISON, William Lloyd.

Garrison, Wendell Phillips, & Francis Jackson. William Lloyd Garrison. 4v. 1885–89.....92 G195g

Many portraits.

"Although the treatise...is primarily a biography, and a very full and minute one, and although it is written with the reverential admiration of children rather than from the point of view of a dispassionate and critical historian, it is also virtually a history of the anti-slavery struggle. Seldom has a cause and a contest been more closely associated with the life of one man than in the case of abolition and Garrison." James Bryce, in English historical review, 1886.

Smith, Goldwin. The moral crusader, William Lloyd Garrison. 1892.....92 G195s

In the preface the author acknowledges his indebtedness for his facts to the life of Mr Garrison by his children. The opinions are formed from his own point of view, that of an Anglo-Canadian who sympathized with the American friends of the antislavery cause.

GASCOIGNE, George.

Schelling, Felix Emmanuel. Life and writings of George Gascoigne, with three poems heretofore not reprinted. (In Pennsylvania university. Publications; series in philology and literature, v.2, no.4.).....qr805 P39 v.2, pt.4

Bibliography, p.117–123.

Whetstone, George. A remembraunce of the wel imployed life & godly end of G. Gascoigne. 1888. (Aungervyle society. Reprints.).....r92 G213w Commemorates in verse the death of the poet in 1577. This is a reprint of a unique copy in the Bodleian library.

GASPARIN, Agénor Étienne, comte de.

Borel, Thomas. Count Agénor de Gasparin. 1881.....92 G217b

An early advocate of the enfranchisement of the negroes, who from the beginning of the Civil war warmly supported our government, doing much to influence public opinion in Europe in our favor.

GASS, Patrick.

Jacob, J. G. Life and times of Patrick Gass, with his journal of the expedition under Lewis and Clarke, condensed. 1859.....r92 G218j Gass (1771–1870) was a sergeant in the army, an efficient and intelligent man of little education, detailed to accompany the Lewis and Clark expedition 1804–6. This memoir is by a personal acquaintance. Contains also a sketch of the early history of western Pennsylvania.

GATES, Adelia.

Orpen, Mrs Adela Elizabeth R. Chronicles of the Sid; or, The life and travels of Adelia Gates. [1893.].....92 G2320

"Sid," the author tells us, means lady or mistress, and was the title by which Miss Gates was known in the Sahara. Her travels extended over Italy, the Sahara, the Holy Land, the North cape and Iceland.

GAVARD, Charles.

A diplomat in London; letters and notes, 1871–1877. 1897..92 G2482

"Notwithstanding the slovenliness of the translation, this book is very entertaining, particularly for its comments on English life, manners and tastes...The diplomatic notes are of much interest, as M. Gavard, though only an attaché of the French Embassy at London, was more than once, from the change of ministers, obliged to act as sole representative of France at the English Court." Critic, 1897.

GAVESTON, Piers, earl of Cornwall.

Dodge, Walter Phelps. Piers Gaveston; a chapter of constitutional history. 1899.....92 G248d Piers Gaveston was the companion and favorite of Edward II of England. His influence over the king was of the worst and he was especially disliked by the barons, whom he finally provoked to a rising, in the course of which he was captured and executed.

"Presents no clear image of the man, any more that it presents a clear picture of the times...Written in a jerky style, and though...it contains a good deal of hitherto inaccessible information...it is not interesting reading." Spectator, 1899.

GEARY, John White.

Pennsylvania—General assembly. Memorial addresses on the death of Gov. John W. Geary, delivered in the Senate and House of representatives, Feb. 1873. 1873..qr92 G261p

GERRY, Elbridge.

Austin, James Trecothick. Life of Elbridge Gerry, with contemporary letters. v.2. 1829.....r92 G324a v.2. From the close of the American revolution.

"The book is not one of great inherent merits; but a sympathetic view of Gerry's life while he was governor of Massachusetts and Vice-President of the United States, as well as the acknowledged leader of the opposition to New England Federalism, is not without considerable importance." C. K. Adams.

GHIRLANDAJO, Domenico. See Artists, p.1278.

GIBBON, Edward.

Autobiographies; ed. by John Murray. 1896.....92 G361a

Contains the six sketches of his life left by Gibbon from which the received text of his "Autobiography" was compiled by his friend and literary executor, Lord Sheffield.

Autobiography, with an essay by W. D. Howells. 1895. (Autobiographic series.).....92 G361au

"All critics agree that Gibbon's autobiography is a model in its way. Every autobiography is interesting...But Gibbon's has the very rare and peculiar charm of recording complete success...We may probably have known of men...who might be compared to Gibbon in natural endowments, and who have left nothing but fragments...It is only when the right player comes, and the right cards are judiciously dealt to him by fortune that the great successes can be accomplished." Stephen's Studies of a biographer.

Private letters, 1753–1794; ed. by R. E. Prothero. 2v. 1896..92 G361p

This collection of correspondence practically covers the whole of Gibbon's life, and most of the letters now appear for the first time.

GLANVILL, Joseph.

Greenslet, Ferris. Joseph Glanvill; a study in English thought and letters of the 17th century. 1900. (Columbia university. Studies in English, v.1.).....92 G461g
Contents: Sketch of English thought, 1579–1660. — The Cambridge Platonists.—Glanvill's life and the order of his writings.—The philosophy of Glanvill.—Latitudinarian theology.—Ghost stories and witchcraft.—Glanvill as a man of letters.—Chronological list of Glanvill's publications.—Principal critical notices of Glanvill.—Writings of the Cambridge Platonists.

English divine, philosopher and voluminous writer, whose most important work is the "Vanity of dogmatizing" in which he attacks the Aristotelian philosophy.

"Joseph Glanvill was that fashionable divine and Fellow of the Royal Society at whose house in Bath our friend Samuel Pepys, four years his senior, used to sit up into the small hours with fair Mistress Pennington...Dr. Greenslet has made a diligent study of his subject, and has put into a compact and entertaining form all that ordinary readers, including students of philosophy and of literature, will generally be particular to know about Glanvill." Nation, 1900.

GLENDOWER, Owen.

Bradley, Arthur Granville. Owen Glyndwr and the last struggle for Welsh independence, with a brief sketch of Welsh history. 1901. (Heroes of the nations.)....92 G486b

Owen Glendower (1359?–1415?), lord of Glyndwr and a great national hero of Wales, was the last native who assumed the title of prince of Wales and the leader of the only formidable attempt made by the Welsh to regain their freedom after their subjugation by Edward I.

GOETHE, Johann Wolfgang von.

Autobiography and annals; tr. by John Oxenford. 2v. 1884–91. .....92 G559

The autobiography, begun in 1810, tells the story of the poet's life down to the time of his settlement in Weimar in 1775. The annals continue it to 1819.

"Has great charm, but the charm is scarcely, if at all, the kind which belongs to Autobiography. Its calm artistic delineation of men, scenes and influences...however we may prize them, only approximate to Autobiography; left as they are without the precise detail, and above all without the direct eloquent egotism which constitutes the value and charm of such works." Lewes's Life of Goethe.

Boyhood and youth of Goethe; being books I to XI of the Autobiography; tr. fr. the German by John Oxenford. 2v. 92 G559o

Letters to Zelter, with extracts from those of Zelter to Goethe; tr. by A. D. Coleridge. 1887.....r92 G559g

Zelter was a Berlin musician, the teacher of Mendelssohn, "the restorer of Bach to the Germans." He set many of Goethe's songs to music, was one of his most devoted admirers and from these letters, which cover the widest range of topics, it is evident that Goethe had a real affection for him.

Eckermann was Goethe's private secretary from about 1823. The "Conversations" include the period 1822–32.

"Present a most striking picture of Goethe in old age, and it is impossible to read them without feeling that they bring us into contact with an intellect and character of superb quality. Almost every subject interests Goethe as he is here revealed." Sime's Life of Goethe.

Grimm, Herman. Life and times of Goethe; tr. by S. H. Adams. 1880. .....92 G559g

"Gives a more natural and human delineation of Goethe than any other biography. Nothwithstanding prolixity and eulogy the best single work on Goethe up to this time for old and young." Nation, 1881.

Lewes, George Henry. Life and works of Goethe, with sketches of his age and contemporaries. 2v. 1856....92 G559le

"Has become the standard work on the subject...It shows his characteristic merits of clear good sense, independent criticism, and unflagging vivacity. Goethe's idolaters were of course dissatisfied, and Lewes's general prepossession against German style and dislike of the mystic and allegorical may disqualify him for adequate appreciation of some aspects of Goethe's genius. The book, however, has merits which have seldom been equalled in similar work, and it retains its position in our literature." Dictionary of national biography.

Lewes, George Henry. Story of Goethe's life. 1894.....92 G559l

Abridged from his "Life and works of Goethe."

Sime, James. Life of Johann Wolfgang Goethe. 1888. (Great writers.).....92 G559s

Bibliography, apx. p.1–44.

Convenient popular biography, too brief for any adequate estimate of Goethe's work.

GOLDONI, Carlo.

Memoirs; tr. fr. the French by John Black, with an essay by W. D. Howells. 1877. (Autobiographic series.)....92 G585

Goldoni (1707–93), famous Italian comedy-writer and the founder of modern Italian comedy. The "Memoirs" are interesting and valuable as revealing the life of the author, and presenting a faithful picture of Italian, particularly Venetian, life of the 18th century.

GOLDSMITH, Oliver.

Gordon, Ernest Barron. Adoniram Judson Gordon, with letters and extracts from his sermons. 1896.....92 G6562g Baptist clergyman, pastor of the Clarendon street church in Boston, 1869–95.

GORDON, Gen. Charles George.

Gordon in central Africa, 1874–1879; from original letters and documents; ed. by G. B. Hill. 1899.....92 G656hi

In China, at the head of the "ever-victorious army," Gordon suppressed the Tai-ping rebellion; in central Africa, in the service of the Egyptian khedive, he gave himself to the extermination of the slave-trade in the Sudan. These letters and diaries cover the period of his career in Egypt. The "Story of Chinese Gordon" by A. E. Hake (92 G656h) covers the whole period of Gordon's life.

Journals at Kartoum, introduction and notes by A. E. Hake. 1895.....92 G656 Tells the story of the siege from Sept. 10–Dec. 14, 1884.

GOZZI, Carlo, conte.
Memoirs; tr. by J. A. Symonds, with essays on Italian impromptu comedy, Gozzi's life, the dramatic fables and Pietro Longhi, by the translator. 2v. 1890.....92 G761
"Books used and referred to in this work," v.1, p.13–14.
This 18th century Venetian dramatist and opponent of Goldoni possessed unusual powers of observation and description and a keen sense of humor and had a very varied experience of life. His "Memoirs" deal with family affairs, discuss fashion, philosophy, treat in great detail of actors and acting, give lively portraits of all classes, in short enable us to study thoroughly Venetian society at the end of the 18th century.

GRADY, Henry Woodfin.
Harris, Joel Chandler, ed. Life of Henry W. Grady, including his writings and speeches. 1890.....92 G764h
Mr Grady was well known by his newspaper work, especially on the Atlanta (Georgia) Constitution, but even better known by his speeches, two famous ones being "The new South," delivered in New York, and "The race problem," which was delivered in Boston just before his death. A man of fine character, an eloquent orator and a writer of much ability, he was a great power in the South.

GRANT, Gen. Ulysses Simpson.
Letters to a friend [E. B. Washburne], 1861–1880, with introduction and notes by J. G. Wilson. 1897.....92 G789l
This series of letters begins during the first year of the war and continues almost uninterruptedly till Gen. Grant's return from his tour round the world. Many are dated from famous battlefields, and others contain his opinions upon men and affairs in America and the foreign countries he visited.
Personal memoirs. 2v. 1885–86.....92 G789
The same. 2v. 1895.....92 G789p
"Books, reviews and pamphlets cited in the marginal annotations," v.1, p.18–19.
"Cover the course of the author's life down to the close of the Civil War...The native simplicity and lack of affectation so characteristic of the author are noticeable features of the work." Larned's Literature of American history.

"Unusually accurate and significant portrait." Dial, 1901.
Badeau, Adam. Military history of Ulysses S. Grant. 3v. 1885.....92 G789b Extends from 1861 to 1865.
"The author had a story of the utmost dignity to tell, he possessed exceptional opportunities of knowing it thoroughly, and he has told it well; and this is true in spite of the fact that...[it is] almost an apotheosis of Grant, who is credited with every military virtue and with a large share of the other virtues." Nation, 1868.

Church, William Conant. Ulysses S. Grant and the period of national preservation and reconstruction. 1897. (Heroes of the nations.).....92 G789c
"Such a life as Grant's cannot fail to be interesting, and, although Mr. Church fails as a military critic, his picture of the man of stubborn will, natural modesty, and clear judgment, but without a spark of genius, is distinctly attractive." London Times.
Coppée, Henry. Grant and his campaigns. 1866.....92 G789co
The events of the Civil war form the background for an outline of Grant's career. His plans, their execution and results are presented. Details of tactics are given only when necessary for the comprehension of the general's purposes and achievements. Personal and political history are subordinate to the military side of his life.

Bibliography, p.141–145.

"From first to last this book is incisive and fixes attention, dealing in high praise and the most unsparing criticism. Throughout it is strong in its contrasts, shows Grant's failure before the war and in the Presidency as well as his military success." Larned's Literature of American history.

GRANTHAM, Sir Thomas.

Historical account of some memorable actions, particularly in Virginia. 1882.....r92 G7893

A reprint of the edition of 1716.

British naval commander who took part in several expeditions to the East Indies and to Virginia, where he was present during Bacon's rebellion in 1676.

GRANVILLE, Mary. See DELANY, Mrs Mary (Granville).

GRAY, Asa.

Letters. 2v. 1893.....92 G816

"The letters give special prominence to the...botanical researches and discoveries on which his fame securely rests, but...we shall be mistaken if the charming journals of travel, only lightly freighted with botanical lore, but rich in friendly gossip, botanical and other, do not prove welcome to many a reader who does not know one plant from another." Nation, 1893.

GRAY, Thomas, 1716–71.

Letters, including the correspondence of Gray and Mason; ed. by D. C. Tovey. 2v. 1900–04.....92 G819l

Edited in a most scholarly fashion and, for the first time, presented exactly as the poet wrote them.

"His letters are all but the best in the best age of letter-writing. They are fascinating not only for the tender and affectionate nature shown through a mask of reserve, but for gleams of the genuine humour which Walpole pronounced to be his most natural vein." Dictionary of national biography.

Letters; selected with a biographical notice by H. M. Rideout. 1899.....92 G819

Includes only 55 letters, a small part of his published correspondence.

GRAYDON, Alexander.

Memoirs of a life passed in Pennsylvania. 1811.....r92 G821

"Revolutionary period in Philadelphia and in New York, where the author was a prisoner. Extremely interesting, gossipy memoir... One of the earliest, best known and most used sources for the period and places." Larned's Literature of American history.

GREELEY, Horace.

Recollections of a busy life. 1868.....92 G826

"The personal narrative is well told and full of human interest...and this is no bad example of the egotistical, self-complacent, gossipping, rambling, miscellaneous medley of failures and successes, of joys and sorrows, of opinions, good and bad, and their issues, which we all of us like to read...because 'we have all one human heart.'" Nation, 1868.

Parton, James. Life of Horace Greeley. 1872.....92 G826p

First published in 1855. Supplementary chapters bring it down to Greeley's nomination for the presidency in 1872.

GREEN, John Richard.

Letters; ed. by Leslie Stephen. 1901.....92 G829

"Works of J. R. Green," p.497–503.

So far as possible the editor has limited his own work to narratives explaining Green's position during various periods of his life. These are derived from a fragmentary diary, from autobiographical reminiscences taken down by Mrs Green, and from information collected from friends. Most of the early letters are addressed to Prof. Boyd Dawkins and the majority of the later to E. A. Freeman.

GREENE, Gen. Nathanael.

Greene, Francis Vinton. General Greene. 1893. (Great commanders.) 92 G837gr

Candid and intelligent study of the military operations of the Revolution and Greene's public relations. Valuable to students and interesting to the general reader.

Greene, George Washington. Life of Nathanael Greene. 3v. 1878–90.....92 G837g

"As the most important biography of the ablest subordinate to Washington in the Revolutionary War, these volumes are not without considerable historical value. They throw much light on the military history of the war, especially that portion of it which was under General Greene's immediate direction. The biographer differs in some important particulars from Bancroft; and, therefore, the two works may well be used in common." C. K. Adams.

GREENHALGE, Frederic Thomas.

Nesmith, James Ernest. Life and work of Frederic Thomas Greenhalge. 1897.....92 G843n

Greenhalge (1843–96) was a member of Congress from Massachusetts, 1889–91, and governor of Massachusetts, 1894–96.

"The portrait...is really valuable because it points a moral. Here, on the whole, was the sort of man whom any government should try to ensnare into its service—able, honorable, disinterested, possessed of fibre and sentiment which is apt to go with a sensitive conscience." Nation, 1897.

GREY de WILTON, William Grey, baron.

Grey de Wilton, Arthur Grey, baron. Commentary of the services and charges of William, lord Grey of Wilton, with a memoir of the author and illustrative documents; ed. by Sir P. de M. G. Egerton. 1847. (Camden society. Publications, v.40.).....92 G887

An account of the military achievements of this distinguished general in the reigns of Henry VIII, Edward VI and Mary. The larger portion of the narrative is devoted to the details of the siege of Guisnes, in 1558, of which Grey was at that time the governor.

GRIFFITH, John.

Journal of [his] life, travels and labours in the work of the ministry. 1780.....r92 G895

Griffith (1713–76) was a minister of the Society of Friends who came to Pennsylvania from England in 1726. He spent 1736–47 in visiting Friends' meetings in this country. After his return to England in 1747 he went about preaching in England and Ireland. His journal records only the religious conditions of the time.

GRIMSTON, Mrs Margaret Brunton (Robertson). See KENDAL, Mrs.

GRISWOLD, Rufus Wilmot.

Passages from the correspondence and other papers of Griswold. 1898.....92 G931

Griswold (1815–57) was a journalist and compiler, best known by his works on American literature.

"Contains a more vivid and more intimate view of the atmosphere and state of literature in the early manhood of our important writers, as they proved to be, than is elsewhere to be obtained." Nation, 1898.

GRONOW, Rees Howell.

Reminiscences and recollections; anecdotes of the camp, court, clubs and society, 1810–1860. 2v. 1900.....92 G933

English officer and society "beau" of the first half of the 19th century.

"When he relates his personal experiences, as in his account of the state of Paris in 1815, the condition of society in London in his own time, and the doings of the court of Napoleon III, his testimony is to be relied on, but his second-hand stories and anecdotes of persons whom he did not know are of little value." Dictionary of national biography.

GROS, Antoine Jean, baron.

Delestre, Jean Baptiste. Gros; sa vie et ses ouvrages: 1867. .....q92 G937d

GUÉRIN, Eugénie de.

Journal; ed. by G. S. Trebutien. 2v. 1893.....92 G958j

The history of Eugénie de Guérin and her brother Maurice is left in the form of journals and letters, the most intimate records of their characters and spirits. Eugénie's journal was written for her brother only; during her lifetime no one else ever saw it.

Matthew Arnold says, "Her soul had the same characteristic quality as ...[her brother's], talent,—distinction. To the circle of spirits marked by this rare quality, Maurice and Eugénie de Guérin belong; they will take their place in the sky which these inhabit, and shine close to one another."

Macdowall, H. C. Henry of Guise, and other portraits. 1898. .....92 G967m Contents: Henry of Guise.—Agrippa d'Aubigné.—Catherine of Navarre.
"He writes from considerable knowledge of the original authorities, and he undoubtedly succeeds in expressively delineating some sides of sixteenth-century life in France...Here [in the essay on Agrippa d'Aubigné] Mr. Macdowall has drawn the portrait remarkably well, and he shows a fine taste in letters, as well as an accurate judgment of Henri Quatre, Huguenotism, and his own hero. The third essay is a quiet and pathetic, even charming, sketch of Catherine of Navarre, Henri's unhappy sister." Literature, 1898.

Gail Hamilton's life in letters; ed. by H. A. Dodge. 2v. 1901. .....92 H212

"Books of Gail Hamilton," v.2, p.1077–1083.

In her active and varied career in Washington and in New England she knew well the most famous literary and political people of the last half of the 19th century, and in these letters her faculty of hitting off the characteristics of people she met gives us many entertaining sketches.

HAMLIN, Cyrus.

My life and times. 1893.....92 H221

Dr Hamlin was for many years missionary to Turkey; he also wrote a book called "Among the Turks." From his boyhood on a New England farm to his missionary life in Turkey there is nothing commonplace in his career.

HERBERT, Amabel (Aston), lady.

Stepney, Catherine (Pollok), lady. Memoirs of Lady Russell and Lady Herbert, 1623–1723. 1898.....92 R917s

Rachel, lady Russell, was the wife of that Lord Russell who was beheaded in 1683 on a charge of treason. A woman of fine mind she was her husband's adviser, and even after his death followed public events with keen interest. Lady Herbert was the wife of Sir Edward Herbert, an adherent of the Stuarts. There is an interesting account of her rescue of her husband after the battle of Naseby and their escape to France.

HERBERT of CHERBURY, Edward Herbert, baron.

Lives of Lord Herbert of Cherbury and Thomas Ellwood, with essays by W. D. Howells. 1877. (Autobiographic series.) 92 H461

"The autobiography of Lord Herbert is of a style so charming, and of a manner and matter so singularly characteristic of his order, age, and nation, that one might easily believe it written by some skilful student of the period...As you read, you cannot help thinking...that Thackeray himself could not have done it better, if he had been minded to portray a gentleman of the first James's time. Yet this picture, so frank, so boldly colored, so full of the very life of a young English noble, is one of the most remarkable instances of self-portraiture in any language...A rare sincerity marks the whole memoir, and gives it the grace of an antique simplicity...Herbert, not only as James's ambassador to Louis XIII., but as a sort of soldier of fortune in the Low Countries, and a peaceful traveller in Italy, saw everything that was best worth seeing in the Europe of his day." W. D. Howells, in introduction.

The other autobiography included in this volume is that of a "sturdy Quaker, good and beautiful, with a simple righteousness that comforts and strengthens the soul."

HERSCHEL, Caroline Lucretia.

Herschel, Mrs John, ed. Memoir and correspondence of Caroline Herschel. 1879.....92 H479lh

The memoir, written to preserve for her nephew an account of the life and labors of his father, is the chief source of information concerning Sir William Herschel, whose able and devoted assistant she was.

HERSCHEL, Sir William.

Clerke, Agnes Mary. The Herschels and modern astronomy. 1895. (Century science series.).....92 H479c

"Not the annals of the Herschel family, but rather a series of pictures from the lives of Sir William, Sir John and Caroline, which suffice to present in vivid colors the individuality of brother, sister and son." Science, 1896.

Holden, Edward Singleton. Sir William Herschel. 1881..92 H479h

Bibliography of the writings of Herschel on astronomical subjects, p.215–233.

Account of his life and a careful analysis of his work. Author is himself an astronomer.

Sime, James. William Herschel and his work. 1900. (World's epoch-makers.).....92 H479s Less successful, particularly in its account of Herschel's scientific work, than the biography by Holden (92 H479h).

HIBERNICUS; or, Memoirs of an Irishman now in America; containing an account of the principal events of his life, and interspersed with anecdotes and observations, humourous, political and moral. 1828.....r92 H521

Born in Ireland in 1779, the writer emigrated to America shortly after the famine of 1817. He tells quite fully the story of his youth in Ireland, his misfortunes, his wanderings about in America and his final settling in Kentucky, where misfortune still pursued him, this book being written to eke out his living as a teacher.

Higginson, Thomas Wentworth. Life of Francis Higginson, first minister in the Massachusetts Bay colony and author of "New England's plantation," 1630. 1891. (Makers of America.).....92 H5361h

"The connection of Francis Higginson with the settlement of Massachusetts was so brief and his previous life so unrecorded, that the materials for his biography suffice for a mere outline sketch. Under these necessary limitations Col. Higginson has succeeded in presenting a readable life of his ancestor. He has allowed contemporary documents and the older historians, like Morton and Mather, to tell the story in the main, connecting these excerpts by gracefully written comments." Nation, 1891.

"Fluently written, popular presentment of a great character considered as the central influence of an important epoch." Spectator, 1897.

IVAN IV, czar of Russia, called the Terrible.

Pember, Austen. Ivan the Terrible; his life and times. 1895. .....92 I331p

Sketch of Russia in the 16th century, giving a vivid picture of the singular and horrible career of the czar.

JACKSON, Andrew.

Brown, William Garrott. Andrew Jackson. 1900.....92 J123b

Short biography intended for young people, but also interesting to older readers.

"Rarely impartial account of a career which, as he observes, has always made stanch friends or bitter enemies." Dial, 1901.

Eaton, John Henry. Life of Andrew Jackson; comprising a history of the war in the South, from the commencement of the Creek campaign to the termination of hostilities before New Orleans. 1824.....qr92 J123e

The first four chapters, carrying the narrative nearly through the Creek war, were written by Major John Reid, who was an eye-witness of the events he relates.

Jenkins, John Stilwell. Life and public services of Andrew Jackson, including the most important of his state papers, with the eulogy delivered June 21, 1845 by George Bancroft. 1850.....92 J123j

Most of the work is given to a full account of Jackson's military career.

Parton, James. General Jackson. 1893. (Great commanders.) 92 J123p1

Excellent popular biography; frank criticism tempers an estimate which is in the main favorable.

Parton, James. Life of Andrew Jackson. 3v. 1887–88....92 J123p

List of publications containing information respecting Andrew Jackson, his times and contemporaries, v.1, p.13–25.

"Unquestionably one of the best of Parton's biographies. Jackson's weaknesses are not concealed; on the contrary he is shown to have had serious faults, but, at the same time, to have been honest and interesting, though not at all times wise...Though the book contains much that a severe judgment would exclude, yet from beginning to end it is a narrative of absorbing interest." C. K. Adams.

Sumner, William Graham. Andrew Jackson. 1894. (American statesmen.).....92 J123s

References, p.387–392.

The same. 1899. (American statesmen.).....r92 J123s1

"A very able and critical treatment of the political and financial history of the years 1824–1840...Prof. Sumner writes as an expounder of the processes of democratic government and a vigorous critic of financial theories and practice, rather than as the biographer of Jackson. The book is one of the most instructive on this period." Larned's Literature of American history.

JACKSON, Gen. Thomas Jonathan, called Stonewall.

Cooke, John Esten. Stonewall Jackson; a military biography. 1876.....92 J126c

Popular biography from the Southern standpoint. The writer had no access to the military records, and his narrative of military operations is more picturesque and interesting than reliable.

Henderson, George Francis Robert. Stonewall Jackson and the American civil war. 2v. 1898.....92 J126h

Exhaustive and elaborate military biography and history by an English officer who, if not partisan, is certainly not unfavorable to the Southern side.

Hovey, Carl. Stonewall Jackson. 1900. (Beacon biographies of eminent Americans.).....92 J126ho

Bibliography, p.129–131.

Brief biography, particularly good for its presentment of a simple and noble character.

Jackson, Mrs Mary Anna (Morrison). Memoirs of Stonewall Jackson. 1895.....q92 J126j

Portrays less the fighter and strategist than the man of strong and beautiful character.

Life of Thomas J. Jackson, by an ex-cadet. 1864.....r92 J126

Short sketch, chiefly of "Stonewall" Jackson's career during the Civil war, from the Southern point of view.

JACOBUS, Melancthon Williams.

In memoriam Melancthon W. Jacobus, 1816–1876. [Anonymous.] r92 J135

From 1852 to 1876 Dr Jacobus was professor in the Western university of Pennsylvania.

JASMIN, Jacques.

Smiles, Samuel. Jasmin; barber, poet, philanthropist. 1892. .....92 J213s

Longfellow translated "The blind girl of Castel Cuillé," one of the best of Jasmin's poems, and in a note to the translation he says "Jasmin [1798–1864]...is to the South of France what Burns is to the South of Scotland, the representative of the heart of the people."

JAY, John, 1745–1829.

Jay, William. Life of John Jay. 2v. 1833.....r92 J223j

v.2 contains the miscellaneous and official correspondence of Jay.
With annotations by Isaac Craig.
"As unprejudiced as a son's life of his father is likely to be. The Life occupies Vol. 1. It is composed of letters patched together with what are scarcely more than editorial notes...The original papers contained in this work give it great value for the close reader." Larned's Literature of American history.

Pellew, William George. John Jay. 1892. (American statesmen.) 92 J223p

The same. 1899. (American statesmen.).....r92 J223p1

"Thoughtful and judicious account of the life of one of the best and ablest of the old Federalist statesmen...It abounds in excerpts from Jay's correspondence, and gives an unusually clear picture of the Revolutionary period and two succeeding generations." Larned's Literature of American history.

Whitelock, William. Life and times of John Jay. 1887..92 J223w

"Sketch of the history of the United States during the years 1774–1800 with Jay as the central figure. Based on the ordinary materials. Very favorable to Jay." Larned's Literature of American history.

JAY, William.

Tuckerman, Bayard. William Jay and the constitutional movement for the abolition of slavery. 1894.....92 J2232t

Bibliography, p.171–173.
This memoir is largely devoted to the part borne by Judge Jay in antislavery work, his relations to the abolition societies and the political antislavery parties.

JEFFERIES, George, baron. See JEFFREYS, George, baron.

JEFFERIES, Richard.

Story of my heart; my autobiography. 1898.....92 J231s

English writer (1848–87), best known for his descriptions of nature.
"A writer of a perfectly original type, and at the same time intensely English...he is unparalleled, unless by Shelley, for the eloquent expression of the mere rapture of living, of the joy of existence in fresh air and clear light amid lovely landscape...'The Story of my Heart' ...idealises the feelings and yearnings of his youth; it is hardly what the lad really thought, but embodies all he was to think when he should have intellectually come to man's estate. The one fixed point in it is its intense pantheism." Dictionary of national biography.

Besant, Sir Walter. Eulogy of Richard Jefferies. 1888....92 J231b

List of Jefferies' works, p.366–369.
Besant's feeling for Jefferies, according to his own confession, is one of "admiration pure and unalloyed." The natural result is that his book will be completely acceptable only to those whose enthusiasm is equal to his own.

JEFFERSON, Joseph.

Autobiography. 1890.....92 J232

"Mr. Jefferson's style has the cadence and the color of good dramatic writing, with a charm that seems to be his own...Quaint and odd as were many of the personages whom he recalls for us in these pages, he sketches them with unfailing charity, with never a hint of acerbity, and with very remarkable skill...Something more than merely amusing. We see here the judgment of an expert with broad sympathies and a chastened taste." Nation, 1890.

Winter, William. Life and art of Joseph Jefferson. 1894..92 J232w

In his account of the long career of the actor (1829–1905) Mr Winter includes much of the earlier history of the American stage and accounts of some of Mr Jefferson's contemporaries. Illustrated.

JEFFERSON, Thomas.

Curtis, William Eleroy. The true Thomas Jefferson. 1901. .....92 J2323c

Series of sketches showing Jefferson as lawyer, farmer, politician, author of the Declaration of independence, founder of the University of Virginia, and as a scientific and literary man. The author hopes by this unconventional form to show Jefferson as he was and not as he has hitherto been presented either by strong partisans or bitter opponents.

Lee, Henry, 1787–1837. Observations on the writings of Thomas Jefferson, with reference to the attack they contain on the memory of Gen. Henry Lee. 1832....r92 J2323l

With newspaper clippings and annotations by Judge Veech.

The "Gen. Henry Lee" referred to is the Revolutionary officer known as "Light-horse Harry."

Merwin, Henry Childs. Thomas Jefferson. 1901.....92 J2323me

Brief impartial biography.

Morse, John Torrey. Thomas Jefferson. 1892. (American statesmen.).....92 J2323m

The same. 1899. (American statesmen.).....r92 J2323m1

"Brief popular biography based on Randall's Life and Jefferson's Works. Over two thirds of the book are devoted to Jefferson's official career after 1790, his relations to Washington, Hamilton, Randolph, Burr, to the Louisiana purchase, and to the embargo receiving particular attention." Larned's Literature of American history.

Parton, James. Life of Thomas Jefferson. 1889.....92 J2323p

"The least valuable of the author's biographical productions, with the possible exception of the 'Life of Burr'...The author seems to have been moved by two impulses equally strong—admiration of Jefferson and aversion to Hamilton...The narrative is fascinating, but the historical value of the work is very slight." C. K. Adams.

Pierson, Hamilton Wilcox. Jefferson at Monticello; the private life of Thomas Jefferson. 1862.....r92 J2323pi

Reminiscences of the manager of Jefferson's estate at Monticello from 1800 to 1820.

Randall, Henry Stephens. Life of Thomas Jefferson. 3v. 1858. .....r92 J2323r

"By far the most valuable of the biographies of Jefferson. It is a very elaborate effort to place the third President before the people...in a favorable light. The author...has brought together a large amount of valuable material...It is chiefly in this material that the real importance of the volumes consists." C. K. Adams, 1888.

Schouler, James. Thomas Jefferson. 1893. (Makers of America.) 92 J2323s

Brings out clearly Jefferson's far-seeing intuition, not only in statecraft but also in moral and educational matters.

Tucker, George. Life of Thomas Jefferson, with parts of his correspondence. 2v. 1837.....r92 J2323t

With ms. annotations by Judge Veech.

"Formerly the standard life of Jefferson, based largely on correspondence and papers, but written with a love of the subject which frequently leads to a strong bias. Eulogy often takes the place of critical judgment." Larned's Literature of American history.

Watson, Thomas Edward. Thomas Jefferson. 1900. (Beacon biographies of eminent Americans.).....92 J2323w

Bibliography, p.147–150.

"It is remarkable that so few pages can give so comprehensive an understanding of the immense versatility of the man, of the range of his interests and information and of his great and manifold services to state and nation." American historical review, 1901.

JEFFREYS, George, baron.

Bent, James. Bloody assizes; or, A compleate history of the life of George, lord Jefferies, from his birth to this present time. 1890.....qr92 J234b

Reprint of the edition of 1680.
Author took part in Monmouth's rebellion.

Irving, Henry Brodribb. Life of Judge Jeffreys. 1898....92 J234i

The same, with Records of a family of engineers. 1896....92 J256s1
Electrical engineer, 1833–85.
"May be read a first time for the sake of Fleeming Jenkin; it will be read a second time for the sake of Fleeming Jenkin's biographer. Mr. Stevenson has never done a more delightful bit...of literary work than this Life of the man to whom he stood first in the position of careless pupil, and then of warm friend." Spectator, 1888.

JEROME, St.

Largent, Hubert Augustin Pierre Joseph. Saint Jerome. 1900. (The saints.).....92 J281l
"Father Largent has shown us the preacher of asceticism, and at the same time, the man who affected the history of the church as much by his scholarship as by his gospel of monasticism." Athenæum, 1901.

JERROLD, Douglas William.

Jerrold, William Blanchard. Life and remains of Douglas Jerrold. 1859.....92 J283j

Gower, Lord Ronald Charles Sutherland Leveson-. Joan of Arc. 1893.....92 J329g
Bibliography of Joan of Arc, p.311–321.
Written with much enthusiasm for the subject, and aims at giving a picture of his heroine, rather than a discussion of controverted points. Illustrated.

Lowell, Francis Cabot. Joan of Arc. 1896.....92 J329l

The same. 1896.....r92 J329l
"Learned and compact biography." Nation, 1896.
Mr Lowell's design is to exclude the legendary element by stating just what is known of Joan's actual life and achievements. The result is that her personality stands out pure, strong and simple without artificial light.

Michelet, Jules. Joan of Arc. [1858.] 92 J329m
From his "History of France."

Oliphant, Mrs Margaret Oliphant (Wilson). Jeanne d'Arc; her life and death. 1896. (Heroes of the nations.) 92 J329o

The same; ed. by Arnold Glover, with an introduction by Austin Dobson. 3v. 1901 ..... r92 J365b

The same, with Boswell's Journal of a tour to the Hebrides, and Johnson's Diary of a journey into north Wales; ed. by G. B. Hill. 6v. 1891 ..... 92 J365b
"Assuredly a great, a very great work. Homer is not more decidedly the first of heroic poets,—Shakespeare is not more decidedly the first of dramatists,—Demosthenes is not more decidedly the first of orators, than Boswell is the first of biographers... Many of the greatest men that have ever lived have written biography; Boswell was one of the smallest men that ever lived, and he has beaten them all." Macaulay's Essays.

Grant, Frederick Richard Charles. Life of Samuel Johnson. 1887. (Great writers.) 92 J365g
Bibliography, apx. p.1–28.

JONES, John Paul.

Brady, Cyrus Townsend. Commodore Paul Jones. 1900. (Great commanders.) 92 J4112br

"Covers satisfactorily the main events of Jones's public career. It is written from the view-point of an ardent admirer...Mr. Brady's animated style and exuberant patriotism make his book an attractive one for young readers." Dial, 1900.

Buell, Augustus C. Paul Jones, founder of the American navy. 2v. 1900 ..... 92 J4112b

List of works consulted, v.2, p.356–359.

"These two volumes not only tell an old story well, but they have enough new material to clothe the old story with all the attributes of novelty...The technical knowledge of the writer has enabled him to develop what was one of the essential features of Jones's career; for the daring courage of the fighter would have been of small service had it not been for the sound and advanced seamanship which gave it a foundation." Worthington C. Ford.

Hapgood, Hutchins. Paul Jones. 1901.....92 J4112h
"Authorities," p.5-6.
Short sketch intended particularly for young people.

Sands, Robert Charles. Life and correspondence of J. P. Jones, including his narrative of the campaign of the Liman. 1830.....r92 J411sa Appeared in the "Edinburgh review," v.186–187, July 1897 and Jan. 1898.

"Brunswick is one of the most ill-fated figures in history. Sharing in the military glories of the great Frederick of Prussia...he was looked upon as the greatest general and placed at the head of the best army in Europe...Yet Brunswick's name, as Lord Edmond remarks, is chiefly associated in our minds with Valmy and Auerstädt—with the first check administered by France to her enemies, and with the humiliation of Prussia by Napoleon...The book is all too brief...a suggestive sketch." Athenæum, 1901.

KELLY, Michael.

Reminiscences. 2v. 1826 ..... r92 K172

These memoirs of the actor, vocalist and composer (1764?–1826) concerning his long career in Dublin, on the continent and in London are highly esteemed. At Vienna he was intimate with Mozart and gives much interesting and important information about him.

KELVIN, William Thomson, baron.

Glasgow university. Lord Kelvin, professor of natural philosophy in the University of Glasgow, 1846–1899, with an essay on his scientific work by G. F. Fitzgerald and an account of the celebrations on the occasion of Lord Kelvin's jubilee as a professor. 1899 ..... q92 K172

KEMBLE, Frances Anne.

Further records, 1848–1883. 1891 ..... 92 K173f

"Principally from the year 1874 when she settled in Philadelphia, to 1877, when she returned to England, and...concerned with domestic particulars. Towards the end of the volume are some letters of travel in Switzerland, the Tyrol, and Italy, and a separate batch dating from 1848 to 1883...Adds very little to our knowledge of the writer or to her anecdotes of the past." Nation, 1891.

Journal of a residence on a Georgian plantation, 1838–1839. 1863. .....92 K173

"The first ample, lucid, faithful, detailed account from the actual headquarters of a slave plantation in this country." Atlantic monthly, 1863.

Records of a girlhood. 1884.....92 K173r

Extend from 1809 to 1834. She first appeared on the stage in 1829 and the book contains much interesting information about the famous Kemble family, and particularly about the career of her father, Charles Kemble.

Records of later life. 1884.....92 K173re

Extend from her marriage in 1834 to 1848. Vivacious letters concerning life in America and her experiences after returning to England. She was a great favorite with many distinguished persons on both sides of the Atlantic and records numberless anecdotes about them.

KEMBLE, John Philip.

Fitzgerald, Percy. The Kembles; an account of the Kemble family, including the lives of Mrs Siddons and her brother John Philip Kemble. 2v. [1871.].....92 K1732f Makes only the merest mention of other members than Mrs Siddons and her brother, John Philip. Illustrated.

Senator from Philadelphia, 1883–86.

KENT, James.

Kent, William, lawyer. Memoirs and letters of James Kent, chancellor of the state of New York. 1898.....92 K192k

Appendix: Chancellor Kent's Memories of Alexander Hamilton.

"It can be truly said that it is due to his life's work, more than to that of any other man, that the United States, from ocean to ocean, is controlled by the same system of jurisprudence, founded upon those principles of law and equity which he enunciated."

KERFOOT, John Barrett, bp.

Harrison, Hall. Life of John Barrett Kerfoot, first bishop of Pittsburgh, with selections from his diaries and correspondence. 2v. 1886.....r92 K198h

v.1. 1816–1864.
v.2. 1864–1881.

KING, Rufus.

Life and correspondence, comprising his letters, public documents and speeches. 6v. 1894–98.....r92 K266

v.1. 1755–1794.
v.2. 1795–1799.
v.3. 1799–1801.
v.4. 1801–1806.
v.5. 1807–1816.
v.6. 1816–1827.

"Valuable contribution to American political history. Concerns the later sessions of the Continental Congress, the formation and adoption of the Federal Constitution, the first United States Senate, the Jay treaty, and especially relations with England from 1796 to 1803. Also embraces the admission of Missouri." Larned's Literature of American history.

KING, William Rufus.

United States—Congress. Obituary addresses on the occasion of the death of the Hon. William R. King of Alabama delivered in the Senate and House of representatives and in the Supreme court of the United States, 8th and 9th Dec. 1853. 1854.....r92 K267u

From 1811 King was almost continuously in public life, dying a few months after his election to the vice-presidency.

KINGSLEY, Charles.

Kingsley, Mrs Fanny (Grenfell), ed. Charles Kingsley; his letters and memories of his life. 2v. 1894.....92 K272k

"It is not merely as the author of a few clever novels, or brilliant essays, or pretty little poems; it is not merely as an eloquent preacher or capable exponent of popular science that Charles Kingsley has a distinctive claim to be honourably remembered...it is rather as one who, as a teacher and writer, exercised a very remarkable influence over others, and especially over those of a younger generation." Edinburgh review, 1877.

Stubbs, Charles William, dean. Charles Kingsley and the Christian social movement. 1899.....92 K272s

Frederick Denison Maurice is nearly as prominent as Kingsley, of whom there is a most agreeable though sketchy picture, but the book is chiefly given to an account of the social movement of the middle 19th century.

KINSEY, John.

Walton, Joseph Solomon. John Kinsey, speaker of the Pennsylvania assembly and justice of the Supreme court of the province. 1900.....r92 K276w

Short sketch of the Quaker leader (1693–1750).

KIPLING, Rudyard.

Clarke, William James, (pseud. G. F. Monkshood). Rudyard Kipling; an attempt at appreciation. 1899.....92 K278c

"Kiplingana," p.235–236.

Biographical and appreciative, but could hardly be called discriminating.

Norton, Charles Eliot. Rudyard Kipling; a biographical sketch. 1899.....92 K278n

"Books by Rudyard Kipling," p.23–24.

Very brief sketch, giving only the outline of his life down to 1898.

KIRKCALDY, Sir William.

Barbé, Louis A. Kirkcaldy of Grange. 1897. (Famous Scots series.).....92 K285b

Straightforward, impartial account of a striking figure in the stirring times of Mary, queen of Scots.

KITE, Thomas.

Memoirs and letters. 1883.....92 K298

Minister of the Society of Friends in Philadelphia (1785–1845). The letters are concerned with religious or personal matters.

KLINGER, Max. See Artists, p.1264.

KNAUS, Ludwig. See Artists, p.1264.

KNOX, Gen. Henry.

Brooks, Noah. Henry Knox, a soldier of the Revolution, 1750–1806. 1900. (American men of energy.).....92 K354b

Gen. Knox was chief of artillery during the Revolution, the close friend and constant companion of Washington, first secretary of war under the constitution, and one of the founders of the Society of the Cincinnati.

Drake, Francis Samuel. Life and correspondence of Henry Knox, major-general in the American revolutionary army. 1873.....992 K354d

"Materials for this memoir, prepared...for the 'Memorials of the Massachusetts Society of the Cincinnati,' have been mainly derived from the original letters and papers of General Knox." Preface.

KNOX, John, 1505–72.

Brown, Peter Hume. John Knox. 2v. 1895.....92 K355b

"In this work are found grace of literary style, patient mastery of details, and that comprehensive grasp of the larger aspect of affairs which is to the historian what atmospheric effect is to the landscape painter." Athenæum, 1895.

Harland, Marion, (pseud. of Mrs Mary Virginia (Hawes) Terhune). John Knox. 1900. (Literary hearthstones.) 92 K355h

Popular personal biography. Illustrated.

Innes, Alexander Taylor. John Knox. 1896. (Famous Scots series.).....92 K355i

Impartial, very condensed narrative making use of all the latest materials.

M'Crie, Thomas. Life of John Knox. 1855.....92 K355m

The author has consulted, besides the usual sources of information, many manuscripts, especially a volume of Knox's letters which throw much light on his character and history.

Maccunn, Florence A. John Knox. 1895. (Leaders of religion.) 92 K355ma

Well-written short narrative.

KOLOKOTRONES, Theodore.

The Klepht and the warrior. 1892. (Adventure series.)...92 K371

Absorbing autobiography of this modern Greek hero, prefaced by a brief history of the Klephts.

KONER, Max. See Artists, p.1264.

KOSSUTH, Louis.

Memories of my exile. 1894.....92 K392

Though the famous Hungarian patriot was exiled in 1849 and remained in exile until his death in 1894 the "Memories" deal only with the Italian war of 1859 and its effect on the destiny of Hungary.

KOVALÉVSKY, Sónya.

Recollections of childhood, with a biography by A. C. Leffler. 1895.....92 K397

Mme Kovalevsky was a gifted Russian mathematician and author.

"Mr. Gladstone is right in saying that the biography of Sonia Kovalevsky is a book of extraordinary interest...There is nothing in the world more interesting than to obtain fresh insight into the real nature of a human soul...The character here described is that of a woman of extraordinary intellectual powers and of extraordinary richness and force of character... The story of her life is intensely interesting and intensely sad." Nation, 1895.

KRASINSKA, Françoise, countess, afterward duchess of Courland.

Journal; tr. fr. the Polish by Kasimer Dziekonska. 1896..92 K413

"Gives, with charming naïveté, a picturesque account of high life in Poland at the middle of the [18th] century—a life still pervaded by feudal traditions and customs...The Countess writes with all the vivacity of a girl who does not suspect that the glamour will pass, but withal she has very keen eyes, that see just those details which posterity is most interested in and rarely finds in formal histories." Nation, 1895.

KRAUTH, Charles Porterfield.

Spaeth, Adolph. Charles Porterfield Krauth. v.1. 1898...92 K414s

v.1. 1823–59.

"By universal consent the most accomplished scholar and theologian of the Lutheran church in America." Appletons' cyclopædia of American biography.

Was pastor of the First English Lutheran church in Pittsburgh, 1855–59.

KROPOTKIN, Petr Alexeievitch, prince.

Memoirs of a revolutionist. 1899.....92 K425

Appeared in the "Atlantic monthly," v.82–84, Sept.1898–Sept. 1899, with the title "The autobiography of a revolutionist."

"Kropotkin's story is a singularly rich, diversified, and romantic one, and it is attractively told. Nothing more interesting in its way has ever been written than the chapters relating his prison life and escape. The book abounds in instructive pictures of Russian life and character, done with unconscious art." Dial, 1900.

KRÜDENER, Barbe Julie (de Wietinghoff), baronne de.

Ford, Clarence. Life and letters of Madame de Krudener. 1893. .....92 K4262f

"Authorities consulted," p.15–16.

Born at Riga in 1764, she led a brilliant social and intellectual life till she was about 30, when she was suddenly converted and devoted the rest of her life to the most exalted preaching and exhortation. Her special renown was acquired through her remarkable influence over the Russian emperor, Alexander I.

"Mr. Ford's compilation from the Continental authorities is a valuable piece of work, and a service to English-speaking students of modern Russian history who constantly encounter allusions to one of the most famous of Russian women." Nation, 1893.

KRUGER, Paul.

Statham, Francis Reginald, (pseud. Francis Reynolds). Paul Kruger and his times. 1898.....92 K426s

Defense of the Boer president and the Boer policy. Author was for years a journalist in South Africa.

KUHLAU, Friedrich Daniel Rodolph.

Thrane, Karl. Friedrich Kuhlau. 1886.....r92 K433t

Simply told, for quite young children.

Headley, Phineas Camp. Life of General Lafayette. 1876. .....r92 L144h

With newspaper clippings and annotations by Isaac Craig.

Popular biography.

Memoirs of La Fayette, embracing sketches of the American revolution, the French revolution, the downfall of Bonaparte and the restoration of the Bourbons. 1825..r92 L144

This narrative, hastily compiled by an anonymous writer, must not be confounded with Lafayette's own "Memoirs."

Pelet de la Lozère, Privat Joseph Claramont, comte. Lafayette en Amérique et en France. 1867.....92 L144p Deals at much greater length with Lafayette's career in France than with his American career.

Sichel, Edith. Household of the Lafayettes. 1897.....92 L144s
Author is at her best in her general surveys of events, and she gives an interesting portrait of Adrienne de Lafayette, distinguished even in an age of notable women. Her statements are not always strictly according to history. Illustrated.

Tuckerman, Bayard. Life of General Lafayette, with a critical estimate of his character and public acts. 2v. 1889. .....92 L144t
"The greater part of the first volume deals with his American experiences...The whole of the second volume is devoted to his arduous labors during and after the French Revolution. The pictures of life in France, as painted by Mr. Tuckerman, form a brilliant addition to our knowledge of French history. Then comes one long swath of sunlight in the visit, in 1824, of Lafayette to America, and the homage of a grateful people." Critic, 1889.

LAMARCK, Jean Baptiste Pierre Antoine de Monet, chevalier de.

Packard, Alpheus Spring. Lamarck, the founder of evolution; his life and work, with translations of his writings on organic evolution. 1901.....92 L177p Bibliography of the writings of Lamarck, p.425–443; list of biographical articles on Lamarck, p.444–445.
"The most important of the pre-Darwinian writers on evolution...With the advance of scientific knowledge others have discovered laws, regarding the processes of evolution, which were distinctly formulated by Lamarck, and it is the full exposition in English of Lamarck's own view upon evolution that constitutes the chief value of this volume... Chapters are added presenting Lamarck's views on the evolution of man, his thoughts on morals and the relation of science to religion, and a brief summary of the views of the more important Neo-Lamarckians." American journal of science, 1902.

LAMARTINE, Alphonse de.

Memoirs of my youth.....rS778c
Bound with Staël–Holstein's "Corinne."

LAMB, Charles.

Letters. 2v. 1889.....92 L179
"They are not in the least like any one else's. They defy classification, and escape analysis. Humour and fancy run through them all, but it is Lamb's humour and Lamb's fancy. Nothing occurs in them but the unexpected." Paul's Men and letters.

Ainger, Alfred. Charles Lamb. [1882.] (English men of letters.).....92 L179a Short biographical and critical study. Author is one of the chief authorities on his subject.

Hazlitt, William Carew, ed. Lamb and Hazlitt; further letters and records hitherto unpublished. 1899.....92 H382
Contents: The earlier Hazlitts.—Hazlitt's school days.—Hazlitt at Hackney college.—Between two paths.—A curious historiette.—Hazlitt's earlier married life.—Liber amoris, pt.2.—A packet of new Lamb notes and verses.

Lucas, Edward Verrall, ed. Charles Lamb & the Lloyds; comprising newly-discovered letters of Charles Lamb, S. T. Coleridge, the Lloyds, etc. 1899.....92 L179l
"This book grew from the discovery, in 1894, of two masses of correspondence relating to the family of Charles Lloyd (1748–1828), the Quaker philanthropist and banker of Birmingham. The papers...contain upwards of twenty new letters of Charles Lamb, some of them worthy to rank with his best, and others, also hitherto unpublished, of Coleridge, Wordsworth, [and others]." Preface.

Martin, Benjamin Ellis. In the footprints of Charles Lamb. 1894. .....92 L179m

Description of the homes and places associated with Lamb. Illustrated.

LAMB, Gen. John.

Leake, Isaac Q. Memoir of the life and times of John Lamb. 1850.....r92 L1791l

"Lamb was the leader of the Sons of Liberty in New York, beginning with the Stamp Act, and was connected with the most rabid spirits of the Revolution in that colony. Later, he was in the Canadian campaign, in command of West Point when Arnold tried to betray it, and was at the Yorktown surrender. His memoirs cover these topics, as well as the treatment of the Loyalists in New York, the adoption of the Constitution, and later New York politics." Larned's Literature of American history.

LAMBALLE, Marie Thérèse Louise de Savoie-Carignan, princesse de.

Bertin, Georges. Madame de Lamballe; tr. by Arabella Ward. 1901.....92 L181b

The story of Madame de Lamballe (1749–92), her intimacy with Marie Antoinette and her devotion to the royal family, forms an interesting and pathetic chapter in the history of the French revolution. This biography seeks to show that her murder by the mob was entirely unmerited.

LAMBERTON, Robert.

Eaton, Samuel John Mills. Memorial of the Hon. Robert Lamberton. 1885.....92 L184e

Short sketch of a typical Scotch-Irishman who settled in Franklin, Pennsylvania about 1830, and there engaged in trade and various other enterprises.

LAMPSON, Frederick Locker-.

My confidences; an autobiographical sketch. 1896.....92 L211

"Locker-Lampson's literary acquaintance embraced most of the authors of his time...These recollections are cheery, consciously unaffected, and deliberately discursive...They contain capital...stories and some shrewd perspectives of character...Vitality is never missing...and the self-portraiture most undeniably charms." Athenæum, 1896.

These reminiscences, which cluster about the middle years of the 19th century, include recollections of George Eliot, Thackeray, Dickens, Leigh Hunt, Carlyle, Dean Stanley and others.

LANDON, Letitia Elizabeth, afterward Mrs Maclean, (pseud. L. E. L.).

Blanchard, Samuel Laman. Life and literary remains of L. E. L. [Letitia Elizabeth Landon]. 2v. in 1. 1841..r92 L227b

English poet and novelist of early 19th century.

"As a poetess Letitia Elizabeth Landon can only rank as a gifted improvisatrice...If not entitled to a high place in literature upon her own merits, she will nevertheless occupy a permanent one as a characteristic representative of her own time." Dictionary of national biography.

LANDOR, Walter Savage.

Letters, private and public; ed. by Stephen Wheeler. 1899..92 L228

"Lady Graves-Sawle, whom we have to thank for permitting the publication of these private letters, is niece to that 'Rose Aylmer' whom more than one generation has thanked for inspiring perhaps the most Hellenic of English lyrics. Written to Lady Graves-Sawle in her unmarried youth and during the first years of her marriage, they belong to the last division of Landor's life and cover the period of his final sojourn in England and his sad exile to his death-place, Florence... We are less grateful for the collection of public letters, rescued from the pages of the extinct 'Examiner.'" Saturday review, 1899.

Colvin, Sidney. Landor. [1881.] (English men of letters.) 92 L228c
Bibliography, p.5–6.
"A book the reading of which will do much to popularize this great and much neglected writer." Leypoldt & Iles's Books for girls and women.

LANDSEER, Sir Edwin. See Artists, p.1257.

LANIER, Sidney.
Letters; selections from his correspondence, 1866–1881. 1899. .....92 L264
Written chiefly to Gibson Peacock, Bayard Taylor and Paul Hayne. Include many notes on music and musical impressions. Two portraits of Lanier and a facsimile of a letter to Bayard Taylor appear in the book.

LARCOM, Lucy.
New England girlhood. [1889.].....92 L323
Recollections, by the New England poet, of her childhood in a small country village and of her girlhood and young womanhood in a busy manufacturing town.

LASSALLE, Ferdinand.
Bernstein, Edward. Ferdinand Lassalle as a social reformer. 1893. (Social science series.).....92 L345b
"For a full treatment of the subject it is far too incomplete, and its constituent parts are of purpose unequally balanced...But, on the other hand, it deals with questions almost ignored by other writers, and after I had had access to documents hitherto unknown to them. Further, it is written at the same time from a Social-Democratic and a critical standpoint." Preface.

LATIMER, Hugh, bp.
Carlyle, R. M. & Alexander James. Hugh Latimer. 1899..92 L356c
Authorities, p.5–6.
"A clear, vigorous, and readable sketch of the great English Protestant preacher. They have nothing extenuated, and certainly they have set down nought in malice...The account of the sermons before Edward VI is especially good." Literature (Eng.), 1900.

With annotations by Isaac Craig and autograph letter by C. W. Butterfield.

Leith was taken prisoner by the Indians in 1772 and remained among them for 18 years, most of which were spent in the wilds of western Pennsylvania and Ohio. His narrative tells of his adventures and suffering.

LEJEUNE, Louis François, baron.

Memoirs; tr. and ed. fr. the original French by Mrs Arthur Bell. 2v. 1897.....92 L571

Lejeune was aide-de-camp to marshals Berthier, Davout and Oudinot. "The charm of [the memoirs] consists in this, that, cultivated, brilliant, and gallant soldier as Lejeune was, he was essentially, and always remained, an artist who had become a soldier rather than a soldier who had taken to art." Introduction.

LELAND, Charles Godfrey.

Memoirs. 1893.....92 L573

"Records to 1870 of a life of unusual variety of event. Candid and rich in reminiscence and humor. Leland [is] widely known as 'Hans Breitmann.' " A. L. A. catalog, 1904.

LILFORD, Thomas Littleton Powys, baron.

Drewitt, Mrs Caroline Mary (Powys). Lord Lilford, Thomas Littleton, fourth baron; a memoir, by his sister. 1900. .....92 L696d

"It was as an ornithologist that Lord Lilford was chiefly famed...The most interesting part of this memoir will be found in the letters written at various times to his friends. They show the character of the man, as well as his intimate knowledge and great love of animal life, and especially of birds. The illustrations are chiefly of birds from the collection at Lilford Hall...live birds, which were kept in a state of freedom only second to nature." Knowledge, 1901.

LINCOLN, Abraham.

Abraham Lincoln, his book; a facsimile reproduction of the original, with an explanatory note by J. McC. Davis. 1901. .....r92 L715a

"Facsimile reproduction of a small leather-covered memorandum book owned by Lincoln during the campaign of 1858. It reproduces both the newspaper clippings and the autograph notes which the owner put into it, and constitutes a curious and interesting souvenir of the great President." Dial, 1901.

Arnold, Isaac Newton. Life of Abraham Lincoln. 1893....92 L715a

"History of Lincoln's political life almost exclusively...The portion which deals with Lincoln's personality is...small, and the new material meagre." Nation, 1885.

Hapgood, Norman. Abraham Lincoln, the man of the people. 1900.....92 L715ha

"It is not easy to imagine that anyone would think so well of Lincoln after reading this book as before, could they not appeal from it to other and more comprehensive representations. This does not mean that Mr. Hapgood has had the intention of writing Lincoln down. He writes more things that are favorable to him than the reverse, and lavishes upon him many strains of generous and lofty praise. But he seems to do these things...from a sense of duty; while he tells the vulgar story and reports the political indirection with as much relish as conscientiousness...Somehow the emphasis appears to be upon the lower things." Nation, 1899.

Herndon, William Henry, & Weik, J. W. Abraham Lincoln. 2v. 1895.....92 L715h

Mr Herndon was for 20 years Lincoln's friend and law partner. Most of the work is given up to the incidents of Lincoln's boyhood and early manhood, and it gives no adequate estimate of his place in history, nor of his conduct of national affairs.

Lamon, Ward Hill. Recollections of Abraham Lincoln, 1847–1865. 1895.....92 L715l

"Miscellaneous collections of alleged anecdotes and reminiscences, some of which are true and some decidedly untrue, notably the one about the Gettysburg address...Its principal value lies in facsimile reproductions of an autograph memorandum by Mr. Lincoln, and one or two autograph letters." Larned's Literature of American history.

Morse, John Torrey. Abraham Lincoln. 2v. 1894. (American statesmen.).....92 L715m

The same. 2v. 1899. (American statesmen.).....r92 L715m1

Should have given more attention to Lincoln's life before the Civil war. Of all Lincoln's gifts, that of knowing the public mind, and finding his way to the public heart, was the most precious to the country. It is a great merit of this book that it holds this trait constantly before the reader's eye, although the author is himself too much dazzled by it. While Mr Morse cautions his readers very properly against the apotheosis of Lincoln by Nicolay and Hay, yet he is constantly sliding into the tone of idolatry in a lesser degree. Adapted from Nation, 1893.

Nicolay, John George, & Hay, John. Abraham Lincoln; a history. 10v. 1890.....92 L715n

The authors, as private secretaries to President Lincoln, stood in most intimate and confidential relations with him, and had his approval of this history for which they began to prepare during the war. Their work is really a history of the period with Lincoln as the central figure, particular attention naturally being given to the political struggle preceding the war, and to the narrative of military events. Cock, Mrs Alfred. Life of Madame de Longueville (Anne-Geneviève de Bourbon). 1899.....92 L844c

Mme de Longueville (1619–79), sister of the great Condé, was in her youth an ornament of the Hôtel de Rambouillet, became the heroine of the Fronde, and in later life was attached to the Jansenists and the community of Port Royal.

"In that adventurous time there is no figure so romantic as that of the beautiful Duchess, and no story so exciting as that of her expeditions, her treaties, her narrow escapes, the sad disenchantment of the last days at Bordeaux, when treachery hastened the death of the Fronde and Mazarin's victory. Throughout those reckless years, in spite of terrible mistakes and severe punishment, Madame de Longueville may be said to have been the good angel of a bad cause." Spectator, 1900.

"From first to last, the one impression, inclusive of all others, that these letters make, is that Lowell the writer and Lowell the man were absolutely one...And while they do not alter, but confirm our previous apprehension of his personality, they add one of capital importance to the known variety of his gifts—a gift for writing letters of such brightness and such beauty that they are a permanent addition to one of the most delightful satisfactions which the past affords the present and the coming time." Forum, 1894.

"Mr. Scudder was pre-eminently interested in Lowell as a man of letters; was interested moreover not in his influence on others, but in the impressions made by friends, by passing events, by literature, by family misfortune on the mind and spirit of Lowell himself." American historical review, 1902.

Underwood, Francis Henry. James Russell Lowell; a biographical sketch. 1897.....92 L957u
"Mr. Underwood's sketch is perhaps a trifle over-colored by his warm personal admiration of the subject, but it is well written and interesting and full of pleasant biographical and literary details." Dial, 1882.

LUBBOCK, Francis Richard.

Six decades in Texas; or, Memoirs of Francis Richard Lubbock; a personal experience in business, war and politics; ed. by C. W. Raines. 1900.....r92 L967
Lubbock was governor of Texas in war-time, 1861–63. He does not claim that his work is a history of Texas, but a personal memoir interspersed with such public events as he recalled when writing it. It extends over the entire life of the Republic and the Confederacy, coming down to the present time (1900).

LUDLOW, Roger.

Taylor, John Myers. Roger Ludlow, the colonial lawmaker. 1900.....92 L974t
"Bibliographical notes," p.163–166.
"The salient feature of Ludlow's career...was his large share in originating and putting into practical operation the original laws of Connecticut. When, after the Pequot War, the General Court met to decide upon a frame of government, he was unanimously appointed to make the draft. Of this great paper it is not too much to say briefly, that in its immediate application and far-reaching results, it ranks with the best that have been formulated by the profoundest statesmen." Magazine of American history, 1882.

LUDWIG II, king of Bavaria.

Gerard, Frances A. Romance of Ludwig II, of Bavaria. 1899.....92 L975g
Profusely illustrated, vivacious, popular biography of the "mad king" of Bavaria whose best claim to remembrance is his early recognition of Wagner's genius.

Lumsden, Sir Peter Stark, & Elsmie, G. R. Lumsden of the Guides; a sketch of the life of Lieut.-Gen. Sir Harry Burnett Lumsden, with selections from his correspondence and occasional papers. 1899.....92 L977l
"Authorities," p.8.
Originator and for 16 years (1846–62) commander of the famous corps recruited from among the most hardy and adventurous natives, many of them desperate outlaws, who rendered invaluable service as guides and interpreters to the troops operating against the hill tribes of India. Maps, plans and illustrations.

LUTHER, Martin.

Freytag, Gustav. Doktor Luther; eine schilderung. 1884..92 L982fr

Freytag, Gustav. Martin Luther; tr. by H. E. O. Heinemann. 1897.....92 L982f

Excellent short biography giving a clear synopsis of the important events of the 16th century in which Luther played so prominent a part. Many illustrations from contemporary prints.

LYMAN, Mrs Anne Jean (Robbins).

Lesley, Mrs Susan Inches (Lyman). Recollections of my mother, Mrs Anne Jean Lyman; being a picture of domestic and social life in New England in the first half of the 19th century. 1899.....92 L989l

Mrs Lyman was the wife of Judge Joseph Lyman of Northampton, Mass. Their social position and overflowing hospitality drew to their home or into the current of their existence many interesting and eminent people, including Emerson, Webster, Bryant, Bancroft, Channing, Harriet Martineau, Lydia Maria Child and John S. Dwight. The Round Hill school, the law school at Northampton, the Unitarian controversy, the slavery agitation, the early growth of American literature—all these add interest to the volume. But, as the title-page indicates, its chief attraction lies in its quality as a picture of the best New England life of the times.

LYTTON, Edward George Earle Lytton Bulwer-, baron.

Meredith, Owen, (pseud. of Edward Robert Bulwer-Lytton, earl of Lytton). Life, letters and literary remains of Edward Bulwer, lord Lytton, by his son. 2v. 1883....92 L999m

The subject of this book was the author of "Last days of Pompeii," "Last of the barons," "Harold," "Lady of Lyons," "Richelieu," etc. These volumes cover the period from 1803 (the date of his birth) to 1832, the first volume containing an autobiographical fragment. Include various fragments of unfinished novels.

MACAULAY, Thomas Babington, lord.

Morison, James Cotter. Macaulay. [1883.] (English men of letters.).....92 M119m

Interesting biography and most thoughtful and suggestive criticism, valuable to every student of Macaulay's place in literature.

Trevelyan, Sir George Otto. Life and letters of Lord Macaulay. 2v. in 1. 1875.....92 M119t

"'It was my business,' says he [Trevelyan], 'to show my uncle as he was, and not as I or any one else would have had him'...If Sir George had set himself to cut away all the early and later priggishness, all the evidences of extreme partisanship...if he had given us a Macaulay all family affection, all sweet reasonableness, all pathetic humanity, a trimmed, shorn, and varnished Macaulay, we should have revolted...whereas, by giving the rough with the smooth, and letting the man exhibit himself as he actually was...the revolution of opinion in the minds of some, the establishment once for all of a good opinion in those of others, was done and done thoroughly, so that it will never need to be done again." Saintsbury's Essays in English literature.

MACAULAY, Zachary.

Knutsford, Margaret (Trevelyan) Holland, viscountess. Life and letters of Zachary Macaulay, by his granddaughter. 1900.....92 M1192k

Macaulay's services toward abolishing the British slave trade can hardly be overestimated, and this biography is an important contribution to our knowledge of the subject. The story of the family life is interesting and the family letters form an entertaining part of the correspondence.

MACDONALD, Maréchal Étienne Jacques Joseph Alexandre, duc de Tarente.

Recollections of Marshal Macdonald; ed. by Camille Rousset. 1893.....92 M145r

Created a marshal of France and duke of Tarentum by Napoleon for his military services.

"Carries in every page the evidence that it was written, as it professes to be, purely from memory, dashed off at speed, without revision by the aid of documents...What might be lost in fulness of historical detail is more than made up in the lively and vigorous presentation of the Marshal's own personality. He stands vividly before us for what he was—a brave, honest, and blunt man, half Scotch and half French, whose military eminence was fairly won and honorably used." Nation, 1892.

"Mr. Morley is to be thanked, in that he has not joined his mighty voice to the chorus of condemnation; he discriminates, illustrates, puts historical imagination into his final censure, and passes judgment with no note of unctuous rectitude." Academy, 1897.

Villari, Pasquale. Life and times of Niccolò Machiavelli. 2v. 1892.....92 M168v

"The most satisfactory work on the life and public services of this great political philosopher and writer. For centuries Machiavelli has been regarded as a species of sphinx of whom no one could solve the riddle...The work of Professor Villari is an effort to solve the enigma. The theory of the author is that an adequate explanation can only be found in a study of the man and of his times, as revealed especially in his unpublished writings. To this task Villari has applied himself with unusual assiduity and success." C. K. Adams, 1888.

MADISON, Mrs Dorothy (Payne).

Memoirs and letters of Dolly Madison. 1888.....92 M2361
A record of 40 years of married life of President Madison's wife, by a grandniece. As a picture of political and fashionable life in the early part of this century, these letters, while lacking the sparkle of Abigail Adams's, are still worthy to rank with them. The narrative which holds them together is given simply and with excellent taste.

Goodwin, Mrs Maud (Wilder). Dolly Madison. 1896. (Women of colonial and Revolutionary times.).....92 M2361g
A sketch of the wife of President Madison and of the social and domestic life of the period.

MADISON, James.

Adams, John Quincy. Lives of James Madison and James Monroe. 1851.....r92 M236a
"Eulogies rather than critical biographies, but valuable as the estimates of the character and services of these statesmen made by a contemporary who knew them well and who had himself taken a large part in the events whereof he writes." Larned's Literature of American history.

Gay, Sydney Howard. James Madison. 1894. (American statesmen.) 92 M236g

The same. 1899. (American statesmen.).....r92 M236g
"Viewed from a Federalist (and later non-'state-rights') standpoint. Severe, if not unsympathetic. The author thinks Madison possessed of great powers in ordinary affairs, but lacking purpose in crises; deplores his defection from the Hamiltonians, belittles the war of 1812, and sustains the attitude of New England. Nevertheless it is the best brief biography of Madison extant [1902]. Especially full on the origin of the Federal convention." Larned's Literature of American history.

MAITLAND, Sir Thomas.

Lord, Walter Frewen. Sir Thomas Maitland; the mastery of the Mediterranean. 1897. (Builders of greater Britain.) 92 M272l Does not deal with the private life of its subject, but is occupied entirely with his public career, in Parliament, in San Domingo, with his mission to the United States, and especially with the events of his two most important positions as governor of Ceylon and later of Malta, where he secured for the English the control of the Mediterranean.

MALIBRAN, Mme Maria Felicita (Garcia), afterward Mme de Bériot.

Merlin, Mercedes Jaruco, comtesse de. Memoirs of Madame Malibran. 2v. 1844.....r92 M289m

MALLET du PAN, Jacques.

Memoirs and correspondence, illustrative of the history of the French revolution; ed. by A. Sayous. 2v. 1852....r92 M291

"Mallet was a Swiss intriguer who put himself at the service of the Reaction. In carrying out those secret intrigues, he found out some things of use, and his revelations have a certain value." Andrew D. White's Bibliography of the French revolution.

MANN, Horace.

Hinsdale, Burke Aaron. Horace Mann and the common school revival in the United States. 1898. (Great educators.) 92 M335h

Bibliography, p.311–319.

Deals with Horace Mann (1796–1859) as an educator, and says little of his private life or personal characteristics. Gives a short history of common school education before and after his time.

MANNING, Henry Edward, cardinal.

Purcell, Edmund Sheridan. Life of Cardinal Manning. 2v. 1896. .....92 M337p

v.1. Manning as an Anglican.

v.2. Manning as a Catholic.

The biography has been much criticized as belittling its subject and betraying his confidence.

"Whatever view is taken of Manning's personal character, his methods and his principles, it must be acknowledged that his was a picturesque and commanding figure, that he was a distinguished Englishman and a distinguished prince of the Church. This, however, is not the impression gathered from this narrative." Athenæum, 1896.

MANSFIELD, Edward Deering.

Personal memories; social, political and literary, with sketches of many noted people, 1803–43. 1879.....r92 M345

The author was born in Connecticut, but moved to Ohio in 1824, where he became well-known as editor of several Cincinnati papers. He was a contributor to other papers and the author of various books.

Maples, Ellen. Chauncy Maples; a sketch of his life, with selections from his letters, by his sister. 1897.....92 M357m

A memoir of a pioneer missionary in east central Africa for 20 years.

His sympathies and interests were remarkably wide, and his exploring journeys into the interior resulted in contributions to scientific as well as missionary knowledge of the country and the natives.

MARBOT, Jean Baptiste Marcelin, baron de.

Memories; tr. fr. the French by A. J. Butler. 1893.....92 M361

Among the most valuable of the private memoirs concerning the first empire. Marbot served with great distinction in the army of Napoleon, being on the staff successively of five of his marshals and present at nearly all the great historic battles of the period.

MARCEAU, Gén. François Séverin Desgraviers.

Johnson, T. G. François-Séverin Marceau. 1896.....92 M362j

This young French general, killed in battle at the age of 27 is one of the poetic figures of the French revolution, more widely known by Byron's lines on seeing his tomb.

MARCHESI de CASTRONE, Mme Mathilde (Graumann).

Marchesi and music; passages from the life of a famous singing-teacher. 1897.....92 M372

During Mme Marchesi's long career not only has she numbered among her pupils most of the most famous singers of the time, but she has come to know well the most distinguished musicians of the century, and in these memoirs we have a lively record of her observations and personal experiences.

MARMONTEL, Jean François.

Memoirs. 4v. 1805.....r92 M395
Interesting for what it tells of Marmontel, himself in the front rank of French litterateurs of the time, and still more for its revelations of the literary history and of the celebrities of the latter half of the 18th century. The author clearly depicts the court of Louis XV from 1753 and the whole reign of Louis XVI, and gives much space to the acts and events which led to the French revolution.

Bound with "Biographical sketch of Charles Stewart."

Thayer, James Bradley. John Marshall. 1901.....92 M417t

"Brief, compact, impressive memoir, which can be read in an evening, and will be remembered because it does not overtask the memory... Nearly half of this monograph is...given up to a review of Marshall's most noted opinions, and their bearing on our political system." Nation, 1901.

MARTIN, St. bp. of Tours.

Scullard, Herbert Hayes. Martin of Tours, apostle of Gaul. 1891.....92 M426s

"Works referred to," p.9–11.

Short account of this saint of the Roman Catholic church (316–397) as a political force, as a social reformer, as a missionary.

MARTIN, John, 1846–76.

Craik, Mrs Dinah Maria (Mulock). A legacy; being the life and remains of John Martin, schoolmaster and poet. 1878.....92 M428c

Born in the East end of London, his early life was spent in the depths of misery and poverty, but in spite of everything he educated himself sufficiently to be a schoolmaster, though he never achieved the literary recognition he so much desired. Most of the book is occupied with his journals and note-books.

MARTINEAU, Harriet.

Autobiography; ed. by M. W. Chapman. 2v. 1877.....92 M431

Memorials of Harriet Martineau, by Mrs M. W. Chapman, v.2, p.131–596.

English author, of the 19th century, whose first literary success was a series of stories illustrating the political economy of Malthus, Ricardo and James Mill. In 1834 she visited America and assisted the abolitionists.

"This is doubtless one of the very honestest autobiographies ever written, and in respect to careful self-analysis, it probably stands at the head of its whole class...The little deaf woman...was courted by lords, commons, and society at large...She saw everybody in London who was notable...but there was no figure in this circle more remarkable than Harriet Martineau herself, a young woman of thirty, into whose ear-trumpet philosophers dropped their theories and statesmen their plans, while she in return supplied, at their request, facts, theories, and themes." Nation, 1877.

Miller, Mrs Florence Fenwick. Harriet Martineau. 1890. (Famous women.) 92 M431m

"Good, compact, unambitious summary of the career of a remarkable woman." Nation, 1885.

MARTINEAU, James.

Jackson, Abraham Willard. James Martineau; a biography and study. 1900 ..... 92 M4312j

Contents: The man.—The religious teacher.—The philosopher of religion.

English Unitarian minister and writer on philosophic theology and ethics.

"As an exposition...of Dr. Martineau's teaching, and as an account of the progressive steps by which the force of that teaching was borne in upon a mind not altogether inclined to accept it as true in its entirety, Mr. Jackson's book must be pronounced a most satisfying and nutritive one." Dial, 1900.

MARTYN, Henry.

Smith, George, b. 1833. Henry Martyn, first modern missionary to the Mohammedans, 1781–1812. [1892.] 92 M434s

Henry Martyn was one of the most heroic figures in English missionary history. This biography is written in the light of recent (1892) knowledge of India, Persia and Turkey.

MARY I, queen of England.

Stone, J. M. History of Mary I, queen of England, as found in the public records, despatches of ambassadors, in original private letters and other contemporary documents, [1516–1558]. 1901 ..... 92 M4393s

Much of the substance of this history is derived from the despatches of foreign ambassadors, Giustinian, Chapuys, Renard, Michiel and others, and from the English chroniclers, Stone, Holinshed, Machyn, etc. Queen Mary is shown in a much more favorable light than usual.

MARY, queen of Scots.

Abbott, Jacob. History of Mary, queen of Scots. 1876 .. 92 M439a

The same. 1904 ..... j92 M439a

Popular history for young people, first published 1848.

Bell, Henry Glassford. Life of Mary, queen of Scots. 2v. 1890. ..... 92 M439b

One of the principal works in vindication of Mary. First published 1840.

De Peyster, John Watts. Inquiry into the career and character of Mary Stuart and a justification of Bothwell. 1883. ..... q92 M439de

Bound with his "Bothwell."

Includes a discussion of the authenticity of the Casket letters, which the author believes to be genuine.

De Peyster, John Watts. Mary, queen of Scots; a study. 1882. ..... q92 M439de

Bound with his "Bothwell."

Short study, on the whole unfavorable to Mary.

Dumas, Alexandre, the younger. Mary Stuart, queen of Scots; tr. by J. M. Howell. 1896 ..... 92 M439d

Familiar and graphic in style, it still keeps very close to the facts of Mary's life, though naturally choosing the most dramatic scenes to dwell upon.

Kaufman, Rosalie, ed. Mary, queen of Scots; abridged from Agnes Strickland's Queens of Scotland. 1892 .... 92 M439k

Gives the most important parts of Miss Strickland's warm defense of Queen Mary, which was first published in 1852, and founded on careful study of the documents then available. Illustrated.

Lang, Andrew. Mystery of Mary Stuart. 1901.....92 M439l
Appendix contains Scottish and English translations, and original French version of the Casket letters.
The most serious charges against the character of the Scottish queen are involved in the partial or complete authenticity of what are known as the "Casket letters," a series of eight epistles which came into the hands of Mary's enemies in 1567. Half of Mr Lang's book is devoted to an examination of these letters, and, though the author disavows the intention of defending Mary's innocence, he throws a searching light on the intricacies of the tragedy.

Mignet, François Auguste Marie. History of Mary, queen of Scots. 1887.....92 M439m
Careful, unprejudiced, elaborate presentation of the adverse view and, though first published in 1851, still in many respects a standard authority.

Pitcairn, Robert, comp. Funeral of Mary, queen of Scots; a collection of curious tracts relating to the burial of this princess; ed. by R. Prescott-Innes. 1890.....r92 M439p
Reprint of the edition of 1822.

The same. 1890.....qr92 M439p2

MARYSIENSKA, Marie de la Grange (d'Arquien) Zamoyska Sobieski, queen of Poland, called.

Waliszewski, Kazimierz. Marysienka, Marie de la Grange d'Arquien, queen of Poland and wife of Sobieski, 1641–1716; tr. fr. the French by Lady Mary Loyd. 1898..92 M4392w
List of authorities consulted, p.13–16.
Daughter of a poor French captain of the guards, she became the wife of Sobieski, who owed his crown almost as much to her cleverness as to his own military ability.

MASERS de LATUDE, Jean Henri.

Escapes of Casanova and Latude from prison; ed. by P. Villars. 1892. (Adventure series.).....92 M444
Masers de Latude (1728–1805) was one of the celebrated prisoners of the Bastile and in confinement for 35 years before he finally made his escape. Casanova, one of the most noted adventurers of the 18th century, was imprisoned in Venice for political reasons. The graphic story of his escape, here translated from his remarkable "Memoirs," gained him great celebrity.

MASON, George.

Rowland, Kate Mason. Life of George Mason, 1725–1792, including his speeches, public papers and correspondence. 2v. 1892.....92 M449r
Bibliography, v.1, p.17.
Gives a genealogy of the Mason family in Virginia, a biography of the "planter statesman of the Revolution," an abbreviated history of the time, an exposition of the political opinions and principles of which he was so distinguished an advocate. He was an intimate associate of Washington in public and private affairs, member of the Virginia assembly and author of the "Declaration of rights," member of the convention that drafted the constitution of the United States. Thomas Jefferson says of him that he was "a man of the first order of wisdom among those who acted on the theatre of the Revolution, of expansive mind, profound judgment, cogent in argument, learned in the lore of former constitutions, and earnest for the republican change on democratic principles."

MASON, William, b. 1829.

Memories of a musical life. 1901.....92 M453
Entertaining and valuable reminiscences of music and musicians, chiefly in Europe, by one of the best known living (1901) American musicians.

MASSIE, Nathaniel.

Massie, David Meade. Nathaniel Massie, a pioneer of Ohio; his life and selections from his correspondence. 1896. .....92 M458m "Bare, matter of fact narrative of the life of a distinguished actor in early Ohio history...He was a surveyor, land speculator, founder of towns and politician. He was a pronounced Jeffersonian...and an active advocate of the early admission of Ohio to the Union. Historically the main interest of the book is in the original documents relating to this event." Larned's Literature of American history.

MATAMOROS, Manuel.

Greene, William. Manuel Matamoros; his life and death; a narrative of the late persecution of Christians in Spain. 1866. .....r92 M467g Matamoros (1834–66) on account of his belief was imprisoned in Spain for several years, and finally condemned to the galley, but the sentence was commuted to exile, during which he did much work for the spread of Christianity in Spain.

MATHER, Cotton.

Wendell, Barrett. Cotton Mather, the Puritan priest. 1891. (Makers of America.).....92 M468w

"Authorities," p.309–310.

Mather (1663–1728) was an able minister, a voluminous writer, but is most widely known for his connection with the witchcraft trials where his course has been much criticized. Prof. Wendell believes him to be truthful, honest and devout, but prejudiced, narrow and lacking in judgment.

MATHEWS, Charles James.

Life, chiefly autobiographical, with selections from his correspondence and speeches; ed. by Charles Dickens. 2v. 1879. .....92 M472

English actor and dramatist (1803–78). This work is the principal authority for the events of his life.

"Full of anecdotes, nearly all of them fresh and well told. Mathews's frequent letters are as light and sprightly as possible." Nation, 1879.

MATHY, Karl Friedrich Wilhelm.

Freytag, Gustav. Karl Mathy, [in German]. 1898.....92 M474f

German editor and statesman (1807–68) with a varied career from his connection with the revolution of 1830 through his long work in government departments of finance and trade in Baden, where he did much to develop banks and railways. The memoir is by a friend and fellow journalist.

MAURICE, Frederick Denison.

Maurice, Sir John Frederick, ed. Life of Frederick Denison Maurice, chiefly told in his own letters. 2v. 1884..92 M495m

Maurice (1805–72), Anglican divine and one of the leaders in the "Christian socialist" movement of the middle of the 19th century.

"In the 'Life of Frederick Denison Maurice' the world has received the picture of a character and the account of an influence. The man himself...was of deeper import than his work, and his character explains the quality and the limits of his influence." Nation, 1884.

MAURIER, George du. See DU MAURIER, George.

MAURY, Gen. Dabney Herndon.

Recollections of a Virginian in the Mexican, Indian and Civil wars. 1897.....92 M498

During his life at West Point and his long service in the United States and Confederate armies Gen. Maury knew intimately most of our military leaders, and his estimates of them are extremely interesting. As is natural the Virginians fare best at his hands.

MAX-MÜLLER, Friedrich. See MÜLLER, Max.

MAXWELL, James Clerk.

Campbell, Lewis, & Garnett, William. Life of James Clerk Maxwell, with selections from his writings. 1884.....92 M524c

Biography, popular account of his scientific work and a selection from his poetry. Illustrated.

"The interest and freshness of Prof. Campbell's story lie in the light it throws on the subjective influences that moulded the character of the gentle physicist, a character which was the most extraordinary combination that this generation has seen, of practical wisdom, childlike faith, goodness of heart, metaphysical subtlety, and discursive oddity, with wonderful critical sagacity and penetrating scientific genius." Nature, 1882.

Glazebrook, Richard Tetley. James Clerk Maxwell and modern physics. 1896. (Century science series.).....92 M524g Brief non-technical account of his scientific work.

MAYO, Richard Southwell Bourke, earl of.

Hunter, Sir William Wilson. Earl of Mayo. 1892. (Rulers of India.).....92 M542h

MAZARIN, Jules, cardinal.

Masson, Gustave. Mazarin. 1886.....92 M545m

"Authorities," p.10, 294–297.

Short popular account, with many extracts from contemporary memoirs, of the great cardinal and the France of his time.

MEADE, Gen. George Gordon.

Bache, Richard Meade. Life of Gen. George Gordon Meade, commander of the Army of the Potomac. 1897..92 M553b

"Rather a narrative of the campaigns of the Army of the Potomac; and the intimate history of Meade is limited to a dozen pages at the beginning and a score at the end of the volume...We find the standpoint of the writer to be that of a group of the younger officers who surrounded General Meade, who, starting with the intensest prejudices against the men who succeeded McClellan, transferred the dislike with equal hostility to Grant and Sheridan, when Meade was superseded in the independent command of the Potomac army." American historical review, 1898.

Pennypacker, Isaac Rusling. General Meade. 1901. (Great commanders.).....92 M553p

"Mr. Pennypacker...sums up as a logical deduction from his whole story, the services of Meade: 'In the history of the wars of the United States, it does not appear that the nation ever profited by the services of any other army commander who combined thorough training with personal energy and skill on the battlefield as did General Meade.' That is a great verdict, and unless the whole structure of Mr. Pennypacker's book can be overthrown, it is a true one." Dial, 1901.

MEADE, Sir Richard John.

Thornton, Thomas Henry. General Sir Richard Meade and the feudatory states of central and southern India. 1898. .....92 M5532t MEDICI, Cosmo de', called the elder.

Ewart, K. Dorothea. Cosimo de' Medici. 1899. (Foreign statesmen.) 92 M5612e

Bibliography, p.239–240.

Short and careful study of his domestic and foreign policy, treating only briefly of him as a patron and cultivator of art and letters.

MEDICI, Lorenzo de', prince of Florence.

Armstrong, Edward. Lorenzo de' Medici and Florence in the 15th century. 1896. (Heroes of the nations.)....92 M561a

A graphic and delightful volume in which the brilliant picture of the person and the age is brought vividly before us. Illustrated.

Carpenter, Edith. Lorenzo de' Medici; an historical portrait. 1893.....92 M561c

Brief study, taking a middle ground between admiration and severity of criticism, and pointing out his real accomplishments as poet, scholar, art critic, statesman and man of affairs.

Reumont, Alfred von. Lorenzo de' Medici the Magnificent; tr. fr. the German by Robert Harrison. 2v. 1876..92 M561re

"Not so much a biography of Lorenzo as a history of Italy at the time Lorenzo was its most important figure. The work of an able scholar and historian. The translation has numerous errors." C. K. Adams.

Roscoe, William. Life of Lorenzo de' Medici. 1891.....92 M561r

Memoir of Roscoe, p.19–48.

"Not to be regarded as a good authority. Roscoe's style introduced his books easily into public favor, but his works have been shown again and again to be inaccurate." C. K. Adams.

MEHEMET ALI.

Murray, Sir Charles Augustus. Short memoir of Mohammed Ali, founder of the vice-royalty of Egypt. 1898. .....92 M568m Valuable for the personal estimate and recollections of the author, who was English consul-general in Egypt, 1846–51, during Mohammed Ali's viceroyalty.

MELANCHTHON, Philipp.

Deane, David J. Philip Melancthon, the Wittemberg professor and theologian of the reformation. [1897.]....92 M581d Brief biography of Luther's associate in the Protestant reformation. For the general reader.

Richard, James William. Philip Melanchthon, the Protestant preceptor of Germany, 1497–1560. 1898.....92 M581r

Melanchthon's Funeral oration over Luther, p.381–392.

Does full justice to his character and work, without concealing his failings. Gives selections from his letters and other writings.

Wilson, Rev. George. Philip Melanchthon, 1497–1560. 1897. .....92 M581w

Having both thorough knowledge of his subject and literary skill Mr Wilson has made an interesting short sketch, giving a good account of the more personal side of his life and of his theological work.

MELBOURNE, William Lamb, viscount.

Dunckley, Henry. Lord Melbourne. 1890. (Prime ministers of Queen Victoria.).....92 M582d

Bibliographical note, p.5.

English Whig statesman, was prime minister in 1834 and 1835–41.

"A readable sketch of Queen Victoria's first Premier and early Mentor ...While Lord Melbourne was not, despite his Premiership, in any sense a great man, he bore no inconsiderable share in great events; and the story of his private life is sufficiently piquant to attract readers who might shrink from following Dr. Dunckley into the maze of British politics." Dial, 1891.

MELLOR, Richard.

Incidents in the life of a veteran organist, [Richard Mellor]. [Anonymous.] 1874.....r780 P21u METASTASIO, Pietro Antonio Domenico Buonaventura Trapassi.

Burney, Charles. Memoirs of the life and writings of Metastasio, in which are incorporated translations of his principal letters. 3v. 1796.....r92 M645b Consists chiefly of letters written after he became court poet at Vienna in 1729.

"He may be considered as the originator of a real improvement in the musical drama, though long since superseded. His popularity as a dramatic poet was great; the charm, grace, melody, and sweetness of his verse have induced the composers to overlook the absence of contrast and strong passion; and in consequence some of his libretti have been set to music thirty or forty times." Grove's Dictionary of music.

METTERNICH-WINNEBURG, Clemens Wenzel Nepomuk Lothar, fürst von.

Memoirs; ed. by Prince Richard Metternich. 5v. 1880–82..92 M648

The same. 5v. 1881–82.....r92 M648

Prince Metternich (1773–1859), an eminent Austrian statesman, was ambassador at Berlin and Paris, and for more than 30 years chancellor and minister of foreign affairs.

"No diplomatist, even in that age of intellectual giants, excelled, perhaps hardly any equalled, Metternich in the sagacious survey which he took of existing events, and the admirable tact with which he contrived to render them conducive to the interests of his country." Alison's History of Europe.

MEYER, Leopold von.

Biography of Leopold de Meyer. 1845.....r92 K433t

Bound with Thrane's "Friedrich Kuhlau."

Illustrated popular sketch of the Austrian pianist of the middle of the 19th century.

MEYERBEER, Giacomo.

Pélerinage d'un âme; ou, Expériences religieuses. 1899...92 M6752
M. Miel, a Frenchman and a Jesuit, driven by doubts to give up his religious career, came to America in 1855, where he was at first associated with the Unitarian church and the Transcendentalists, but, finally became an Episcopal clergyman. This interesting account of his "soul's pilgrimage" has an introduction by Dr McConnell, of Holy Trinity, Brooklyn.

MIÉVILLE, Sir Walter Frederick.

Under queen and khedive; the autobiography of an Anglo-Egyptian official. 1899.....92 M675
"Sir Walter Miéville is one of those who have worked under Lord Cromer...They who are acquainted with Egypt know that he did excellent work there for over 20 years, especially at the Quarantine Board over which for many years he presided. He was present during all the troubles of Alexandria and he was in the square Mahomed Ali when the news of the victory of Tel-el-Kebir arrived." Saturday review, 1899.

MILES, Gen. Nelson Appleton.

Personal recollections, embracing a brief view of the Civil war and the story of his Indian campaigns. 1896.....92 M685
The greater part of the book is devoted to an account of the campaigns against the Western Indians during the last 30 years. There are also chapters on Alaska, California and the development of transportation facilities in the West.

MILL, John Stuart.

Autobiography. 1887.....92 M687
"The practical record of the formation of an eminent thinker's mental habits and the succession of his mental attitudes...If Mr. Mill's autobiography has no literary grandeur, nor artistic variety, it has the rarer merit of presenting for our contemplation a character that was infested by none of the small passions, and warped by none of the more unintelligent attitudes of the human mind." John Morley, in Fortnightly review, 1874.

Courtney, William Leonard. Life of John Stuart Mill. 1889. (Great writers.).....92 M687c
Bibliography, apx. p.1–12.
Short critical biography of Mill's life and work, somewhat antagonistic in tone, and taking for granted in the reader some knowledge of his writings.

MILLAIS, Sir John Everett.

Millais, John Guille. Life and letters of Sir John Everett

Millais. 2v. 1899.....q92 M688m

Chronological list of Millais' work in oil, water and black-and-white, v.2, p.466–494.

"The 'Life and letters' is somewhat confusingly written, skipping back and forth and sometimes giving contradictory accounts of the same event; but it succeeds, on the whole, in drawing a clear picture of the cheery, hearty, determined, straight-forward, eminently British personality of the man...Profusely illustrated." Nation, 1900.

MILLER, Hugh.

My schools and schoolmasters; or, The story of my education. 1882.....92 M692

To the author of this autobiography, Thomas Carlyle wrote: "You have painted to us scenes of life, scenes of nature, which rarely come upon the canvas; such draughtsmen, too, are extremely rare in that and in other walks of painting." This book convincingly proves how much education there is out of school—in the experience and thought of every-day life. A work of especial value to readers who regret their lack of thorough formal instruction. Miller was a Scottish geologist and worked as a stone-mason in his youth.

MILLET, Jean François.

Cartwright, Julia Mary, afterward Mrs Ady. Jean François Millet; his life and letters. 1896.....q92 M696c

"The authoress has combined the information gathered from the books of Sensier and Piedagniel and much information from articles in the American magazines, together with a number of Millet's letters. The result is a very good and satisfactory treatise on the man." Russell Sturgis.

Sensier, Alfred. Jean-François Millet, peasant and painter. 1896. .....92 M696s

Biography of the author, p.5–8.

A peasant and the painter of peasants, whose typical figure was the laborer in the fields, Millet is one of the most interesting of artists. Sensier was an intimate friend and his biography is the authoritative one.

MILMAN, Henry Hart.

Milman, Arthur. Henry Hart Milman, dean of St. Paul's; a biographical sketch. 1900.....92 M711

" 'Scholar, poet, critic, historian, but above all these a perfect Christian gentleman,' Dean Milman was also a man of the world, and a most agreeable member of society at a period when society was most agreeable. Walter Scott and Byron were still alive when he entered it, and Sidney Smith, Whately, Macaulay, Stephen, Monckton Milnes, Rogers, Senior, Lords Holland and Lansdowne, and many others whom it would take too long to enumerate, were his contemporaries." Spectator, 1900.

MILNES, Richard Monckton, baron Houghton.

Reid, Sir Thomas Wemyss. Life, letters and friendships of Richard Monckton Milnes, first lord Houghton. 2v. 1891. .....92 M715r

Lord Houghton (1809–85) lived in intimate contact with the stirring events in England and Europe for half a century from 1835 onwards, and knew well the chief actors in them. He was an accomplished man of the world, a scholar and man of letters, a critical and philosophical spectator, the friend of Carlyle and Edward Fitzgerald and Tennyson, the political confidant of de Tocqueville and Guizot, equally at home with Landor in Florence and Emerson in Concord. The biography is generously appreciative. Condensed from Saturday review, 1890.

MILTON, John.

Garnett, Richard. Life of John Milton. 1890. (Great writers.) 92 M719g

Bibliography, apx. p.1–39.

Excellent short biography with clear and discriminating criticism of Milton's poetry and prose by a most competent critic. Mr Garnett differs with Mr Pattison (92 M719p) on the importance of the effect on Milton of the political and religious controversies of the time.

Masson, David. Life of John Milton. 7v. 1873–94.....92 M719m

"Professor Masson's 'Life of Milton' is an elaborate and often highly interesting study of all the contemporary movements—religious, political, and social—which may be supposed to have influenced the poet's genius or to have moulded the national history." Gardiner & Mullinger's Introduction to English history.

Pattison, Mark. Milton. [1880.] (English men of letters.) 92 M719p

A singularly able monograph, invaluable to students of Milton and his times.

Trent, William Peterfield. John Milton; a study of his life and works. 1899.....92 M719t

"Is welcome...because it aims and succeeds at getting at the heart of Milton as man and writer, because it is charged with a fine enthusiasm, while yet being quite sane and critical in tone." Spectator, 1899.

MIRABEAU, Honoré Gabriel Riquetti, comte de.

Memoirs, by himself, his father, his uncle and his adopted child. 4v. 1835–36.....r92 M735

These memoirs, biographical, literary and political, are the most important authority concerning Mirabeau.

Willert, Paul Ferdinand. Mirabeau. 1898. (Foreign statesmen.) 92 M735w

"A portrait which is not less large in treatment because it is small in scale...Mirabeau, after all, was eminent for a statesmanship unique in his time; and it is for this, as well as for his superb, unconscious gift of drama, that Mr. Willert justly esteems him." Spectator, 1898.

MISSING friends; the adventures of a Danish emigrant in Queensland, 1871–1880. 1892. (Adventure series.).....92 M743

True experiences of a carpenter as he wandered from place to place looking for work and adventures.

MITCHEL, John.

Dillon, William. Life of John Mitchel. 2v. 1888.....92 M7452d

Mitchel (1818–75), Irish nationalist. On account of his political utterances he was transported for treason, escaped to America and lived there and in Paris, always working for the Irish cause, until his return to Ireland in 1875. He was active on the Confederate side during the Civil war.

MITCHEL, Ormsby MacKnight.

Mitchel, Frederic Augustus. Ormsby MacKnight Mitchel. 1887. .....92 M745m

Life, by his son, of the American astronomer and general (1809–62). He was director of the Cincinnati observatory 1845–59, of the Dudley observatory at Albany 1859–61 and brigadier-general in the Civil war 1861–62. He was an enthusiastic lecturer and was largely instrumental in the establishment of some of the first observatories in the United States.

MITCHELL, Maria.

Life, letters and journals; comp. by P. M. Kendall. 1896...92 M748

"The life of the first American woman who attained eminence in science, and it is also the perfect picture of the ideally happy life of the woman who devotes herself to scientific pursuits." Nation, 1896.

MITFORD, Mary Russell.

Life, told by herself in letters to her friends; ed. by A. G.

K. L'Estrange. 2v. 1870.....92 M754
Miss Mitford (1787–1855) was an English novelist and dramatist. She was an inveterate letter-writer and corresponded with scores of people whom she never met. Her letters are as attractive as her books. The most interesting are those written to Sir William Elford and Miss Barrett. But her correspondents also included Macready, Mrs Hemans, Mrs Trollope, Dyce, Allan Cunningham, Haydon, Douglas Jerrold, Mary Howitt, Harriet Martineau, Mrs Jameson and Barry Cornwall.

L'Estrange, Alfred Guy Kingham, ed. Friendships of Mary Russell Mitford, as recorded in letters from her literary correspondents. 2v. 1882.....92 M754l Includes letters from Macready, Joanna Baillie, Charles Kemble, Harriet Martineau, N. P. Willis, Elizabeth Barrett, Ruskin, Crabb Robinson, Landor and many others.

MOFFAT, Robert.

Moffat, John Smith. Lives of Robert & Mary Moffat. [1888.] 92 M769m
Pioneers in South African mission work where they labored, 1817–70. It was Moffat who aroused Livingstone's interest in Africa.

MOHAMMED.

Irving, Washington. Mahomet and his successors. 2v. 1868. .....92 M772i
"One of the most attractive accounts of the rise of Mohammedanism, and of its development from 622 to 710. It cannot be said to contain any important additions to our knowledge of Mohammedanism; but, like all of Irving's histories, it does much to compensate for any lack of profound research by the charm of an unusually attractive style." C. K. Adams.

Muir, Sir William. Mahomet and Islam. [1895.].....92 M772mu
A sketch of the prophet's life from original sources, and a brief outline of his religion.

MOHAMMED ALI. See MEHEMET ALI.

MOHL, Mme Mary (Clarke).

O'Meara, Kathleen. Madame Mohl; her salon and her friends; a study of social life in Paris. 1886.....92 M7730
Of English birth, but brought up in France, Mme Mohl (1793–1883) was the friend of Mme Récamier, and for nearly 40 years her own receptions attracted a most talented circle.

MOLIÈRE, Jean Baptiste Poquelin.

Brown, Alexander Menzies. Molière and his medical associations; glimpses of the court and stage, the faculties and physicians of the grand siècle. 1897.....92 M791b
Bibliography, p.232.

MOLINOS, Miguel.

Bigelow, John. Molinos the Quietist. 1882.....92 M799b
Molinos was a Spanish theologian, born about 1630. He founded the sect of the Quietists, was sentenced to life imprisonment by the Inquisition and died in 1696.

MOLTKE, Helmuth, graf von.

Field-marshal Count Helmuth von Moltke as a correspondent; tr. by Mary Herms. 1893.....92 M811f
Selected letters to his father, sisters, brother and other relatives, and to several friends, on a variety of subjects.

Letters to his mother and brothers; tr. by Clara Bell and H. W. Fischer. 2v. 1891.....92 M811l
Biography of Frau von Moltke, v.1, p.3–6.
Gives an excellent idea of the real nature of the great German general. Illustrated.

Letters to his wife and other relatives; tr. by J. R. McIlraith. 2v. 1896.....92 M811
These letters show Moltke to be very different from the ordinary conception of him. To the world he was cold and silent, to his family and friends he was affectionate, kind and sympathetic to a remarkable degree. Though generally regarded as little better than a strategic machine we find in these letters that two of his chief characteristics are admiration of nature and fondness for children. He was a keen observer and his opinions of the people and countries which he saw in his long life are interesting and valuable.

Herms, Mary, tr. Moltke; his life and character. 1892...92 M811h

Largely made up of selections from his journals, letters and autobiographical notes. Includes a tale written at the age of 28. Illustrated with drawings by von Moltke and portraits.

MONK, George, duke of Albemarle.

Corbett, Julian Stafford. Monk. 1889. (English men of action.) 92 M828c

Biography of Gen. Monk, the restorer of Charles II; greatly exalts the hero.

MONMOUTH, James Scott, duke of.

Fea, Allan. King Monmouth; a history of the career of James Scott, "the Protestant duke," 1649–1685. 1902..92 M832f

"The ill-fated career...of James, Duke of Monmouth, the natural son of Charles II., forms an important chapter in English history; and... it is as a picture of the times. rather than of the man, that any recital of his adventures can be of value...The chief interest in Monmouth's career centres, of course, in his invasion from Holland soon after his father's death, and in the battle of Sedgemoor which put an end to his kingly pretensions...The new material drawn upon by the author makes his book well worth the writing." Dial, 1901.

MONROE, James, 1758–1831.

Adams, John Quincy. Lives of James Madison and James Monroe. 1851.....r92 M236a

"Eulogies rather than critical biographies, but valuable as the estimates of the character and services of these statesmen made by a contemporary who knew them well and who had himself taken a large part in the events whereof he writes." Larned's Literature of American history.

Gilman, Daniel Coit. James Monroe. 1893. (American statesmen.) 92 M836g

Bibliography, p.255–280.

The same. 1899. (American statesmen.).....r92 M836g

Bibliography, p.260–294.

"Short and simple account of the most important events in Monroe's life. When the book was written the Monroe manuscripts at Washington, while not inaccessible, were not easily handled...The publication of these papers may show the desirability of a more extended biography; but probably the general judgments of this book will not be overthrown." Larned's Literature of American history.

MONTAGU, Lady Mary (Pierrepont) Wortley.

Letters and works; ed. by Lord Wharncliffe. 2v. 1893.....92 M845

Memoir of Lady Montagu, by W. M. Thomas, v.1, p.1–48; Anecdotes of Lady Montagu, by Lady Louisa Stuart, v.1, p.49–121.

From 1718 to 1739, Lady Mary Wortley Montagu was one of the leaders in English society and letters, a friend of Pope, Sir Horace Walpole and Lord Hervey. She accompanied her husband on his embassy to Turkey, and the letters written during this time are her best. Her sprightliness and the easy elegance of her style, her pungent wit and shrewd observations make her letters justly famous.

Letters previous to 1717. 1834. (In Republic of letters, v.1, p.76–131.).....qr828 R35 v.1

MONTAGU, Victor Alexander.

A middy's recollections, 1853–1860. 1898.....92 M8452

The author began his sea-service when he was only 12 years old. He saw service in the Crimean war, the war with China in 1857, and in the mutiny in India, when he was a member of a naval brigade which did land duty.

MONTAIGNE, Michel Eyquem de.

Good and careful study.

MONTAL, Claude.

Dufau, Pierre Armand, and others. Claude Montal, facteur de pianos; sa vie et ses travaux. 1857.....qr92 M848d

Short sketch of the life and work of a blind man of unusual musical taste who was a maker of excellent pianos.

MONTALEMBERT, Charles Forbes René de Tryon, comte de.

Oliphant, Mrs Margaret Oliphant (Wilson). Memoir of Count de Montalembert; a chapter of recent French history. 2v. 1872.....92 M848o

Mrs Oliphant was personally acquainted with Montalembert, she wrote with the aid and sanction of his family, she had access to the best sources of information, and she produced a valuable and interesting memoir to which there is, however, one marked objection. She gives an undue prominence to the romantic, sentimental or sensational aspects of character, and places the clerical enthusiast in broad relief, but hardly does justice to the orator, statesman, author and accomplished man of the world. Condensed from Quarterly review, 1873.

MONTEFIORE, Sir Moses, & Judith (Cohen), lady.

Diaries, 1812–1883; ed. by L. Loewe. 2v. 1890.....92 M855

Sir Moses Montefiore (1784–1885) was a Jewish philanthropist of Anglo-Italian origin, who spent his enormous wealth in ameliorating the condition of the Jews in all parts of the world. His life is also interesting from its great length, he having lived to over a hundred years in perfect possession of his faculties.

MONTEFIORE, Sir Moses.

Wolf, Lucien. Sir Moses Montefiore, with selections from his letters and journals. 1885.....92 M855w

Well-written, brief biography of the Jewish philanthropist, much more interesting to general readers than the edition of his diaries, edited by Loewe.

MONTESQUIEU, Charles de Sécondat, baron de.

Sorel, Albert. Montesquieu; tr. by M. B. Anderson and E. P. Anderson. 1888. (Great French writers.).....92 M859s

"M. Sorel does his work very well. He gives us a fair notion of what Montesquieu did, but does not contribute much that is new. We knew before that Montesquieu was one of the pioneers of modern political philosophy; that he helped, without knowing or intending it, to pave the way for the French Revolution; and we strongly suspected that a great deal of his speculation was wholly groundless, or, rather that the groundwork of his speculation was often flimsy and unsubstantial. Perhaps the exhibition of this weakness is the best part of M. Sorel's work." Nation, 1888.

MONTFORT, Simon de, earl of Leicester.

Creighton, Mandell. Life of Simon de Montfort. 1895. (Historical biographies.).....92 M862c

Brief, reliable and interesting. Gives the most important events of his life, but does not go deeply into constitutional questions.

The life is written in English, the letters and orations in Latin.

MORELLET, André, abbé.

Lettres à Lord Shelburne, depuis marquis de Lansdowne, 1772–1803. 1898.....92 M8882

Lord Shelburne became acquainted with Morellet during a visit to Paris in 1771, and they remained firm friends, much of Shelburne's subsequent interest in France being due to this. The letters are concerned with the people, politics and literature of the time.

Mémoires sur le 18e siècle et sur la révolution, précédés de l'éloge par Lemontey. 2v. 1821.....r92 M8881

"Of value for the Philosophe period...Morellet, though not a man of extraordinary ability, or of specially amiable or estimable character, was in both respects a fair specimen of the man of letters of all work of the time." Encyclopædia Britannica.

MORRIS, Clara.

Life on the stage; my personal experiences and recollections. 1901. .....92 M915

Some of these chapters have appeared in "McClure's magazine."

Varied and interesting experiences of the American actress, who began her stage career as a ballet girl in 1862 and became one of the most successful emotional actresses of her time.

MORRIS, Gouverneur, 1752–1816.

Diary and letters, 1789–1816; ed. by A. C. Morris. 1888...92 M916m

Letters of our minister to France and notes which he jotted down daily during that most momentous epoch of modern history—the epoch of the revolution in France.

Roosevelt, Theodore. Gouverneur Morris. 1893. (American statesmen.).....92 M916r

The same. 1899. (American statesmen.).....r92 M916r1

"In the portrayal of this energetic and brilliant statesman he [Mr Roosevelt] found a congenial task. Occasionally the author indulges in flippant comments, or in exaggerated praise or blame, but on the whole his method and temper are commendable. The life of Morris in Paris during the days of the French Revolution is entertainingly described." Larned's Literature of American history.

Sparks, Jared. Life of Gouverneur Morris, with selections from his correspondence, and miscellaneous papers. 3v. 1832. .....r92 M916s

"The early standard life of Morris. The first volume contains a biography into which are woven extracts from his correspondence and diary, conscientiously expurgated and revised according to the Sparks method...This work has been supplanted to a certain extent as a biography by Roosevelt's Morris." Larned's Literature of American history.

MORRIS, John Gottlieb.

Life reminiscences of an old Lutheran minister; an autobiography. 1896.....92 M917

Morris (1803–95) was a Lutheran minister in Baltimore, librarian of Peabody institute, founder of the "Lutheran observer," lecturer, scientist and author.

MORRIS, Robert, 1734–1806.

Sumner, William Graham. Robert Morris. 1892. (Makers of America.).....92 M918s

Abridged from the author's longer work "The financier and the finances of the American revolution," (336.7 S95).

"There is hardly sufficient personality in this epitome to arouse interest in Morris as a man, but it brings out in clear relief the financial methods, both public and private, that prevailed during our Revolutionary period." Nation, 1892.

MORRIS, William.

Mackail, John William. Life of William Morris. 2v. 1899.....92 M9182m

This biography of the poet, decorator, printer, and craftsman in many arts was undertaken at the special request of the late Sir Edward Burne-Jones. The author had unreserved access to all materials in the possession of the family of William Morris. His crowded, brave and useful life is put on record with excellent judgment of essentials and non-essentials.

Vallance, Aymer. William Morris; his art, his writings and his public life; a record. 1897.....qr92 M918v

"Chronological list of the printed works of William Morris," p.447–452; "Publications of the Kelmscott press," p.453–454.

This does not claim to be a biography or an account of Mr Morris's private life. It is an enlargement of "The art of William Morris" by the same author, the most important addition being a chapter on Morris's connection with the socialistic movement. The author was expressly permitted by Mr Morris to bring out this book and every facility was given for reproducing a number of ornaments of the Kelmscott press. Perhaps the distinctive feature of the book is the chapter "Of the firm of Morris & co., decorators."

ing his important speeches. 2v. 1899.....92 M9272f

"In any list of a dozen men most prominent in civil life during the civil war period, Oliver P. Morton's name would...be found...His biographer has given us a book which will help the historian, for it is a fair presentation of the acts and events of Morton's life, without overstraining to force them into consistency or to justify them...Done with moderation and intelligent restraint, as well as with good literary judgment." American historical review, 1899.

MOSCHELES, Felix.

Fragments of an autobiography. 1899.....92 M9312

The author's special gift as a writer of reminiscences was shown in his "In Bohemia with Du Maurier." In this volume he tells of his student life in Paris, of his love affairs, of sketching tours with Claude Raoul Dupont, ocean travel with Henry Irving and Ellen Terry, life in New York and Chicago, and meetings with Mazzini, Rossini and Robert Browning. The volume is illustrated with portraits of the author's mother, of Mazzini and Browning, reproduced from the author's paintings.

The same. 1873. (Amateur series.).....r92 M931

The author (1794–1870) was one of the foremost pianists of the early 19th century, and this book is an interesting record of his life and work, and also a chronicle of the musical history of the time covered by his diaries (1814–70).

MOTLEY, John Lothrop.

Correspondence; ed. by G. W. Curtis. 2v. 1889.....q92 M941

One of the most delightful collections of letters ever written, embracing his life in Russia, Holland, England and Austria, and his intimate friendship with Bismarck. His letters written during the Civil war are vivid pictures of the intensity of feeling existing at that time.

Holmes, Oliver Wendell. John Lothrop Motley; a memoir. 1889.....92 M941h

"A fascinating book." H. E. Krehbiel.

Gehring, Franz. Mozart. (Great musicians.).....92 M948g

"We can pay it no higher compliment than in saying that the little volume reads like an abstract of Jahn's great work. The style is very clear and thoroughly interesting, and though any detailed account of Mozart's compositions was obviously impossible, the short criticisms given in the course of the narrative are just and discriminating." Athenæum, 1883.

built upon previous notices; he has thus produced a trustworthy, and, so far as possible, an exhaustive account of Mozart's life...The result is a work which must be considered as the most trustworthy and serviceable biography that could be produced by a skilful employment of the materials generally accessible. Holmes has not attempted to draw from hitherto unknown sources. He neither carries his researches to any depth nor offers any original opinions or explanations." Jahn's Life of Mozart.

Jahn, Otto. W. A. Mozart [in German]. 2v. 1867.....92 M948j

The same. 4v. 1856–59.....r92 M948j

The book is not a life of Mozart so much as an encyclopædia of musical art and biography. Not only have we the narrative of the life of Mozart himself from his cradle to his grave in the smallest particulars, with a detailed examination of each work, but we have the history of the rise and progress of each branch of music that Mozart touched. We have also full accounts of the social and musical condition of the various cities visited by Mozart and biographical notices of every person whom his biographer has occasion to mention. Condensed from preface by Sir George Grove.

MÜLLER, Max.

Auld lang syne, 1st–2d ser. 2v. 1898–99.....92 M959

Being ordered by his doctor to go away for a rest, and to take no books with him, Max Müller relieved the tedium of his vacation by writing these fragments of autobiographical reminiscence which are full of interest. In v.1, one chapter is devoted to his "recollections," four contain his "literary recollections," two his "recollections of royalties," and a final chapter on "beggars" gives some entertaining stories of his experiences with needy students, crafty adventurers and literary impostors. v.2, "My Indian friends," includes a chapter on the poets of the Veda, with metrical translations of some of their hymns.

My autobiography; a fragment. 1901.....92 M959m

Supplements Müller's "Auld lang syne," which contains recollections of his friends, but very little about his own life and career. The present volume covers his childhood at Dessau, school-days at Leipzig, and the early part of his career at Oxford.

Hazlitt, William. Life of Napoleon Buonaparte. 3v. 1894.....92 N129ha

"Not...a correct view of Napoleon as he is revealed to us by later investigators, but still one of the best of those originally published in English. Unlike most of the histories of Napoleon written on the north side of the Channel, it shows a strong sympathy for the career of its subject. Méneval was for some years Napoleon's private secretary.

"The value of these memoirs is scarcely proportional to their bulk. They contain neither inspiring narrative nor profound analysis. The Baron was incapable of either. It is impossible to compare them with the thoughtful memoirs of the Chancellor Pasquier, and they do not contain a trace of the spice that enlivens the reminiscences of the Rémusat family...Unstinted adulation and extravagant panegyric are the warp and woof of these books...Nevertheless...[they] are not entirely devoid of interest." Nation, 1895.

"An able attempt to stem the resistless tide of condemnation that set in with the publication of Napoleon's correspondence." C. K. Adams.

Rose, John Holland. Life of Napoleon I, including new materials from the British official records. 2v. 1901–02. .....92 N129ros

"This book is rather biographical than historical—that is to say, it deals with Napoleon rather than with the Napoleonic epoch...The chief contribution which Mr. Rose makes to the materials of Napoleon's biography consists in his personal study of the British official records of the Napoleonic times...and...[his] systematic examination of the archives of our Foreign Office, War Office, and Admiralty, from 1795 to 1815, has yielded much valuable information." Athenæum, 1902.

Rosebery, Archibald Philip Primrose, earl of. Napoleon; the last phase. 1900.....92 N129ro

"The bulk of the book is devoted to three subjects: the relations between the British government and Napoleon arising out of the captive's custody; Napoleon's life at Longwood...and finally, his character considered in the light of his whole career...The style is beautifully clear and has the characteristics of clever, compact and well-sustained conversation...Judging him by the standard of sheer capacity, Lord Rosebery raises Napoleon to a height beyond which the enthusiasm of the devotee could hardly soar." Nation, 1900.

O'KEEFFE, John.

Recollections of his life. 2v. 1826.....r92 O222

O'Keeffe (1747–1833) studied under Benjamin West, but early gave up painting, first for acting, and later for dramatic writing. These rambling recollections are full of gossip of the social and dramatic world in London and Dublin.

OLIPHANT, Laurence.

Oliphant, Mrs Margaret Oliphant (Wilson). Memoir of the life of Laurence Oliphant and of Alice Oliphant his wife. 2v. 1891.....92 O2330

Biography of two very remarkable characters and lives. In Laurence Oliphant (1829–88) a taste for adventure, wit, humor, shrewd business ability and knowledge of the world were singularly combined with a strange religious development. Both he and his wife, a beautiful and attractive woman, had great fascination for all who knew them.

List of Mrs Oliphant's works, p.441–451.
The memoir left by Mrs Oliphant was begun in 1860 and relates chiefly to the struggles of her early widowhood. She made no addition to the work till 1864 and after this there is a long gap of 21 years, when the narrative was taken up again at intervals until 1892. Her manuscript has been supplemented by letters, the whole being connected with the slightest possible thread of story.

Carte, Thomas. Life of James, duke of Ormond, containing an account of the most remarkable affairs of his time and particularly of Ireland under his government, with an appendix and a collection of letters. 6v. 1851..92 O285c v.1–2. To Sept. 1643.
v.3. Sept. 1643–1660.
v.4. 1660–1668.
v.5–6. Letters.
James Butler (1610–88), first duke of Ormond, became lord lieutenant of Ireland in 1644. After the execution of Charles I, he attached himself to the cause of Charles II, whom he accompanied into exile. At the restoration in 1662, he was returned to the lord-lieutenancy of Ireland. The biography by Carte is quoted in the "Dictionary of national biography" as one of the chief authorities for the life of the duke of Ormond, especially the collection of letters in the appendix.

Comes down only to 1847.

"We could wish the life had been written by one who had lived more in his society, and could to a certain extent have Boswellized him, as he would have repaid the process more perhaps than most of our public men. As it is, the book, though a valuable contribution to history, is upon the whole rather dry, and very unlike what one's imagination had previously conceived of a life of Lord Palmerston." Academy, 1874.

Lorne, John George Edward Henry Douglas Sutherland Campbell, marquis of. Viscount Palmerston. 1892. (Prime ministers of Queen Victoria.) 92 P198l

"The Marquis of Lorne has wisely availed himself of the enormous amount of correspondence, official and private, left behind by the 'fair and square' political fighter whose official career extended over nearly sixty years, allowing him to speak wherever feasible, and thus indicate in his own way the object and motives that influenced him... An interesting chapter on Lord Palmerston's personal characteristics rounds out the view of the politician and statesman." Dial, 1892.

Sanders, Lloyd Charles. Life of Viscount Palmerston. 1888. (Statesmen series.) 92 P198s

Considered the best short biography of Lord Palmerston.

"A brief but exceedingly interesting and well illustrated memoir of the great French military surgeon who followed the wars, off and on, for 32 years, who practised for more than half-a-century in Paris, who was surgeon to four Kings, and whose life extended from Louis XII. to Henri IV., from the battle of Spurs to the battle of Ivry, from Flodden Field to the Armada. With excellent judgment, Mr. Paget has allowed his hero to tell much of his own story. Few books give so graphic a picture of many of the social aspects of Paré's day." The Times (London).

"The Diary of Pepys is unquestionably one of the most singular and one of the most entertaining in any languge. Though the author was not without royal favor in the days of Charles II, he was not above the work of making record in his diary of the most insignificant affairs ...The diary covers the interesting period from 1659 to 1669, and throws a flood of light on the character of that singular decade. It deals with social far more than with political affairs; but the student of politics will here find not only much that will entertain, but also something that will instruct." C. K. Adams.

"The style is graphic, and the volume is as easy to read and as entertaining as a sensational novel...The author is very decided in his views, and, as a whole, eminently fair in his handling of disputed points." Nation, 1897.

PETERBOROUGH, Charles Mordaunt, earl of.

Stebbing, William. Peterborough. 1890. (English men of action.).....92 P4552s English general and admiral (1658–1735).
"His parliamentary speeches and letters show him to have been clever, witty, incisive in thought and word. He was a generous and judicious patron of men of letters and science...Swift, however, who had a certain affection for him, calls him with friendly insight 'the ramblingest lying rogue on earth'...The common idea that he was a distinguished commander of fleets or armies rests only on his own statements; while the official documents and the reports of the men who were with him in Spain testify to his incompetence." Dictionary of national biography.

PETRARCH.

Robinson, James Harvey, & Rolfe, H. W. Petrarch, the first modern scholar and man of letters; a selection from his correspondence with Boccaccio and other friends; tr. fr. the original Latin, with historical introductions and notes. 1898.....92 P463r
"Purpose...is essentially historical...Views Petrarch not as a poet, nor even, primarily, as a many-sided man of genius, but as a mirror of his age—a mirror in which are reflected all the momentous contrasts between waning mediævalism and the dawning Renaissance. Petrarch knew almost everyone worth knowing in those days; consequently few historical sources can rival his letters in value and interest." Preface.
"Petrarch's life, views and character, his friends, and the political and literary conditions of his day are so vividly set before us, and the letters and the explanations are so skilfully fitted together, that the work forms a complete, homogeneous, and lifelike picture of the poet and his time." Nation, 1898.

"The writer has not the vanity to offer this Work as a History. He presumes no more, than having collected, and preserved, a fund of materials, which may afford light and information to the future inquirer; who could not have found them in any of the books hitherto printed ...The anecdotes which he has here committed to paper, were, all of them, in their day, very well known. They were the subjects of public conversation. But they have not been published." Preface.

Memoirs; ed. by Casimir Stryienski, tr. by Lionel Strachey. 1900. .....92 P853
"Not a complete record, for they break off at 1820, and the author lived on at Paris until the closing years of the Second Empire...Was a great-granddaughter of Stanislaus Poniatowski...and the grandniece of Stanislaus Augustus, the last king of Poland...The Countess describes a visit to Paris in 1810 very fully; otherwise, the action centres in Poland. Prior to 1806, her family interests were paramount, but when the war of the Third Coalition brought the French to Warsaw, she came in contact with Napoleon and his staff. After the Grand Duchy of Warsaw had crumbled, she witnessed the return of the Russians. The last episode of the volume is the marriage of the Grand Duke Constantine...She had the liveliness of the Polish nobles, and she knows how to communicate it to her memoirs." Nation, 1900.

POTOCKA, Hélène (Massalska), comtesse.

Memoirs of the princesse de Ligne; ed. by Lucien Perey, tr. by Laura Ensor. 2v. 1887.....92 P8532

Covers the period of her school days at a convent school near Paris, her marriage with Prince Charles de Ligne, and her subsequent life to the time when she became the wife of Count Vincent Potocki. Some doubt has been cast on the genuineness of the countess's journal and the accuracy of M. Perey's supplementary narrative. The popular picture of the "Countess Potocka" by Mme Le Brun, is generally supposed to be a portrait of this countess.

The subject of this biography was an Indian ascetic (1833–86). He was supposed to possess powers of thought-reading, predicting future events, seeing things at a distance, healing disease by simply willing, and the power of changing a man's thought by simply touching his body. He believed that all religions are true, and in explaining this side of his nature the author describes the various religions of India and their expounders. He was looked upon as half God and half man, and his influence among his people was marvelous.

Adams, Henry, b. 1838. John Randolph. 1892. (American statesmen.). 92 R188a

The same. 1899. (American statesmen.).....r92 R188a

Carefully prepared, though unsympathetic, biography. Of value to the student of political history.

"We already have a larger and more complete life of Randolph, by Hugh A. Garland...The two sketch the Virginian from altogether different standpoints...The ingenuous and unconscious sympathy of Garland, and the evident antipathy of Adams, make them almost biographers of their sections as well as of their subjects." Nation, 1882.

RANJIT SINGH.

Griffin, Sir Lepel Henry. Ranjít Singh. 1892. (Rulers of India.) 92 R191g

Ranjit Singh (1780–1839) was an ambitious East Indian prince, called the founder of the Sikh empire. In 1809 he made a treaty with the British, with whom he always maintained peaceful relations.

RAPHAEL.

Duppa, Richard. Michel Angelo by Richard Duppa, with Raffaello, by Quatremère de Quincy. 1846.....r92 M663d

Catalogue of the principal works of Michel Angelo, in sculpture, painting, design and architecture, p.164–188. List of the works of Raffaello, p.452–457.

The life of Michael Angelo was written early in the 19th century under the influence of the English revival of interest in Italian art, particularly that of Michael Angelo. The biography of Raphael, published in 1824, is inaccurate in many respects.

RAUCH, Christian Daniel.

RÉCAMIER, Mme Jeanne Françoise Adélaïde (Bernard).

Memoirs and correspondence; tr. by I. M. Luyster. 1867..92 R262

The memoir was written by Mme Récamier's adopted daughter, to whom she bequeathed her papers with the understanding that they were to be used for this purpose. The correspondence, though it contains few letters of Mme Récamier's, is very interesting. It consists almost entirely of letters from distinguished people, those of Chateaubriand, for instance, forming a complete autobiography of the last 25 years of his life.

REED, Mrs Esther (de Berdt).

Reed, William Bradford. Life of Esther de Berdt, afterwards Esther Reed. 1853.....r92 R282r

Mrs Reed (1746–80) was the wife of Joseph Reed, president of the Supreme executive council of Pennsylvania.

REED, James.

In memoriam James Reed, 1793–1878. [Anonymous.].....r92 R2832

Mr Reed was successively a resident of Washington, Pa., Allegheny and Pittsburgh. He was a successful clockmaker and silversmith, and a manufacturer of geodetic and astronomical instruments.

REED, Gen. Joseph.

Bancroft, George. Joseph Reed; a historical essay. 1867..r92 R283b

"Gov. Reed was charged with meditating a treacherous abandonment of the American cause, and a determination to go over to the British, and George Bancroft in his history introduced the statement on what appeared to be reliable testimony. A bitter controversy ensued, in which William B. Reed took part, and it was ultimately shown that he had been confounded with Col. Charles Reed." Appletons' cyclopædia of American biography.

Reed, William Bradford. Life and correspondence of Joseph Reed. 2v. 1847.....r92 R283r

"President Reed was military secretary of Washington, Adjutant-general of the Continental Army, Member of Congress, and President of the Executive Council of the State of Pennsylvania. The confidential relations of the commander-in-chief and his military secretary give to these letters great value...Although there has been some controversy concerning them, their importance is universally conceded. They throw light not only on the Revolutionary, but also on the Constitutional, period." C. K. Adams.

Reprints of the documents published in the Reed-Cadwalader controversy, with a preface reflecting on Joseph Reed's character. It was this publication that induced Mr W. B. Reed to print the evidences of the Valley Forge forgeries.

REED, Mary.

Jackson, John, of the Mission to lepers in India and the East. Mary Reed, missionary to the lepers. [1900.].....92 R283j

On her return to America in 1890 from India, where she had been for several years a missionary, Miss Reed discovered that she had fallen a victim to leprosy. Realizing that there was no hope of cure, she went back to India to live and work among the lepers. This little book is a record of the good she accomplished.

REEVE, Henry.

Laughton, John Knox. Memoirs of the life and correspondence of Henry Reeve. 2v. 1898.....92 R287l

English writer (1813–95), editor of the "Edinburgh review."

"His cosmopolitan training, intimacy with the most distinguished men of his time, brilliant social position, acquaintance with the innermost springs of politics, wide literary sympathies, and marked ability as a writer, well fitted him for the post. During the forty years of his sway, the 'Review' bore the impress of his strong individuality." Dictionary of national biography.

"To no more competent source could we look for a lifelike biography of Ernest Renan. Madame Darmesteter knew him intimately in his later years, and became, after her marriage with the eminent scholar James Darmesteter, almost a member of Renan's family circle...The influence exercised on Renan by his sister, his sojourn at the Seminary—every episode of his long, storm-tossed life is of course dealt with, but the very real charm of this small volume of less than 300 pages lies in the writer's insight into Renan's character and personality in his old age...and in her analysis of his various books and opinions." Literature, 1897.

King René (1409–80), was a patron of literature and art.

"His Court at Aix became a famous resort for artists and poets. He sought to revive the poetry of old Provence, and his devotion to the forms of a rapidly disappearing chivalry gained him the name of the last of the Troubadours. Agriculture and manufactures were also encouraged and he earned his title of 'the Good.'" New international encyclopædia.

We wish that we might go beyond this tribute of respect, and commend the volume as a piece of good writing and adequate criticism; but this is frankly impossible...Nevertheless, the book is welcome, and we could not well dispense with it, although it does little to assist us in comprehension of the rare and beautiful spirit exhaled from these poems that constitute one of the chief glories of our Victorian literature." Dial, 1898.

ROSSETTI, Dante Gabriel.

Cary, Elisabeth Luther. The Rossettis; Dante Gabriel and Christina. 1900.....92 R744c

Dante Gabriel Rossetti, the English artist-poet, is generally recognized as the leader of the preraphaelites. This study of his life and work contains photogravure reproductions of the characteristic paintings of Rossetti, which form the collection of Samuel Bancroft, jr., of Wilmington, Delaware. Two chapters on the life and work of his poet-sister, Christina Rossetti, are added.

Rossetti, William Michael. Dante Gabriel Rossetti; his family letters, with a memoir. 2v. 1895.....92 R744r

The first volume contains the memoir proper, the second consisting entirely of letters.

"In a sense and to a degree the life of Dante Gabriel Rossetti is the story of the growth and development of English art in his day and generation. Its side lights come from the world of poetry and letters. It is the key to that enigma, the Pre-Raphaelite movement." Literary world, 1896.

Rossetti, William Michael, ed. Ruskin, Rossetti, pre-Raphaelitism; papers, 1854–1862. 1899.....92 R744ro

A volume of correspondence chiefly between John Ruskin and Dante Gabriel Rossetti, containing much interesting art criticism and affording new knowledge of the character and genius of Rossetti. Extracts from the diaries of Madox Brown and W. M. Rossetti are given and the volume also contains some miscellaneous items pertaining to the preraphaelites and their exhibition of 1857. The illustration of the book is in photogravure, the pictures with one exception being Rossetti's work.

One of the greatest French writers of the 18th century (1712–78).

"To write memoirs of one's own life was one of the fancies of the time, but like all else, it became in Rousseau's hand something more far-reaching and sincere than a passing fashion. Other people wrote polite histories of their outer lives, amply coloured with romantic decorations. Rousseau with unqualified veracity plunged into the inmost depths, hiding nothing that would be likely to make him either ridiculous or hateful in common opinion, and inventing nothing that could attract much sympathy or much admiration." Morley's Rousseau.

RUSKIN, John.

Præterita; scenes and thoughts in my life. 3v. 1885.....92 R899

Author, artist and social reformer (1819–1900).

"The most important work of his last period was the fragment of autobiography, undertaken at the suggestion of his friend, Prof. C. E. Norton, and published at intervals during 1885–9 under the title of 'Præterita'...This book contains occasional passages of description as fine as anything in 'Modern Painters,' and is marked throughout by limpid ease in the narrative, by the keenness of its recollections, and by brilliant character-sketches of friends and acquaintances." Dictionary of national biography.

Collingwood, William Gershom. Life and work of John Ruskin. 2v. 1894.....92 R899c

Author was for many years Ruskin's private secretary.

"His book, which, for the rest, is a noble tribute to his own devotion to its subject, and a by no means valueless contribution to the history of a man who will always be an object of great interest in the history of literature, is otherwise simply a labored and almost indiscriminate as well as unintelligent laudation of all Mr. Ruskin has ever done or proposed to do." Nation, 1893.

Hobson, John Atkinson. John Ruskin, social reformer. 1898.....92 R899h

Gives a short biography of Mr Ruskin taken from "Præterita," "Fors," and other papers; and a summary of his views on political economy, socialism, machinery and industrial towns, education, and woman's place. The author is himself a social reformer and has written some books on economics.

Meynell, Mrs Alice (Thompson). John Ruskin. 1900. (Modern English writers.) 92 R899me

"Method...is to consider successively and briefly Ruskin's principal works, devoting to each book...a special chapter. Each of these chapters sets forth the leading ideas of the work considered, includes a few illustrative extracts, and brings to the discussion a certain element of the author's personal idiosyncrasy. The author is herself a writer of such distinction that this personal note always proves interesting, although it is sometimes irritating, and often excites to protest." Dial, 1900.

Reid, Stuart J. Lord John Russell. 1895. (Prime ministers of Queen Victoria.) 92 R915r

"From the days when Napoleon was changing the map of Europe at his will until the time of our own Civil war, Lord John Russell was in the House of Commons, and prominent from the first; and this splendid service was crowned with five years more of distinguished service as Earl Russell in the Foreign Office and as Prime minister. During this whole career Lord John was the champion of the Whig principles of religious toleration and equality...The cause of parliamentary reform was so peculiarly his own that he was chosen to introduce the great measure of 1832, although not yet of cabinet rank." Dial, 1896.

RUSSELL, Rachel (Wriothesley), lady.

Stepney, Catherine (Pollok), lady. Memoirs of Lady Russell and Lady Herbert, 1623–1723. 1898 ..... 92 R917s

Rachel, lady Russell, was the wife of that Lord Russell who was beheaded in 1683 on a charge of treason. A woman of fine mind she was her husband's adviser and even after his death followed public events with keen interest. Lady Herbert was the wife of Sir Edward Herbert, an adherent of the Stuarts. There is an interesting account of her rescue of her husband after the battle of Naseby and their escape to France.

O'Brien, Richard Barry. Life of Lord Russell of Killowen. 1901. ..... 92 R9130

Lord Charles Russell (1832–1900) was an eminent English lawyer; from 1894 to the time of his death, lord chief justice of England.

"This life of a lawyer by a lawyer is a success...A harmony between subject and writer is pleasantly felt all through the book, and is helped by the fact that Mr. O'Brien's biographical intentions were known to Lord Russell, who willingly talked to the purpose." Academy, 1901.

RUTHERFORD, Samuel.

Letters, 1639–1661; ed. by Thomas Smith. 1875 ..... 92 R935

A Scottish Presbyterian clergyman, theologian and controversialist, professor at Edinburgh university, from which he was banished for two years, 1636–38, on account of his severe Calvinism. He wrote "Lex Rex," which was publicly burned by the authorities, and other works, but is best known from his "Letters," first published in 1664.

Barine, Arvède, (pseud. of Mme Charles Vincens). Bernardin de St. Pierre; tr. by J. E. Gordon. 1893. (Great French writers.) 92 S149b

French novelist (1737–1814), author of "Paul and Virginia."

"The life of Bernardin de Saint-Pierre is so unusual, so interesting, so suggestive and amusing, that the grumpiest of Anglo-Saxons need not complain of the fact that no series of Great French Writers would be complete which did not contain the name of the author of 'Paul and Virginia.'" Augustine Birrell, in preface.

SAINTE-BEUVE, Charles Augustin.

Lettres à la princesse. 1873 ..... r92 S156

French critic and essayist (1804–69).

Letters written to Princess Mathilde, the daughter of Jerome Bonaparte, and published after Sainte-Beuve's death.

Souvenirs et indiscrétions. 1872 ..... r92 S156s

Contains some miscellaneous letters, notes, etc. by Sainte-Beuve, together with a biography of him by M. Troubat, his literary executor, and various fragments relative to his life and work.

SALA, George Augustus Henry.

Life and adventures, written by himself. 2v. 1896 ..... 92 S159

He was a precocious boy and gives many childish reminiscences of distinguished people, mostly musicians and actors. His own life work was chiefly literary. He was editor, contributor, novelist, dramatist, but was principally distinguished as a special correspondent, in which capacity he made many expeditions and was present on many notable occasions.

SALADIN, sultan of Egypt and Syria.

Poole, Stanley Lane-. Saladin, and the fall of the kingdom of Jerusalem. 1898. (Heroes of the nations.).....92 S1591p Famous sultan of Egypt and Syria (1137–93).

"There are comparatively few books in English, which deal in a scholarly and trustworthy way with Muslim history and to these Mr. Stanley Lane-Poole has made a welcome addition. The book is based throughout on a sound study of the original sources, and yet the weight of learning is borne lightly, and few lay readers will guess how much solid work has been put into it." Nation, 1899.

Yusuf ibn Rafi ibn Tamin, called Ibn Shaddād. Life of Saladin; [ed. by C. W. Wilson]. 1897.....92 S1591y
The author (1145–1234) was a noted traditionist and the Kadi of Aleppo. He accompanied Saladin on his later campaigns.

SALISBURY, Robert Arthur Talbot Gascoyne Cecil, marquis of.

Traill, Henry Duff. Marquis of Salisbury. 1891. (Prime ministers of Queen Victoria.).....92 S167t
English conservative statesman of the latter half of the 19th century, several times prime minister.
"Mr. Traill has done his work as thoroughly as space and other conditions permit; and, while making no effort to hide his strong conservative bias and his warm sympathy with Lord Salisbury's methods and ideals, he has not erred obtrusively on the side of hero-worship." Dial, 1892.

SALT, Henry.

Halls, John James. Life and correspondence of Henry Salt. 2v. 1834.....r92 S1761h Traveler and collector of antiquities (1780–1827). He was appointed in 1815 British consul-general in Egypt, where he collected many antiquities and made some discoveries.

SALT, Sir Titus.

Burnley, James. Sir Titus Salt and George Moore. 1885. (The world's workers.).....92 S176b
Both were successful business men and philanthropists.

SALVINI, Tommaso.

Leaves from [his] autobiography. 1893.....92 S185
Celebrated Italian tragedian, born in 1829.
"Tells us of his youth, of his first humble appearance on the stage, of his early successes, of his later triumphs, and of his stellar wanderings. He gives us his impressions, not only of his compatriots, Modena, Rossi, and Ristori, but also of Rachel, Sarah Bernhardt, Coquelin, Mounet-Sully, Edwin Booth, and Henry Irving...The frankness of Signor Salvini's interest in himself is its own excuse; he is right in believing himself so great an actor that what interests him shall interest us also." Nation, 1893.

SAMUELS, Capt. Samuel.

From the forecastle to the cabin. 1887.....92 S193
"Is a stirring tale of adventure. It is written in a homely, manly language which befits one who has earned distinction by deeds rather than words,—with but little boastfulness, although it relates the speedy promotion of the author in his career on the sea and the honors and fortune he gained through valor and integrity." Dial, 1887.

Translation of a part of her "L'histoire de ma vie."

Letters; tr. by R. L. de Beaufort. 3v. 1886.....92 S213
Biographical sketch of George Sand, v.1, p.9–40.
"Their intrinsic interest, the large additions that they make to the knowledge of their author's character, the varied scenes and the numerous attractive personalities that they bring before us, can neither escape the notice, nor disappoint the expectation, of any competent reader." Athenæum, 1886.

Lettres d'un voyageur. 1869.....92 S213l
The first of these, dated 1834, gives the author's impressions of Italy.

Among the others are letters addressed to Liszt, to Meyerbeer, and others. The "Encyclopædia Britannica" says of them, "They are specially valuable to the student of George Sand, as they give her views of men and things, not refracted and distorted by the exigencies of a novel."

Caro, Elme Marie. George Sand. 1892. (Great French writers.) 92 S213c

"His running exposition, both of the individual novels and of the Sandian conception of a novel in general, is most adroit and far from inadequate. He has managed with great skill to lay emphasis, without tediously dwelling, on the points in which that conception and its embodiment in words correct the faults of the prevailing school of novels, and he has...made great use of that charming correspondence with Flaubert, which exhibits both correspondents so fully and so agreeably." Athenæum, 1888.

Thomas, Bertha. George Sand. 1883. (Famous women.)..92 S213t

"To a rapid and concise account of outward events and material circumstances are added clear and attractive sketches of the books which best lend themselves to such a résumé, and which are most important as illustrations." Nation, 1883.

SANDS, Admiral Benjamin Franklin.

From reefer to rear-admiral; reminiscences and journal jottings of nearly half a century of naval life, 1827–1874. 1899. .....92 S221

The narrative includes incidents never before told in the lives of Farragut, Porter, Rodgers, Rowan, Ammen, Jenkins and Worden; anecdotes of Generals Grant, French and others; reminiscences of Garibaldi and Dom Pedro I of Brazil; also some account of the revolutions in South America, the slave-trade on the west coast of Africa, the Mexican war, and the War of the rebellion. The work also tells of the origin and growth of the United States coast survey, and of the foundation and nucleus of the United States naval observatory.

SARCEY, Francisque.

Conférences et conférenciers. 1897.....92 S243c

Also published with the title "Souvenirs d'âge mûr."

Recollections of the popular French dramatic critic and lecturer (1828–99). This volume supplements his "Souvenirs de jeunesse," which embodies his memories of youth.

Souvenirs de jeunesse. 1895.....92 S243

"M. Sarcey may not be a great writer...but what a charming talker he is! There can be no greater pleasure than to read his theatrical feuilleton in the Temps—rambling, disconnected notes, full of personal allusions, remote as possible from any attempt at fine writing, and full of rich hints and the very best independent criticism. In the 'Souvenirs' the same qualities are found. The tone rises, however, but only a little, when he gives graphic details of his academic career, both as a pupil in the École Normale and as an instructor in several provincial faculties." Nation, 1885.

Sarpi (1552–1623) is best known as the historian of the Council of Trent and the adviser of the Signory of Venice in its quarrel with Paul V.

"It does not contain, apparently, the results of any original research, but recites in somewhat exaggerated style the well-known facts in the career of the remarkable man whom the author characterizes on the title-page as 'the greatest of the Venetians.'" Nation, 1894.

SARTAIN, John.

Reminiscences of a very old man, 1808–1897. 1899.....92 S249

"As a boy he was assistant to a maker of fireworks who had charge of the 'effects' at Covent Garden Theatre, and thus came into contact with many of the actors of the day. Later he became an engraver, and, crossing to America in 1830, knew many of the artists of that period, Inman, Sully, Neagle, and others. Still later, as magazine proprietor, he met many of the earlier literary men of America...Mr. Sartain's style is not particularly vivid, and of many of the interesting people he knew he has not much to tell us; but the book is, nevertheless, an entertaining one." Nation, 1899.

Lucas, Herbert. Fra Girolamo Savonarola; a biographical study based on contemporary documents. 1899.....92 S2681

"Bibliographical list," p.11–20.

"This volume had its origin in the fiery controversy which the fourth centenary of Savonarola's death revived. Its first appearance was in the form of articles in the Tablet, representing what may be called the Jesuit point of view, while simultaneously the very divergent view of the Dominicans found expression in a series of papers in the Irish Rosary. Since that time Father Lucas has revised and in great measure rewritten his work...It is most carefully derived from the original sources, which are scattered through numerous periodicals and monographs, not easy for the English reader to obtain." English historical review, 1901.

"We have now the whole correspondence brought together chronologically, the letters being left intact as originally written, and made more valuable by a most complete series of explanatory notes giving references to the papers alluded to, as well as short biographical notices of people mentioned in the correspondence. The care and trouble which has been bestowed upon this most essential adjunct to a set of letters containing references to memoirs which for us represent the scientific literature of a former generation, has thus resulted in a distinct contribution to the history of science, and the editors have laid all workers in the domains of physics and chemistry under a debt of obligation." Nature, 1900.

List of Schubert's compositions, v.2, p.266–295; appendix on some of the original scores of Schubert, by George Grove, v.2, p.297–332.

"Has historical value from the fact that it was the first extended work in the field." H. E. Krehbiel.

SCHUMANN, Robert.

Early letters; tr. by May Herbert. 1888.....r92 S392

"Have enabled many both in Germany and in this country to know and comprehend the composer as an artist—to feel and be inspired by his noble enthusiasm for all that was pure and lofty in art...No less valuable than the light thrown on Schumann's personal character is the information to be found in these letters as to the origin and meaning of many of his works." Athenæum, 1888.

Maitland, John Alexander Fuller-. Schumann. 1895. (Great musicians.).....92 S392m

Chronological table of Schumann's life and works, p.137–146.

"Although Mr. Maitland does not profess to have written an exhaustive biography of Schumann, or brought forward any new facts of importance, his little sketch is one of the most satisfactory and entertaining of the useful series which Doctor Hueffer is editing." Nation, 1885.

SCOTT, Sir Walter.

Familiar letters. 2v. 1894.....92 S431f

"The letters unequally cover the time from 1797, when Scott, twenty-six years old, was known only as a young barrister of fair prospects and the author of some poetical translations from the German, down to 1825, the year before his earthquake of calamity. They are conveniently separated into chapters, mostly of one year each; and at the beginning of each chapter is inserted a little chronological table of family events and literary achievements." Nation, 1894.

Journal. 1891 ..... 92 S431

The period covered is from November 1825 to 1832.

"When Lockhart came to that stage in Sir Walter's career when it was appropriate to make extracts from his 'Journal,' he stated his inability to give them in full owing to there being many references to living persons who might be pained or inconvenienced if these appeared in print...Now that the whole is in print, the new matter seems to be nearly as valuable as that which appears in the 'Life'...The manner in which the 'Journal' has been prepared for publication deserves hearty praise." Athenæum, 1890.

"Who can reproduce the subtle charm and pathos of Scott's Journal?... It is monotonous, yet it is full of interest; it contains no new information, yet it adds immensely to our knowledge of the man who was, not only in Scotland, but throughout the English-speaking world, the literary monarch of his day." Nation, 1891.

Mémoires. 3v. 1842.....r92 S456s

A French politician and author. He served in the American revolution, was ambassador to Russia, was a councilor of state under the empire, and was made a peer at the restoration. He died in 1830.

SÉGUR, Philippe Paul, comte de.

Aide-de-camp of Napoleon; memoirs. 1895.....92 S456

The author was a French general and historian, who served in the Napoleonic campaigns.

"The personal and anecdotal portion of Count Philippe de Ségur's voluminous 'History, Memoirs, and Miscellanea,' published in 1873. The memoir is one of the most charming and graphic as well as most instructive records of Napoleonic times." Dial, 1895.

SEIDL, Anton.

Finck, Henry Theophilus, ed. Anton Seidl; a memorial by his friends. 1899.....q92 S458f

Musical conductor (1850–98).

This volume contains a biographical sketch by H. T. Finck, an account of Seidl's funeral services, some personal tributes, appreciations by musical critics and singers, letters to Seidl from Richard Wagner and others, and an account of Seidl's literary work.

SELBORNE, Roundell Palmer, earl of.

Memorials. 2v. in 4. 1896–98.....92 S464

v.1, pt.1–2. Family and personal, 1766–1865.

v.2, pt.1–2. Personal and political, 1865–1895.

The family and personal chronicle tells of the earl's brilliant career at Oxford and his rapid rise at the bar, including a few important political reminiscences, one being the "Alabama claim." v.2 is of more general interest, covering his two terms as lord chancellor, his distinguished service in the settlement of the Treaty of Washington and the Geneva arbitration, and his work in reforming the machinery of law.

SELWYN, George Augustus.

George Selwyn; his letters and his life; ed. by E. S. Roscoe and Helen Clergue. 1899.....92 S469

"The merit of George Selwyn's letters can be estimated for the first time by the general public...He owes to his friend Horace Walpole the seat which he has long occupied in the temple of fame as a wit... Despite the bad literary form of Selwyn's letters, they have an historical value which redeems many shortcomings and fully justifies their publication...Readers of these letters learn much that is new about the manners of the period and the associates of Selwyn." Athenæum, 1900.

These associates included George III, Fox, Pitt, Horace Walpole and most of the other well-known men of the time.

SEVIER, John.

Gilmore, James Roberts. John Sevier as a commonwealth-builder; a sequel to The rear-guard of the Revolution. 1887.....92 S511g

A biography of the builder of the commonwealth of Tennessee. In this, as in the "Rear-guard of the Revolution," the author has transformed the characters of history into living men, and presented their achievements in a spirited narrative.

SÉVIGNÉ, Marie de Rabutin-Chantal, marquise de.

Letters; ed. by Mrs Hale. 1895.....92 S5113

"The letters of Madame de Sévigné are unrivaled for their fresh charm, shrewd wit, and easy gaiety of heart. They form an almost complete and familiar chronicle of the Court and high society of the time [1669–95]. Their vivacity scarcely ever flags, whether she is telling of Court life, of scenes at the baths of Vichy, or of country society and diversions. She writes spontaneously, sketches vivid pictures in a few rapid strokes, or gives in sparkling narrative the social happenings of the day, meanwhile unwittingly revealing her own character." New international encyclopædia.

The same; tr. by H. L. Williams. 1897. (Great French writers.) 92 S5113bl

"M. Boissier says modestly that he has not had the ambition to write anything new. 'After having read over the letters of Mme. de Sévigné, I will simply say what impression they have made on my mind, without asking myself if I repeat what others have said before me: this is the only method which I shall follow in this book.' M. Boissier takes in turn the woman, the writer, the work—a somewhat artificial division." Nation, 1887.

Colonial jurist (1652–1730), who came to Massachusetts in 1661 and was graduated from Harvard in 1671.

"With Sewall's well-known diary as his guiding thread, and with constant quotation from it, the author sketches many features of the life and characters of the New Englanders of the second and third generation, their conceptions of Church and State, their business characteristics, their home life, their courtships, their literature, their relations to the other races with which they were brought in contact. If he has added little that was novel, he has described the traits of the age with which he deals with much clearness of insight and fair-mindedness." Nation, 1897.

"The part played by those Boston kinsmen—Sewall, May, Phillips, and Edmund Quincy—in the small beginnings of the anti-slavery enterprise, and in its subsequent mighty propaganda to the end, is known to all readers of the Life of Garrison...Mrs. Tiffany has found her material but scanty—no great store of letters even...She enables one to comprehend, however, the mixture of radicalism and conservatism, modesty and courage, womanly tenderness and manly initiative, censure and toleration, which marked this genuine philanthropist." Nation, 1898.

SEWARD, William Henry.

Autobiography. 3v. 1891.....r92 S514

Seward was governor of New York, 1838–42; United States senator, 1849–61; and secretary of state during the administrations of Lincoln and Johnson.

"The autobiographical portion consists of less than one fourth of the first volume, ending with the year 1834...The narrative of early life, his entrance into and rapid progress in politics is candid and interesting. The memoir by his son begins with the year 1831. A large part of this consists of extracts from Seward's letters, journals and speeches ...The editor has endeavored to make the work 'the story of a life, not the history of a time.'" Larned's Literature of American history.

Bancroft, Frederic. Life of William Henry Seward. 2v. 1900. .....92 S514b

"He divides the statesman's career into two contrasted parts at the point of his defeat for the Presidential nomination in 1860. The preceding part is supposed to be dominated by a selfish ambition for place and power, the succeeding by abnegation of self and intense patriotic devotion to the cause of his country. In the first, the author not only makes a general attribution of unworthy purpose, but follows every specific act with the explanation in accordance with it, as if to run no risk that the reader should be misled by its apparent rectitude or merit...[The] second volume is a positive addition to our historical knowledge of its period, and a fine presentation of the incidents, the inner qualities, and the strategy of a notable diplomatic contest." Nation, 1900.

The same. 1899. (American statesmen.) r92 S514l

"It is recognized that Seward made mistakes; on the other hand the loftiness of Seward's purpose and the strength of his character are impressed upon the reader. The work is more a partial history of the period covered than a biography." Larned's Literature of American history.

Pasolini, Pietro Desiderio, conte. Catherine Sforza; tr. by Paul Sylvester. 1898 ..... 92 S523p

Catherine Sforza, called the Madonna of Imola, a woman of great beauty, strong character and remarkable intellect, was a prominent figure in Italian political life in the 15th century. One of her sons was the famous Medici called Giovanni delle Bande Nere. The author of this work has made extensive researches in Italian and foreign archives and had other sources of information not open to Catherine's earlier biographers.

SHAFTESBURY, Anthony Ashley Cooper, earl of, 1621–83.

Traill, Henry Duff. Shaftesbury, the first earl. 1886. (English worthies.) 92 S5252t

"The inclusion of the first Earl of Shaftesbury among the 'English worthies' is gratifying to those who believe that few characters, and no period, of English history more deserve or will better repay research than the character of Anthony Ashley Cooper and the reign of Charles II...Mr. Traill has, in default of original research, shown good judgment in the choice of his sources of information...For its literary merits Mr. Traill's book fully deserves and will doubtless find many readers. None the less Shaftesbury still awaits a biographer." Athenæum, 1886.

SHAFTESBURY, Anthony Ashley Cooper, earl of, 1671–1713.

Life, unpublished letters and philosophical regimen; ed. by Benjamin Rand. 1900 ..... 92 S5253

"Dr. Rand has discovered among the mass of Shaftesbury papers in the Record office two note-books filled with meditations by the moralist for his own edification...These fill 272 pages of the volume...The letters...are of interest in reference to his own philosophy, especially in relation to that of Leibnitz. There are also many political letters... Other more personal letters...go to increase our esteem for his conception of morals." Nation, 1901.

Marshall, Mrs Florence A. (Thomas). Life & letters of Mary Wollstonecraft Shelley. 2v. 1889.....92 S5451m

"The first volume of Mrs. Marshall's ably and graphically written biography closes with the death of Shelley. The second is given to the twenty-nine years of Mary's widowhood, during which she was forced to labor unremittingly with her pen to eke out the scanty sum which Shelley's father, Sir Timothy, reluctantly allowed for the maintenance of his daughter-in-law and grandson." Nation, 1890.

"The 'new details' of which Mr. Biagi speaks were, we believe, published a few years ago in Harper's Magazine; and the present book consists substantially in a reprint of that article, preceded by a recapitulation of the facts already known concerning the closing days of Shelley. New details...fall into two classes: documents, drawn from the archives of Tuscany and Florence, concerning the discovery of the corpse, and the negotiations of the poet's friends for its possession and disposal; and depositions of the old fishermen and other local persons who witnessed the last scene on the beach at Viareggio." Academy, 1898.

"He has condensed the old Shelley papers by Hogg, Peacock, Trelawney, Medwin, Hunt, Lady Shelley, Stockdale, and other lesser writers, the correspondence and diaries of Godwin, and the modern investigations of Garnett, Rossetti, Forman, and Shelley students of less note; and he has amplified the biography constructed from these sources by manuscript papers of the Shelley family and others...The work is necessarily henceforth the authority for the facts of Shelley's career. It is in a strict sense a biography. It deals with the events of his life, and touches only incidentally and briefly his works and genius, his contemporaries, and the history of his times." Nation, 1887.

Salt, Henry Stephens. Percy Bysshe Shelley. 1892.....92 S545sa

"Writen from the point of view of intimate sympathy with the poet's doctrines and personal character...The book is both brief and pleasant to read, and leaves a much clearer impression on the mind than Mr. Sharp's book does; and, although it is a less cultured and judicial performance than Mr. Symonds's little volume, it has a more distinct aim and unity, and deserves an equal popularity. Its aim is to depict Shelley as the writer feels he was, and what Mr. Salt feels Shelley was is simply an advanced embodiment of the higher civilization which it should be the aim of man's existence to attain." Athenæum, 1888.

Sharp, William. Life of Percy Bysshe Shelley. 1887. (Great writers.).....92 S545sh

"Mr. Sharp has been at pains to give a fair summary of the facts before him, while Mr. Anderson's bibliography, appended to Mr. Sharp's 'Life,' is a useful contribution to the literature of the subject. Mr. Sharp's work is not that of a partisan; indeed, it seems to betray almost too slight an interest in Shelley for the attainment of a high position." Athenæum, 1888.

"Seems to hold a brief against the man whose life he is writing...Those who have read any of his books will know just what to expect in this last, and they will not be disappointed when they find contradictory inaccuracies, a bustling vivacity, a general slovenliness, and a most interesting subject...The most valuable part of Mr. Fitzgerald's volumes is devoted to Mrs. Norton...The account of another gifted member of this singularly gifted family, the late Sheridan Le Fanu, the novelist, is also welcome. The few pages given to Sheridan Knowles, the dramatist, are altogether inadequate. Nor is the treatment of 'Tom' Sheridan or of the other children besides Mrs. Norton at all satisfactory." Nation, 1887.

Oliphant, Mrs Margaret Oliphant (Wilson). Sheridan. [1883.] (English men of letters.) 92 S552o

"Mrs. Oliphant thinks Sheridan has been overrated. Rae, William Fraser. Sheridan; a biography. 2v. 1896 .... 92 S552r

"Mr. Rae has told the romantic and diversified story of Sheridan's career well and temperately...His book at once takes its place as the standard one on the subject—the one in which the real Sheridan, as contradistinguished from the half-mythical Sheridan of previous memoirs, is portrayed with all attainable clearness. To release this brilliant and singularly winning and humane figure from the region of largely calumnious fiction was a worthy task; and Mr. Rae has done it...satisfactorily." Dial, 1896.

"By a stroke of good fortune, the author of the 'School for Scandal' has at last found a friendly biographer...Watkins was a political opponent; Moore was a trifler who betrayed his hero; Prof. Smyth was another traitor...and Mrs. Oliphant combined the acme of incompetence with the utmost carelessness...Mr. Sanders is not blind to Sheridan's very obvious faults, and he makes no attempt to gloss over his many failings. He has gone to the sources for his facts, although he is able to add but little to the discoveries of earlier investigators, except possibly in his fuller use of more recent political biographies to illustrate Sheridan's public life." Nation, 1891.

The same. 2v. 1895.....r92 S5531

"Ends with the convening of Congress, Dec. 1894. It is a very frank self-revelation. The long public career of the author-subject (began 1854) and especially his identification with the financial history of the U. S. during and since the Civil War, make his book a history of American politics for the period. It is, however, the work of a strong party man, and is also written largely from recollections without sufficient verifications. The book is unequal, the interest continuous. It may also be especially consulted for the political history of Ohio. Though written entertainingly, it makes no effort at literary finish." Larned's Literature of American history.

"The free use he makes of his letters, orders, and reports gives a very great interest and value to his book. He is never dull, and he contrives to break up and enliven even the accounts of the movements of troops so that the attention never seriously flags...His memoirs close with the great review in Washington, but he appends a concluding chapter on the military lessons of the war, which is full of knowledge, wisdom, and sound sense." Atlantic monthly, 1875.

They also assist in the proper interpretation of critical events of the Civil War period. General Sherman's letters are particularly frank and energetically express his antagonism to politicians and political methods." Larned's Literature of American history.

"Although among the earliest of the lives of Sherman, this was among the most authentic. It was written by officers who served with Sherman, and were given access to his papers. They also had the coöperation of leading generals and others who had part in the events narrated. The book is well and clearly written, but is of course subject to the drawback that the Official records were not then available, and many important topics were not fully understood. It was, however, a leading authority till Sherman published his own memoirs ten years later." Larned's Literature of American history.

SIDNEY, Sir Philip.
Bourne, Henry Richard Fox. Sir Philip Sidney; type of English chivalry in the Elizabethan age. 1891. (Heroes of the nations.).....92 S569b
List of principal authorities, p.9–10.
"Mr. Fox Bourne's claim to write about Sidney is well established. His original 'Memoir of Sir Philip Sidney' is among the best things of its kind. Critics have rejoiced...to throw it in the teeth of succeeding commentators, and, in a word, the first serious rival of Mr. Fox Bourne A. D. '62 is Mr. Fox Bourne A. D. '92. The thirty years have perhaps shed as much light on the period of Sidney as on any other in literature. And the light has so shone on Mr. Bourne that he tells his story afresh, disowning...certain hot errors of his youthful blood... In a marked degree he succeeds in picturing to us the possibilities of noble boyhood and manhood in Elizabethan days. But it is Sidney for Sidney's sake who has our interest and attention throughout the volume." Athenæum, 1892.
Symonds, John Addington. Sir Philip Sidney. [1887.] (English men of letters.).....92 S569s
Bibliography, p.5–6.
"There are plenty of readers who will doubtless be fascinated by Mr. Symonds's well-written narrative, which rightly treats Sidney as something more than a man of letters, and the critical expositions of Sidney's writings will certainly be of service to those who do not possess Sidney's books. But the biography is little more than a résumé of Mr. Fox Bourne's well-known work." Athenæum, 1887.

SIEMENS, Werner von.
Personal recollections; tr. by W. C. Coupland. 1893.....92 S571
A German electrical engineer (1816–92) whose researches in electricity resulted in discoveries and improvements of great value.

from his reminiscences, diaries and correspondence. 2v. 1866. .....92 S584f

Silliman (1779–1864) was for many years professor of natural science at Yale. He was honored and beloved as a teacher and acquired even greater distinction as a lecturer, especially on geology.

"Many entertaining reminiscences of his distinguished contemporaries are given in these volumes." New international encyclopædia.

SIMMONS, George.

British rifle man; the journals and correspondence of Major George Simmons, rifle brigade, during the Peninsular war and the campaign of Waterloo; ed. by Willoughby Verner. 1899.....92 S5922

An account of the opinions and daily experiences of a young officer of a regiment, which, because it was armed with the then newly introduced weapon, the rifle, saw more fighting than most others in the Peninsula.

"It would be hard to find anywhere a picture of a soldier's life in war so faithful, so true, so simply vivid as this." Nation, 1899.

SIMMS, William Gilmore.

Link, Samuel Albert. William Gilmore Simms, the novelist, the poet. 1896. (Pioneers of Southern literature.)..92 S592l

American novelist (1806–70). Very small volume of less than 100 pages.

Trent, William Peterfield. William Gilmore Simms. 1892. (American men of letters.).....92 S592t

Chief sources consulted, p.5–6.

"Partial bibliography of Simms's writings," p.333–342.

"Has carefully examined and sifted for his purpose all the available material...The limits prescribed for volumes of the series are somewhat too brief to permit Mr. Trent to carry out fully his plan of treating Simms's life as that of a typical Southerner to be explained by the history of the South during the first seven decades of the nineteenth century...As James Fenimore Cooper was a robust and prolific American Scott, so was Simms a robust and prolific Southern Cooper." Dial, 1892.

SIMPSON, Sir James Young, 1811–70.

Gordon, Henry Laing. Sir James Young Simpson and chloroform, 1811–1870. 1898. (Masters of medicine.)..92 S613g

Brief biography by his daughter.

SINDIA, Mádhava Ráo.

Keene, Henry George. Mádhava Ráo Sindia. 1891. (Rulers of India.).....92 S616k

"In a series which deals with all the great epochs of Indian history it was well that room should be made for the figure of the bold and skilful Maratha leader [1750–94], to whose greatness in council as in war all competent judges, from Grant Duff to Mr. Keene, have borne ungrudging witness...Of his hero's exploits and adventures Mr. Keene writes as one thoroughly steeped in the history and the general atmosphere of a period which he handled so effectively many years ago in his 'Fall of the Mughal Empire.'" Athenæum, 1892.

SIXTUS V, pope.

Hübner, Joseph Alexander, freiherr von. Life and times of Sixtus the Fifth. 2v. 1872.....92 S625h

Pope from 1585 to 1590.

"Within two years he issued seventy-two bulls for the reform of religious orders alone...Left the reputation of a zealous and austere pope—with the pernicious qualities inseparable from such a character in his age—of a stern and terrible but just and magnanimous temporal magistrate, of a great sovereign in an age of great sovereigns...Most valuable part of [the book] is the rich appendix of documents." Richard Garnett, in Encyclopædia Britannica.

SMETHAM, James.

Letters, with an introductory memoir; ed. by Sarah Smetham and William Davies. 1892.....92 S638

Smetham (1821–89) was an English artist and essayist.

"Smetham's familiar letters...possess a high...interest. They are to a certain extent prepared compositions, owing to his habit of noting down his thoughts for future use, but this does not interfere with their ease and freshness. Written from a full heart on the wide range of subjects which interested him, they have the first qualification of good letter-writing—vitality." Dictionary of national biography.

SMITH, Adam.

Haldane, Richard Burdon. Life of Adam Smith. 1887. (Great writers.).....92 S642h

Bibliography, apx. p.1–10.

Eminent political economist (1723–90).

"The value of Mr. Haldane's volume lies in its being a clear and popular exposition of the doctrines in The Wealth of Nations...and of the effect of these doctrines on the political and mercantile history of the world." Spectator, 1887.

Macpherson, Hector Carsewell. Adam Smith. 1899. (Famous Scots series.).....92 S642m

List of published works of Adam Smith, p.157–160.

"It is hastily assumed in some quarters that Adam Smith as an economic thinker has become antiquated. This book is the outcome of a desire, long entertained, to show the vitality of the principles which underlie Smith's great work, and to trace their relation to the fruitful generalisations associated with the Evolution theory." Preface.

Rae, John, b. 1845. Life of Adam Smith. 1895.....92 S642r

"Upon the whole, we think that Mr. Rae has performed a difficult task with a good degree of success. He cannot be said to have reanimated his subject, and brought him before us as a living and speaking man. The outlines of the portrait are faint and the colors are dim. But students of economics and of the art of government will be glad to have all the relics of their great teacher collected and arranged with the respectful care shown by Mr. Rae." Nation, 1895.

"Admirable and exhaustive account of all the known facts." Dictionary of national biography.

SMITH, Mrs Elizabeth (Grant).

Memoirs of a Highland lady, 1797–1830; ed. by Lady Strachey. 1898.....92 S646

Written to interest the children and nieces of the author in the scenes of her early life.

"In its way the chronicle is a very intimate one, for it tells the whole inner history of a respectably important family, tells it, too, with no omissions of darker scenes, till one is fairly forced into a lively interest in the whole kin. We hear of the early days in Lincoln's Inn Fields and of the holidays at watering places; then of the long years in the Highlands, varied with seasons in Edinburgh...The style is without art, but direct, vivid, and at times fired with genuine emotion." Academy, 1898.

SMITH, Gerrit.

Frothingham, Octavius Brooks. Gerrit Smith. 1879.....92 S648f

American philanthropist (1797–1874), prominent in antislavery and other reform movements.

SMITH, Sir Harry George Wakelyn.

Autobiography of Sir Harry Smith, baronet of Aliwal on the Sutlej; ed. with supplementary chapters of G. C. M. Smith. 2v. 1902.....92 S649

Bibliography, v.1, p.19.

"It is characteristic of Sir Harry Smith that he wrote the greater part of his autobiography in two months. Nearly six hundred pages, alive with energy, were 'scrawled over by him at full gallop' between August 11th, 1844, and October 15th...Few men ever saw wider or harder service. Africa knew him, and India. At Aliwal he won perhaps his chiefest triumph, and in South Africa he has left at Aliwal North, at Harrismith, and at Ladysmith the memory of his achievements...Harry Smith ranks among the happiest men that ever lived. But the book is not only happy; it is packed with military wisdom...and all soldiers may study it with profit." Spectator, 1901.

SMITH, James, 1775–1839.

Beavan, Arthur H. James and Horace Smith; a family narrative, based upon hitherto unpublished private diaries, letters and other documents. 1899.....92 S651b

An interesting picture of London life in the early 19th century. Both brothers acquired some literary fame, and conjointly wrote a rather clever collection of parodies entitled "Rejected addresses."

SMITH, Sir James Edward.

Memoir and correspondence. 2v. 1832.....r92 S651

One of the most distinguished English botanists (1759–1828), author of many books, among them the work generally known as Sowerby's "English botany." By the excellent scholarship, agreeable style and happy illustration of his books and lectures he did much to popularize the study of botany.

SMITH, Capt. John.

Woods, Katharine Pearson. True story of Captain John Smith. 1901.....92 S652w

Contents: His education. — His work as colonist and governor. — His recompense.

The vivid and agreeable narrative makes Smith's historical career very real to us. The book is well illustrated, and some of the maps are here reproduced for the first time.

SMITH, Matson Meier-.

Smith, Mrs Mary Stuart (White) Meier-. Matson Meier-Smith; memories of his life and work. 1891.....92 S655s

The subject of this memoir (1826–87) was an Episcopal clergyman, for a number of years connected with the Philadelphia divinity school.

SMITH, Sydney.

Holland, Saba (Smith), lady. Memoir of Sydney Smith, with a selection from his letters; ed. by Mrs Austin. 1869. .....92 S661h

"She has produced, not exactly a regular biography...but a vivid and interesting picture of the more private career and domestic life of her father...With these pictures by his daughter are mingled many reminiscences by friends and quotations from unfinished productions." Spectator, 1855.

Reid, Stuart J. Sketch of the life and times of Sydney Smith; based on family documents and the recollections of personal friends. 1884.....92 S661r English clergyman, wit and essayist (1771–1845).

"The main facts of Sydney Smith's life were so clearly and gracefully set forth, and his character was in most of its aspects so fully illustrated, by Lady Holland and Mrs. Austin in the 'Life and Letters' which appeared some twenty years ago, that it was not possible for Mr. Reid to do more than gather up stray details from outside sources of information, published and unpublished, and avail himself of the opportunity afforded him of extracting from the family documents such items as it had not been thought desirable to print during the lifetime of persons to whom they partly referred. There was room for much profitable gleaning, however...and Mr. Reid has produced an interesting and useful book." Athenæum, 1884.

SMITH, Gen. Thomas Kilby.

Smith, Walter George. Life and letters of Thomas Kilby Smith, 1820–1887. 1898.....92 S662s

Gen. Smith's letters, mostly to his family, are exceptionally full and graphic, and his opinions of the men with whom he was so closely associated are very interesting. The portion of the memoir relating to the war is largely compiled from the war records and from official orders and reports.

Williams, Robert Folkestone. Memoirs of Sophia Dorothea, consort of George I; chiefly from the secret archives of Hanover, Brunswick, Berlin and Vienna, with letters and other documents. 2v. 1845.....92 S712w

Sophia Dorothea (1666–1726) was the divorced wife of George, crown prince of Hanover and later George I of England. This book is intended as a vindication of her character and conduct.

"Much as we may sympathize with our author's motive, we cannot but very closely question the sources of his information; there is at least, as he allows, something 'very curious' in this Diary of the repudiated Princess...The doubts which we have hinted as to the genuineness of the dramatic diary, are corroborated by its internal evidence." Athenæum, 1845.

STAAL, Marguerite Jeanne (Cordier), baronne de.

Memoirs; tr. by Selina Bathurst. 1877.....92 S775

Madame de Staal (1684–1750) at the age of 27 entered the household of the duchess of Maine as a maid-of-waiting, in which position she remained for nearly 40 years. At one time during this period she was imprisoned in the Bastille. Her memoirs contain descriptions of the manners of her time and a curious glimpse of prison life in the Bastille, but their interest is more personal than historic.

Duffy, Bella. Madame de Staël. 1887. (Famous women.)..92 S778d

French writer (1766–1817).

"She has given, on the whole, a clear and lively narrative...About Madame de Staël's intellectual eminence she sometimes uses rather extravagant language, though she tones it down considerably when she comes to discuss the documents in detail." Athenæum, 1888.

Sorel, Albert. Mme de Staël, [in French]. 1890. (Les grands écrivains français.).....92 S778so

"He is evidently well acquainted with his heroine's actual writings and he has usually (a very weak point with his countrymen) read what foreigners have to say of her...He is, though distinctly apologetic... by no means uncritical, and his own intimate acquaintance with the politics of the period adds to his competence for dealing with the subject. We know no book which we could so well recommend to any one who wished to acquire a general impression of the author of 'Corinne.'" Athenæum, 1891.

Stevens, Abel. Madame de Staël; a study of her life and times, the first revolution and the first empire. 2v. 1881. .....92 S778s

"Dr. Stevens has consulted almost everything available, and has digested the whole into a narrative which is sufficiently readable, accompanying it with criticisms of the work as well as of the life of his subject. Both as a biographer and as a critic he is far too laudatory. His reiterated statement that Madame de Staël is the first of women authors is almost ludicrously exaggerated." Athenæum, 1881.

STAMBULOFF, Stepan.

Beaman, Ardern George Hulme-. M. Stambuloff. 1895. (Public men of to-day.).....92 S783b

Bulgarian statesman (1855–95).

"Political partisanship runs too high in Bulgaria for the truth easily to be made known, and the author of the present book frankly tells us that he writes from the point of view of the friends of the murdered minister. Nevertheless, he is fair enough...It comes out clearly that Prince Alexander was merely a handsome puppet, and that the whole credit for his military successes must be ascribed to Stambuloff. On the other hand, the reckless violence of Stambuloff is clearly established even by a friendly pen." Athenæum, 1895.

STANLEY, Arthur Penrhyn, dean.

Letters and verses, 1829–1881. 1895.....92 S787

English scholar and divine (1815–81).

"Dean Stanley's biographer has tried rather a dangerous experiment in publishing a sort of supplement to the 'Life and Letters.' It inevitably covers much the same ground as the earlier work...On the whole, however, the correspondence, if judged on its own merits, seems quite worth giving to the world. It is also the case that whereas the biography dealt, for the most part, with Dean Stanley the theologian, the present collection throws fresh and interesting light on that far more fascinating being Dean Stanley the man." Athenæum, 1895.

Bradley, George Granville. Recollections of Arthur Penrhyn Stanley. 1883.....92 S787b

"Within the compass of a hundred and fifty pages Dr. Bradley has contrived to give an animated and interesting account of his lamented predecessor in the Deanery of Westminster...He lays just emphasis on Stanley's courtesy, his unfailing charity, his noble courage, his eagerness to see what is good in the opinions of those from whom he differed, his hatred of oppression and sympathy with the oppressed. The style is sometimes too rhetorical, but in popular lectures such a fault is excusable." Athenæum, 1883.

Prothero, Rowland Edmund. Life and correspondence of Arthur Penrhyn Stanley. 2v. 1894.....92 S787p

"Well born, always in sufficiently affluent circumstances, of an extraordinary precocity in talent...able to indulge constantly in foreign travel and see the best people and the most attractive places, a prominent man in his University at a stirring time, a dignitary of the two most interesting churches in England, an intimate friend...of the highest placed persons in the land, and perfectly unaffected with and amiable to everybody—it could not be but that Stanley should live a life altogether unusually full, varied, and interesting. At home, at Rugby, at Oxford, at Canterbury...and finally at Westminster, he was always 'in the thick of it'...Of this varied, happy, and certainly very human existence an excellent account will be found here." Saturday review, 1893.

Maria Josepha Holroyd (1771–1863) was the daughter of the Lord Sheffield who is chiefly known as the intimate friend of Gibbon. In 1796 she was married to Mr Stanley, afterwards Lord Stanley of Alderley. These delightful, entertaining letters give an excellent picture of the every-day life of her time.

STANTON, Edwin McMasters.

Gorham, George Congdon. Life and public services of Edwin M. Stanton. 2v. 1899.....92 S7922g

Although this work contains a sketch of Stanton's early life, his professional career and his general characteristics, its main purpose is to present the record of his relation to the Civil war, and to mark the place in history to which his services to the country entitled him. His public life embraced the secession winter of 1860–61, three years of the Civil war—1862–65, and three years of the reconstruction struggle which followed. Mr Gorham, who describes President Lincoln's great war secretary, was an intimate friend and great admirer of Mr Stanton. He has written this work with the sanction and assistance of Stanton's family, and has had the privilege of examining Stanton's personal correspondence.

Dobson, Austin. Richard Steele. 1886. (English worthies.).....92 S814d

"Macaulay's sinister dislike and Thackeray's warm affection have created a Steele for us; and, different as their judgments are, the divergence springs rather from their temperaments than from their conceptions of the culprit's career. Mr. Dobson suggests...that the flings of the one and the condonements of the other of the two great literary portrait painters are too much in one tone of color. For himself, he has tried, though against tremendous rhetorical odds, to give us only a natural picture." Nation, 1886.

Montgomery, Henry R. Memoirs of the life and writings of Sir Richard Steele. 2v. 1865.....92 S814m

"In Mr. Montgomery we recognize much industry, with a want of power to grapple with his subject...Although he has nothing new to say of Steele, he might have put together in one volume all that is important, of what has been said of, or by, 'poor Dick,' and he might at least have drawn some new inferences from old evidence, the bearing of which has escaped the observation of other writers. But Mr. Montgomery had a pair of panniers to fill, and he has cared for nothing but the filling of them." Athenæum, 1865.

Bound with his "Sartor resartus."

Sterling (1806–44) was an English author, a personal friend of Carlyle.

"Carlyle wished to exhibit him as raised above the turbid sphere of contemporary controversy. The result was a book so calm, tender, and affectionate as to be in singular contrast with his recent utterances and to be perhaps his most successful piece of literary work." Dictionary of national biography.

"What Carlyle with wonderful art has done is to...lead us to believe that we are reading a life of Sterling, while Sterling is really 'vanished' and we are actually reading an extraordinarily interesting history of the places that he lived in, the men he knew...and the personality of his redoubtable and admirable friend and biographer, all thrown up on a background of the shortcomings of church and state of England in the 19th century." Saintsbury's Essays in English literature.

Fitzgerald, Percy. Life of Laurence Sterne. 2v. 1896 .... 92 S839f

"He [Sterne] is fortunate in finding a biographer who does him justice without wronging the public by a paradoxical defence of his behavior. Mr. Fitzgerald's book, in its supplemented and reconsidered form, will doubtless remain the standard life of witty and volatile Shandy." Nation, 1896.

Traill, Henry Duff. Sterne. [1882.] (English men of letters.) 92 S839t

"Brilliantly written and picturesque. He has drawn copiously from Mr. Fitzgerald's 'Life of Sterne,' no doubt, but then he has not followed the time-honoured precedent in such cases of abusing the source from which he draws...It is in the more difficult portions of his task, in his remarks upon Sterne as a humourist, that Mr. Traill proves himself to be a critic of insight as well as a writer of brilliance." Athenæum, 1882.

German-American soldier (1730–94), who served in the Revolution.

"Family papers, letters, documents from Germany, France, England... were liberally placed at his disposal. To make his story perfect, Mr. Kapp only required to consult the state archives at Washington, but there he was 'ignominiously repulsed'...Despite this opposition...[he] has accomplished his task satisfactorily." Littell's living age, 1860.

STEVENS, Thaddeus.

Callender, E. B. Thaddeus Stevens, commoner. 1882.....92 S846c

"In no sense a biography, but consists of sketches of the more important incidents in the life of Stevens. It does not merit much consideration, since the publication of the biography by McCall. Stevens did not enter Congress until 1849, when he was 57 years old. During the Civil War he was Chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means. He represented the type of uncompromising hostility to the leaders of the southern rebellion during the early period of reconstruction." Larned's Literature of American history.

"One of those parliamentary leaders who are peculiarly identified with the policy and the legislation of a critical time...Mr. McCall's limitations in space have made a current sketch of this history all that was possible for him; but he has given it with fair accuracy of drawing, very properly making it his task to present the personality of Mr. Stevens rather than a full discussion of measures, or an estimate of the men with whom he acted and the reasons for his leadership." Larned's Literature of American history.

STEVENSON, Robert Louis.

Letters to his family and friends; ed. with notes and introduction by Sidney Colvin. 2v. 1899.....92 S848l

"The shelf of our library that contains our best letter-writers is considerably furnished, but not overcrowded; and its glory is not too great to keep Stevenson from there finding a place with the very first... He never fails of the thing that we most love letters for, the full expression of the moment and the mood...the thing in his head, his heart or his house...The ego does, magnificently, shine—which is much the best thing that, in any correspondence, it can ever do... The impression, for the reader of the later letters, is...one of singular beauty—of deepening talent, of happier and richer expression, and, above all, of a sort of ironic, desperate gallantry, burning away, with a finer and finer fire, in a strange, alien air." Henry James, in North American review, 1900.

Stevensoniana; a reprint of various literary and pictorial miscellany associated with Robert Louis Stevenson, the man and his work. 1900.....92 S848st

Medley of fragments by and about Stevenson. Includes a short article by Stevenson entitled "Books which have influenced me," a sketch of Mrs Stevenson, one about Stevenson's love of music, an account of a visit to Stevenson's Pacific isle, a review of his later "Letters" by S. R. Crockett, and some short paragraphs of appreciation and homage by various writers.

Vailima letters; being correspondence addressed to Sidney Colvin. 2v. 1895.....92 S848v2

The same. 1896.....92 S848v

These letters extending from Nov. 1890 to Oct. 1894, were written to Mr Sidney Colvin with the idea of giving him and Mr Stevenson's other friends in England full and regular account of his life in the new world in which his health obliged him to live. Begun without a thought of publication, he put into them so much of his life and thought that finally, in June 1892, it occurred to him that "some kind of a book" might be made of them after his death, and upon this suggestion Mr Colvin has acted; but after, as before, that date there is not the slightest suggestion in Mr Stevenson's manner that he was writing for an audience of more than one. The interest of these letters is manifold. Unconsciously they reveal the author's personality, they tell of his thoughts, his interests, his pleasures in his South sea home, and, by no means least, they contain a full record of his literary work during this period.

"They unite the exotic interest of a book of travels with the record of a literary life, and in both these phases present the self-painted portrait of a man of genius, who for a brief space exercised a larger personal sway than any other literary worker of his generation." Nation, 1896.

"Sympathetic it is undoubtedly, and it possesses the negative virtue of avoiding that conscientious malevolence which...has decried the life and work of Edgar Poe. But here its merits end. "It is in the spirit of semi-idolatry which the brave spirit and wayward charm of Stevenson the man roused in many who knew him, that this book is written...In spite of all this, it gives a pleasant notion of Stevenson's parents, his nurse, to whom his life-long devotion was most creditable, and himself." Nation, 1899.

Autobiography of a journalist. 2v. 1901 ..... 92 S857

Appeared in an abridged form in the "Atlantic monthly," v.85, 1900.

"Mr. Stillman's account of his early ventures in journalism...in political conspiracy (he became associated with Kossuth in 1852 and went to Europe on a secret mission for him), in 'roughing it' in the Adirondack wilderness, is followed by the charming episode of the 'Adirondack Club'—one of the richest chapters in the book...Mr. Stillman was consul at Rome in the early sixties, and...deals very frankly with the then moral and political condition of the papal city...Second volume is devoted mainly to his consular experiences in Crete, and his adventures in the Balkan countries and the Levant...as foreign correspondent of the 'Times' and other newspapers...Eastern questions, and Greek and Italian politics and politicians are interestingly discussed." Dial, 1901.

English statesman (1593–1641).

"Well-written sketch of 'the historical representative of the Absolutist cause.' Mr. Traill maintains successfully the theory of Wentworth's apostacy from the parliamentary party." Dial, 1890.

STRATFORD de REDCLIFFE, Stratford Canning, viscount.

Poole, Stanley Lane-. Life of Lord Stratford de Redcliffe. 1890. .....92 S898p

Lord Stratford de Redcliffe (1786–1880) was eminent in the English diplomatic service during his long public career, but his most distinguished and valuable service was at Constantinople, where he was minister at different times from 1810 to 1858.

Condensed from the edition in two volumes published in 1888, chiefly by the omission of the longer dispatches and memoranda.

"Never before, or since, has a Christian exercised such a sway or held such a place as he did in the Moslem Empire, and his iron rule, as it is [here] described...leaves a powerful impression of his strength, resolution, sagacity, and lofty conception of his duties." Spectator, 1888.

The same. 1891. (In Ruthven's Murder of Rizzio.).....r941 R93

The Young Pretender was leader of the insurrection for the recovery of the British crown for his father. He was defeated at the battle of Culloden moor (1746).

Lang, Andrew. Companions of Pickle; a sequel to "Pickle the spy." 1898.....92 S929la

Studies of persons connected with Prince Charles and the Jacobite movement of 1745, with further evidence to prove the identity of Pickle and Alastair Ruadh Macdonnell of Glengarry.

Lang, Andrew. Pickle the spy; or, The incognito of Prince Charles. 1897.....92 S929l

The subject of the book is the mysterious disappearance of Prince Charles from 1749 to 1766. Author seeks to identify Pickle the spy with Alastair Ruadh Macdonnell of Glengarry.

"It is of supreme importance as dealing a fatal blow—and one driven home with great ability and Voltairean decision—to British belief in the Young Pretender, and the nobility of the Jacobite chiefs." Spectator, 1897.

Lang, Andrew. Prince Charles Edward. 1900.....qr92 S929l
"Mr. Lang has never been more happily inspired than in this study of the...last conspicuous Prince of an ill-fated house, and the centre of a movement which he did not understand [Jacobitism]. He has invested the whole narrative, splendid and sordid, with an unreal, fairy tale atmosphere, which is the true one." Spectator, 1900.
The make-up of the book is unusually good, with many portraits.

STUART, Gilbert Charles. See Artists, p.1251.

STUART, Lady Louisa.

Tuckerman, Bayard. Peter Stuyvesant. 1893. (Makers of America.) 92 S938t
"Useful and well-written account of the life of Stuyvesant and of the history of New Netherland during the last twenty years of its existence. The book also contains, in an introductory chapter, a sketch of the origin of the province and of its progress previous to the beginning of Stuyvesant's administration...One chapter contains a compact and valuable account of the topography and social condition of New Amsterdam just before the English conquests." Larned's Literature of American history.

"Complete list of Sir Arthur Sullivan's work, compiled by Wilfrid Bendall," p.329–340.
Sketch of the well-known composer of "The Mikado" and "Pinafore."
"Put together by Mr. Arthur Lawrence, but with much aid, apparently, from Sir Arthur himself—in fact, the volume is a notable specimen of what may be called 'biography by interview.' " Academy, 1899.

SUMNER, Charles.

Dawes, Anna Laurens. Charles Sumner. 1892. (Makers of America.).....92 S956d
Somewhat unsympathetic, but carefully prepared and admirably written.
"Interesting and well written book devoted chiefly to the public career of Sumner, but giving a good portrayal of his personal and social characteristics...The author is strongly in sympathy with the anti-slavery cause but does not indulge in indiscriminate praise of Sumner." Larned's Literature of American history.

Pierce, Edward Lillie. Memoir and letters of Charles Sumner. v.1–2. 1877.....r92 S956p
"For the rise of the slavery issue, the legislation of the period of Civil War and Reconstruction, and the history of the foreign relations of the United States from 1861 to 1871, this work is almost indispensable. Mr. Pierce was a lifelong friend of Sumner, and has edited his letters with the greatest care. The accompanying memoir is remarkably fair and judicious. The first two volumes are more important for the intellectual and social history of New England than for national history." Larned's Literature of American history.

Storey, Moorfield. Charles Sumner. 1900. (American statesmen.) 92 S956s

The same. 1900. (American statesmen.) r92 S956s

"There was, in truth, no chance for Mr. Storey to display originality in research...but there was a rare opportunity to rearrange the topics and the colors and to analyze Sumner's impressive character. The opportunity has been improved to a considerable degree, but...the book lacks vivacity and a literary touch." Nation, 1900.

SUNDERLAND, Dorothy Sidney, countess of.

Cartwright, Julia Mary, afterward Mrs Ady. Sacharissa; some account of Dorothy Sidney, countess of Sunderland, her family and friends, 1617–1684. 1893 ..... 92 S958c

The subject of this biography is the beautiful Dorothy Sidney immortalized by the poet Waller and the artist Van Dyck, and of whom Steele wrote in the Tatler, "The fine women nowadays are at best but pretty girls to me who have seen Sacharissa, when all the world repeated the poems she inspired." She was the daughter of Robert, earl of Leicester, the sister of Algernon Sidney and of Henry Sidney, earl of Romney, while the famous George Savile (Lord Halifax) was her son-in-law. Her life was a meeting point of so many distinguished men and women and was so identified with the society and politics of her time that it serves well as the centre of a narrative like this.

SWIFT, Jonathan, dean.

Unpublished letters; ed. by G. B. Hill. 1899 ..... 92 S977

The same. 1899 ..... r92 S977

These letters were written between 1714 and 1731 to an Anglo-Irish squire, Knightley Chetwode, and are mostly occupied with Chetwode's own private affairs, though they settle one or two doubtful points concerning Swift's work. Dr Hill's notes are all helpful to readers unacquainted with Swift, and some of his information is not elsewhere accessible. Illustrated.

Craik, Sir Henry. Life of Jonathan Swift. 2v. 1894 ..... 92 S977c

"The first attempt in our own times to give to the public a finished biography of the satirist [1667–1745] who exercised such strange power over his contemporaries...The biographer evidently writes with a strong sympathy for his subject, but he rarely allows himself to become a mere partisan...It is to be regretted that his style is somewhat monotonous and wanting in vivacity...But the work shows much industry and research, and in some instances the author has been fortunate enough to gain access to documents which have hitherto been either unknown or overlooked." Athenæum, 1883.

Stephen, Sir Leslie. Swift. [1882.] (English men of letters.) 92 S977s

"Perhaps, too much space is devoted, in this brief biography, to the part played by Swift as a politician; and yet we scarcely like to hint at a fault in this direction, for nowhere have we met with an account of Swift's public career so concise and so comprehensive. That the little volume should be entirely satisfactory to the student of the period is impossible, for Mr. Stephen has been forced to write, as it were, in shorthand, but the general reader will gain all that he is likely to ask for from this admirably-written narrative." Spectator, 1882.

SWING, David.

Trial of David Swing before the presbytery of Chicago; ed. by a committee of the presbytery. 1874 ..... r92 S978

"The fullest biography yet written [1900] of this famous seventeenth-century physician." Academy, 1900.

SYMONDS, John Addington.

Brown, Horatio Robert Forbes. John Addington Symonds; a biography compiled from his papers and correspondence. 2v. 1895 ..... 92 S988b

"One who of all the men of our generation best knew, loved, and understood the Italian genius in literature." Frederic Harrison.

"Symonds was one of the most lovable of men: brave in his outlook, courageous in the face of adverse and often disastrous circumstances, youthfully enthusiastic...generous, a nature of sweet human sunshine ...He was a scholar in the best sense of the word: a man of catholic culture. There has, in our time, been no mind more sensitive to beauty." William Sharp, in Academy, 1895.

Mr Brown, whom Mr Symonds asked to be his literary executor, has very wisely supplemented Mr Symonds's autobiography by many letters and extracts from diaries and note books, and has been unusually successful in putting these together into a consecutive narrative.

These memoirs of the celebrated French statesman and diplomat (1754–1838) according to his directions were first published 50 years after his death.

"The most experienced and sagacious of men discourses about certain selected events that concerned him, and passes sentence on two generations of contemporaries...Nothing could increase the lustre of the talents which he is known...to have displayed...but we are made to know him better; and all that he says and much that he conceals brings into vivid light one of the wonders of modern politics." Lord Acton, in Nineteenth century, 1891.

Bibliography of Taylor's works, p.299–307.

"Mr. Smyth has drawn his materials for this book mainly from the full biography of Taylor which was made soon after his death by his wife and Mr. Horace E. Scudder...The...letters...are quoted freely... and the writer has availed himself of Mrs. Taylor's manuscript collections and of the letters and reminiscences of many friends...Mr. Smyth has spent more of his strength upon the man's personality and the circumstances of his wide experience than on the criticism of his work." Nation, 1896.

Taylor, Mrs Marie (Hansen), & Scudder, H. E. Life and letters of Bayard Taylor. 2v. 1885 ..... 92 T251t

The story of the life of the well-known author and traveler (1825–78) is told largely in his letters.

"The work has been done not only with affection, but with judgment and good taste. The result is a finished and accurate picture of a most attractive subject." Atlantic monthly, 1880.

TAYLOR, Sir Henry.

Autobiography, 1800–1875. 2v. 1885 ..... 92 T253

Sir Henry Taylor is perhaps best known as the author of the drama,

"Philip Van Artevelde," but he also wrote other plays, was a warm friend of Southey and well known to many leading men of letters.

Horton, Robert Forman. Alfred Tennyson; a saintly life. 1900. .....92 T295h

"We do not think that it is judicious to attempt any change in the established connotation of the word 'saint.' So much we feel bound to say, but we have no fault to find with the general tone and temper of Dr. Horton's book. It is a very able criticism of the poet's life and work, and sets forth appreciatively, but without exaggeration, his great service to human faith and morals." Spectator, 1900.

Lang, Andrew. Alfred Tennyson. 1901. (Modern English writers.).....92 T295l

The material for the biography is taken from the life of the poet by his son, but that part is very short, and the chief value of the work lies in its impartial, yet sympathetic criticism of the poetry.

Rawnsley, Hardwicke Drummond. Memories of the Tennysons. 1900.....92 T295r

"The Rawnsleys for two generations were born and bred in the region where Tennyson received his first impressions, among the scenes so often celebrated in his poems...There are...chapters...on the poet's funeral, on 'Virgil and Tennyson,' and on Charles Tennyson Turner... The sixteen illustrations are mostly unfamiliar, and add to the interest of the book." Nation, 1901.

Tennyson, Hallam, lord. Alfred, lord Tennyson; a memoir. 2v. 1897.....92 T295t

"He enables us to look behind the curtain, to see the artist at work, and it is this which raises the biography to a rank in the first order of such writing...It is a record, so full as perhaps has never before been given to the world, of the growth and progress of the mind of a great imaginative artist." Edmund Gosse, in North American review, 1897.

Waugh, Arthur. Alfred, lord Tennyson; a study of his life and work. 1896.....92 T295w

"It is scholarly and unhysterical; the narrative part is a remarkably full and careful cento taken from the journals, memoirs and correspondence of the age, arranged in excellent taste, and the criticism, if sometimes a little...timid, is sound and wholesome...A valuable feature of Mr. Waugh's book is the prominence it gives to a consideration of the plays." Saturday review, 1892.

TERRY, Ellen.

Hiatt, Charles. Ellen Terry and her impersonations; an appreciation. 1898.....92 T315h

Scott, Clement William. Ellen Terry. 1900.....92 T315s

"The main incidents in the career of this charming actress are duly set down, with note of time and place, but the book is full of irrelevant padding...and has a minimum of literary or critical value." Nation, 1900.

THACKERAY, William Makepeace.

Collection of letters of Thackeray, 1847–1855. 1889.....92 T333

Nearly all of these letters were written by Thackeray to his friends the Brookfields.

"The collection covers eight years of Thackeray's mature life. It is composed of every-day notes, written from the club or his lodgings about the things of the hour; or of longer letters of travel, sent from some watering-place on the continent, or some country retreat in England, or from Paris...They are for the most part entirely personal, and describe what happened to himself, or confide the moods that visited him; and, too, they are especially the letters of a novelist,—the world that he sees is the very same that he writes about." Atlantic monthly, 1887.

Melville, Lewis. Life of William Makepeace Thackeray. 2v. 1899.....92 T333me

Bibliography, v.2, p.297–345.

"Scissors and paste have very literally achieved all that scissors and paste can achieve...It may be conceded...that Mr. Melville has produced a most readable and amusing book...but...to the higher qualifications of the biographer he has no pretention...No good biography was ever produced by a mere compiler." Saturday review, 1899.

Merivale, Herman, & Marzials, Sir F. T. Life of W. M. Thackeray. 1891. (Great writers.).....92 T333m

Bibliography, by J. P. Anderson, apx. p.1–23.

Begun by Merivale, who was a personal friend of Thackeray, but who had to give up the work on account of ill health, the biography was continued by Marzials. The result is not altogether happy, although there are some excellent descriptions of the novelist and an interesting chapter on Thackeray's friendships.

Trollope, Anthony. Thackeray. 1892. (English men of letters.) 92 T333t

THAW, William.

In memoriam William Thaw. [Anonymous.] 1891.....r92 T338i

Resolutions, extracts from newspapers and account of the funeral services of one of Pittsburgh's most prominent and charitable citizens (1818–89).

THAXTER, Mrs Celia (Laighton).

Letters. 1896.....92 T339

Written from 1856 to 1894.

"In the faith that she was a woman of radiant nature, they [the editors] have shown her almost exclusively from the side of her affections. Incidentally, of course, the reader gets glimpses of her relation to wider interests in the world of thought and action, but for the most part the narrative is one of the affectionate duties and interests of Celia Thaxter as wife, mother, daughter, and friend." Nation, 1895.

Gilman, Mrs Mary Rebecca (Foster). Saint Theresa of Avila. 1889. (Famous women.) 92 T351g

List of authorities, p.11–12.

Sketch of the famous Spanish saint and author, whom the author wishes to put before us as a "living, breathing human being, with feelings and foibles like our own."

THIERS, Adolphe.

Rémusat, Paul de. Thiers; tr. by M. B. Anderson. 1889. (Great French writers.) 92 T363r Begins with the restoration, when Thiers first came into prominence, and deals principally with his public life from that time to his death, in 1877.

THOMAS à BECKET, St.

Abbott, Edwin Abbott. St. Thomas of Canterbury; his death and miracles. 2v. 1898. . . . . 92 T3731a

"The work falls into two parts. In the first, Dr. Abbott compares, incident by incident, the various narratives of the martyrdom given by St. Thomas's biographers...with the object not merely of ascertaining the facts, but also of determining the relative value, as a witness, of each ...and of establishing the causes on which that value depends...The second part...deals with the miracles wrought upon believers in the martyr, which began immediately upon his death." Academy, 1898.

Milman, Henry Hart. Life of Thomas à Becket. 1860. . 92 T3731m

"The biography here presented has been taken from Dean Milman's great history of Latin Christianity." Preface.

Thompson, Robert Anchor. Thomas Becket; martyr, patriot. 1889. . . . . 92 T3731t

Mr Thompson seeks to prove that Thomas à Becket did not seek ecclesiastical privileges to gratify personal ambition, but in order to better resist the tyranny of the English crown.

THOMAS AQUINAS, St.

Vaughan, Roger William Bede, abp. Life and labours of Saint Thomas of Aquin; abridged and ed. by Jerome Vaughan. 1890. . . . . 92 T3732v Eminent scholastic teacher of the 13th century. He was the author of numerous works, theological, moral and metaphysical.

"The best account of the life of St. Thomas Aquinas and his times it has been our good fortune to peruse in English or in any other language." Athenæum, 1872.

THOMAS, Gen. George Henry.

Coppée, Henry. General Thomas. 1893. (Great commanders.) 92 T373c

American general (1816–70), who won distinction in the Mexican war and later in the Civil war, on the Union side.

"He has found it easy to eulogize his hero without vilifying others... The author's characterizations of Gen. Thomas are happy, both in the development of the man in the earlier chapters, and in the summary near the end of the book. The military preëminence which is attributed to him over all his contemporaries will not be accepted as the final verdict." Nation, 1894.

Van Horne, Thomas Budd. Life of General George H. Thomas. 1882.....92 T373v

"The author has probably injured General Thomas, rather than honored him, by his ill-advised attempt to clear him of the charge of slowness at Nashville...He has not carefully analyzed the situation, but has gathered a formidable number of criticisms and suspicions and has failed to refute them. Instead...he has contented himself with sweeping assertions, with condemning the military plans of every officer to whom Thomas was subordinate, and with depreciating the services of other commanders." Larned's Literature of American history.

THOMSON, Charles.

Harley, Lewis Reifsneider. Life of Charles Thomson, secretary of the Continental congress and translator of the Bible from the Greek. 1900.....92 T3872h

Bibliography, p.215–235.

An enlargement of a short monograph originally prepared for the Historical society of Montgomery county (Pa.). Thomson was elected secretary of the Continental congress in 1774 and retained the position till 1789. He had great influence, and was called "the soul of that political body." His translation of the Bible contained the first English version of the Septuagint that had been published at that time and was considered a great credit to American scholarship.

THOMSON, James, 1700–48.

Bayne, William. James Thomson. 1898. (Famous Scots series.) 92 T389b

Baird, William, F. S. A. Scot. John Thomson of Duddingston, pastor and painter; a memoir, with a catalogue of his paintings and a critical review of his works. 1895..qr92 T387b

Thomson was a minister of the Church of Scotland and a pioneer in Scottish landscape art. This biography has been gleaned from contemporary literature, the personal reminiscences of relatives and old parishioners, and the church records of presbytery and parish. Numerous photogravure reproductions of his paintings are included.

THOMSON, Joseph.

Thomson, James Baird. Joseph Thomson, African explorer. 1896.....92 T387t

"Joseph Thomson ranks next to Livingstone and Stanley among African travellers, not merely because of the magnitude and importance of his explorations, or of his extraordinary capacity as a leader, but also because of his singularly wise treatment of the natives." Nation, 1897.

THOREAU, Henry David.

Familiar letters; ed. by F. B. Sanborn. 1896.....92 T395

The same. 1896.....r92 T395

"Includes apparently all the letters in Emerson's edition of 1865...Mr. Sanborn's additional matter is of two kinds—letters of Thoreau's not hitherto published in a book, and a good deal of editorial matter, rich in personal recollection and the fruit of much research...Moreover,

Mr. Sanborn has made good his purpose in undertaking a new collection, namely, to show Thoreau in a less aloof and stoical aspect than Emerson deliberately singled out." Nation, 1894.

Channing, William Ellery, 1818–1901. Thoreau, the poet-naturalist. 1873.....r92 T395c

The same; ed. by F. B. Sanborn. 1902.....92 T395c

"Mr. Channing's self-revelation is not the least valuable part of it. His thought and style are often wilfully eccentric and obscure, but there is more than enough of excellent matter, original and quoted, to condone every fault. Nothing else written about Thoreau comes so close to his life and mind as this delightful and exasperating incoherency." Nation, 1902.

"His book consists of materials for a life rather than a life, being chiefly extracts from Thring's diary, often with no connecting link to elucidate the progress of events, and no explanations of things and persons mentioned." Athenæum, 1898.

TICKNOR, George.

Life, letters and journals. 2v. 1876.....92 T441

"Mr. Ticknor was the most marked type of the American man of letters and society of the first half of this century, as distinguished from the mere scholar or author...The pages of Mr. Ticknor's 'Diary and Letters' are full of anecdotes and narratives of conversation, of descriptions of remarkable men and women, and of unusual personal experience, which are so fresh and entertaining, so well told, and so illustrative of social habits as to form a contribution of no slight value to our knowledge of the life of the times." Nation, 1876.

Statesman and lawyer (1814–86). He was Democratic governor of New York, 1875–76 and Democratic candidate for president in 1876.

"Every student of politics or political history, every one who believes that political ideals and institutions practically and enormously affect the welfare of men, will find these volumes interesting...Adverse testimony...is not set very fully and frankly before the reader; but the material is sufficiently given for tolerably just estimate of a political career of high rank." American historical review, 1895.

The result is a clear and impartial narrative of a remarkably troublous time, both for the natives of Southern India and for the English settlement at Madras." Athenæum, 1894.

TITIAN. See Artists, p.1283.

TOLSTOÏ, Lyof Nikolaïevitch, count.

Maude, Aylmer. Tolstoy and his problems; essays. 1901..92 T588m

Contents: Leo Tolstoy.—Talks with Tolstoy.—"What is art?"—How Tolstoy wrote "Resurrection."—Introduction to "The slavery of our times."—After the tsar's coronation.—Right and wrong.—War and patriotism.—The Doukhobórs; a Russian exodus.

"Mr. Maude is a disciple of Tolstoi...As an interpreter he is excellent, and his earlier chapters have real value in establishing exactly what Tolstoi has meant by his religious speculations and his moral reforms." Saturday review, 1901.

Perris, George Herbert. Leo Tolstoy, the Grand Mujik; a study in personal evolution. 1898.....92 T588p

List of Tolstoï's works, p.231–234.

Discusses Tolstoï's views on religion, art and the social question.

Sergyeenko, P. A. How Count L. N. Tolstoy lives and works; tr. fr. the Russian by I. F. Hapgood. 1899.....92 T588s

The Russian authorities forbade any demonstration on the occasion of Count Tolstoï's 70th anniversary. The only public notice of the event was the appearance of these desultory descriptions of Tolstoï's daily life. The writer first met the great Russian author in 1892, but has come into very intimate relations with him. Many items of interest are told about the vegetarian life led by Tolstoï and his eldest daughter, and the more conventional life of Countess Tolstoï and her other children.

TOOMBS, Robert.

Stovall, Pleasant Alexander. Robert Toombs, statesman, speaker, soldier, sage; his career in Congress and on the hustings, his work in the courts, his record with the army, his life at home. 1892.....92 T622s

Although the author is in open sympathy with Toombs in all that he did to further secession, to help on the Rebellion and in his unending opposition to the United States government, he has no recrimination for the North, no disparagement for the Union party.

TOURZEL, Louise Elizabeth Félicité (de Croy d'Havre), marquise de.

Memoirs. 2v. 1886.....92 T653

The duchess de Tourzel, who was governess to the children of Louis XVI from 1789 to 1795, draws a vivid picture of the life of the royal family of France through the most stirring scenes of the revolution. The most important events are narrated in full detail, and with this narrative we have a history of the time.

TRELAWNY, Edward John.

Adventures of a younger son. 1891. (Adventure series.)..92 T718

A narrative based partly upon Trelawny's life and partly drawn from his imagination. Trelawny (1792–1881) was an Englishman, the friend of Byron and Shelley; he fought with the former in Greece, and wrote one of the most widely read volumes about these famous men, "Records of Shelley, Byron, and the author."

TROLLOPE, Anthony.

Autobiography. 1883.....92 T761

"It will not be so much my intention to speak of the little details of my private life, as of what I, and perhaps others round me, have done in literature; of my failures and successes such as they have been, and their causes; and of the opening which a literary career offers to men and women for the earning of their bread." Author.

TRUMBULL, John, 1756–1843.

Autobiography, reminiscences and letters, from 1756 to 1841. 1841.....92 T7812

John Trumbull, son of Jonathan Trumbull, governor of Connecticut, served in the Revolution, studied painting under West in London, painted portraits of Washington, Adams, Jefferson, and others, and various pictures of Revolutionary scenes, some of which are in the Capitol at Washington. A collection of his paintings known as the "Trumbull gallery" is in the possession of Yale university. It contains a series of historical pictures commemorative of important events of the Revolution and is one of the chief treasures of the university.

Weir, John Ferguson. John Trumbull; a brief sketch of his life, to which is added a catalogue of his works. 1901.....q92 T7812w

Bibliographical note, p.6–7.

TRUMBULL, Jonathan.

Stuart, Isaac William. Life of Jonathan Trumbull, governor of Connecticut. 1859.....92 T781s

Trumbull was governor of Connecticut, 1769–83.

"This work, though marred by serious defects, is possessed of many merits. It is based on reliable data, consisting of information furnished by papers, memoirs, and the like...Though flattering to Trumbull, it is not excessively so, and it is the only biography that has been written of a man whose career deserves greater recognition...The material, valuable and important as much of it is, is neither well sifted nor well arranged." Larned's Literature of American history.

TSCHAIKOWSKY, Peter Ilyitch.

TURGÉNIEF, Ivan Sergevitch.

Tourguéneff and his French circle; ed. by E. Halperine-Kaminsky. 1898.....92 T855

Consists of letters "written for the most part to his intimate friends among that group of remarkable Frenchmen who made Paris what it was in the fifties and sixties."

TURGOT, Anne Robert Jacques.

Say, Léon. Turgot; tr. by M. B. Anderson. 1888. (Great French writers.).....92 T856s

Note upon Turgot's works, p.7–8.

Noted French statesman and financier (1727–81).

"In default of the possibility of lively narrative he has, very excusably, diverged a little into accounts of other political economists of Turgot's day, and his book is thus a treatise in little on those questions...which agitated France so much in the middle of the eighteenth century." Athenæum, 1888.

TURNER, Joseph Mallord William.

Hamerton, Philip Gilbert. Life of J. M. W. Turner. 1889..92 T865h

"As biography the 'Life of Turner' is meagre, because Turner furnished no materials for biography and left no letters or journals...But so far as the artist is concerned Mr. Hamerton has given a sober, full, and invaluable analysis of what we most want to know of him, which is at the same time one of the most valuable pieces of aesthetic writing that English literature has produced." Nation, 1879.

Willcock, John. Sir Thomas Urquhart of Cromartie, knight. 1899.....92 U276w

Scottish royalist and author (1611–60), known by his translation of Rabelais (1653).

"The first, and probably the final, life of the chief translator of Rabelais ...Seems practically flawless." Athenæum, 1899.

URSINS, Marie Anne (de la Trémoille), princesse des.

Hill, Constance. Story of the princess des Ursins in Spain. 1899.....92 U277h

Works consulted, p.18–19.

In 1700, after the death of Charles II of Spain, the grandson of Louis XIV of France was called to the Spanish throne under the title of Philip V. He was but 17 years old, and his queen, Maria Louise of Savoy, but 13. The youth of the couple rendered it necessary that they should have a friend and adviser, and the princess des Ursins, a Frenchwoman of noble birth and of great tact and intelligence, was chosen for this position, though nominally the camarera-mayor, or superintendent of the queen's household. For 12 years during the turmoil and chaos of the wars of the Spanish succession her power was almost absolute. Her life was full of contrasts and is of unusual interest.

Narrative of General Venables, with an appendix of papers relating to the expedition to the West Indies and the conquest of Jamaica, 1654–1655; ed. by C. H. Firth. 1900. .....r92 V258

English officer sent in 1654 to attack the Spaniards in the West Indies, where he succeeded in getting a foothold in Jamaica. Owing to his failure in Hispaniola, he was imprisoned on his return, but released on condition of surrendering his general's commission and his command in Ireland. Object of the narrative is to vindicate the reputation of Venables as a general and to prove that the disasters which befell the expedition under his command were due to the fault of others.

Markham, Sir Clements Robert. "The fighting Veres;" lives of Sir Francis Vere and of Sir Horace Vere. 1888. .....92 V2712m

Authorities, p.464–471.

"It is a merit in Mr. Markham's book that he makes us see the men in action, and also that he brings a trained eye to the description of topography, of districts, cities, and fortifications, the stages on which they played their manful parts. From his written sketches, aided by capital maps and plans, the reader may get a fair idea of Holland as it is, as well as...Holland as it was." Spectator, 1888.

VICTOR EMMANUEL II, king of Italy.

Dicey, Edward. Victor Emmanuel. (Makers of history.)..92 V311d
Not so much a life of the king as a history of the events which combined to form a united Italy.

Godkin, Georgina Sarah. Life of Victor Emmanuel II, first king of Italy. 1880.....92 V311g "Not a profound, but an interesting, work. It is devoted primarily to the personal life and character of the king; but incidentally it shows the course and significance of those events which placed the king on the Italian throne. Many anecdotes are related which give charming glimpses of the king's character." C. K. Adams.

Picture of the busy home life and active political interests of the queen.

Holmes, Richard Rivington. Queen Victoria. 1897....qr92 V312h

The same, 1819–1901. 1901.....92 V312ho
As librarian of Windsor castle the author had special opportunities for obtaining the information here presented. Many of the facts concerning the childhood and youth of the queen were furnished by Her Majesty, and the memoir is altogether more concerned with private than public events. The book is illustrated with a large number of views of buildings and landscapes, and with portraits taken from the royal collections.
The new edition is in smaller form without illustrations. A supplementary chapter brings the biography down to the queen's death.

Humphrey, Frank Pope. The queen at Balmoral. 1893..92 V312h

Oliphant, Mrs Margaret Oliphant (Wilson). Queen Victoria; a personal sketch. 1900.....92 V312o Pleasantly written sketch of Queen Victoria's private life, full of anecdotes showing her tact, kindliness and real character from her earliest childhood. Many interesting illustrations.

Private life of the queen, by one of Her Majesty's servants.

1897. .....92 V312p

Gives in the greatest detail descriptions of the queen's private houses, Osborne and Balmoral, the routine of her private life, what she eats and drinks, what she spends and how, and tells of the queen as housekeeper, as hostess, as writer and musician.

Smith, George Barnett. Life of Queen Victoria, 1819–1897. 1897. .....92 V312s

Appeared first at the time of the queen's jubilee in 1887 and is brought down to 1897 by the addition of a few brief chapters. Gives full details in regard to the public appearance of royalty.

"The purpose of the following Essays is to study the strong, true and universal ideas the French Revolution took for its law, not in connection with that event, but in their relationship to what is called 'the modern spirit.'" Preface.

Morley, John. Voltaire. 1891.....92 V378m

"This is hardly a life of Voltaire, as that word is generally understood ...It is rather a presentation of Voltaire on the supposition that we are already familiar with the main incidents of his life, and a discussion of his influence and various views...It is full of eloquent defence of Voltaire, as well as of critical estimate of his position...We commend this book for its earnestness, its impartiality of aim, and its freedom from ill-temper and fanaticism." North American review, 1872.

Parton, James. Life of Voltaire. 2v. 1889.....92 V378p

"Genuine life of Voltaire, and not a critique upon...[his] life and character. In this respect it differs entirely from the works of Strauss and of Morley...He of course must incidentally comment upon Voltaire's position and teaching...but his real object is not to tell his readers what Mr. Parton thinks about Voltaire, but to give them full, complete, ample details as to what Voltaire himself did, wrote, spoke and thought during the course of a long existence." Nation, 1881.

WAGNER, Richard.

Letters to Wesendonck et al.; tr. by W. A. Ellis. 1899....92 W134l

Contents: To Wesendonck.—To Malwida von Meysenbug.—To Frau Elisa Wille.

"The letters forming the first group in this little collection were addressed to a friend whose acquaintance he had made at Zurich in 1852, and with whom and his wife he remained on terms of cordial friendship until his death...Had it not been for Herr Otto Wesendonck's assistance during a long crisis in Wagner's financial position, it is hard to conceive how the artist could have survived to compose his later works." Preface.

"In no other respect is his book more impressive and affecting than in that of his complete identification of himself with his people...The vicissitudes and achievements of the Tuskegee School are exhibited in a series of pictures and contrasts that must sometimes make the reader's heart beat fast and sometimes dim his eyes...Mr. Washington has had successes that would turn the head of many a white man, but his own is right side up. It is kept so by the balance of a heart devoted to the elevation of his race." Nation, 1901.

WASHINGTON, George.

Daily journal in 1751–2, kept while on a tour from Virginia to the island of Barbadoes; ed. by J. M. Toner. 1892..r92 W272d

With autograph letter by J. M. Toner.

Major Lawrence Washington was compelled through ill health to spend a winter in the tropics. His brother George was his companion. The original journal kept by the latter is in a very fragmentary and mutilated condition, this being probably the most successful reprint that can be made. Every letter and word discernible has been faithfully and literally copied.
